[The writer of the above lines has been a reader and helper of Lucifer and its work for at least eighteen years, and hence has well earned the right to an occasional word of commendation or reproof in its columns. M. H.]

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. Price, 25 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, will be sent free for thirteen weeks with each order for "The Prodigal Daughter." Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Health Hints and ready recipes. Dr. E. B. Foote's time-tried handbook, comprising information of the utmost importance to everybody, concerning their daily habits, together with many useful suggestions for the management of various diseases; recipes for relief of common ailments, including some of the private formula of Dr. Foote, and directions for preparation of delicacies for invalids as pursued in the best hospitals of this country and Europe. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

ELMINA'S REQUEST. Women who would like gentlemen for correspondents and who feel free to discuss all reforms, will send name and address and two two-cent stamps to ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER Snowville Pulaski Co, Va.

Lucifer is Sold By:

W. L. Sinton, room 10, 70 Dearborn St., Chicago.
N. N. Winnegar, 642 Washington St. Boston.
Warren, 527 Central Ave., Cincinnati.
Henry Bauer, 173 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheny, Pa.
Geo. E. Frye, Halifax, N. S., 109 Hollis St.,
Henry Heyne, 15th and Market, Phila. Pa.
E. C. Walker, 244, 1456 St. New York.
William Duff, 8 Carfin St., Glasgow, Scotland.
Paul Robin, Rue Haxo, Paris, France.

For Rent: FURNISHED ROOM. Large; light; on our elevated and surface cars. Inquire of Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA

OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, (8 in colors), 240 recipes. Price, Cloth bound, $2, mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 500 Fulton St, Chicago.

Wanted: Addresses of ladies, free in all that the word implies, especially from religion and mother grundy, that will correspond with gentlemen likewise free. No fee. Gentlemen sending ten cents silver and a two cent stamp receive any one list. Arthur C. Everett, N-M., General Delivery, San Diego, California.

Typewriters—"Rebuilt" standard machines, guaranteed as represented, at prices that will astonish you. Good serviceable machines within the reach of all. Booklet, samples of work and prices for two cent stamp. Address The Hill Top Agency, Box 129, Springfield, Mo.

Press Writers! On receipt of 25 cents silver I will mail you directions for making a hektograph; invaluable for copying press; about fifteen impressions can be made of one writing. Will K. Mason, 1239 Lafayette, Ave., Chicago.

Wanted By a free couple, who are devoted to literary pursuits, a lady as aid and companion. Reference, Lucifer Office.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1; paper, 60c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF THE FAMILY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

JUDGMENT. William Platt. Every man should read this. Once read, never forgotten. 5c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LOVE AND THE LAW. E. C. Walker. 3c.

LOVE IN FREEDOM. Moses Harman. 5c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MARRIAGE. Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life."

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN, Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER, and Other Essays. Rachel Campbell. 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 600 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 15c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

RBR
E
f#808
V.5,no.29
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES. VOL. V., NO. 26. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS AUG 3 , E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE NO.

A MESSAGE OF THE TOWN.

Look up to the stony arches
Where art and mammon meet,
There's a sound where traffic marches
A call in the city street,
For a voice is ever ringing.
"Gird up your loins and flee.
I will harden your heart or break it
If you will abide with me."

Go forth with a noble yearning,
Give heed to the griefs of men,
And the years will find you turning
To that mocking voice again,
Which ever recurrent whispers,
Like the chant of the restless sea,
"I will harden your heart or break it
If you will abide with me."

No time for the touch of gladness
Nor yet for the boon of tears,
We toss in a cloud of madness,
Whirled round by the whirling years;
And an echo lingers always
From which we are never free,
"I will harden your heart or break it,
If you will abide with me."

Ay! carve it in iron letters
High over your widest gate,
Since we all must wear the fetters
Who seek the appointed fate.
And the winds shall bring the message
Through all of the days that be,
"I will harden your heart or break it
If you will abide with me."

—Ernest McGaffey.

The Doll Awakens to Life.

BY HENRIK IBSEN.

Nora (looking at her watch). It is not so very late. Sit down here, Torvald. We two have much to say to each other. (She sits on one side of the table.)

Helmer. Nora, what does that mean? Your cold, set face?

Nora. Sit down. It will take some time. I have a great deal to talk to you about.

Helmer (sitting opposite to her at the table). Nora, you make me anxious. And I don't understand you.

Nora. No; that is just it. You don't understand me. And I have never understood you either, till tonight. No; you mustn't interrupt me. You must only listen to what I say. . . . This is the settlement of an account, Torvald.

Helmer. How do you mean?

Nora (after a short silence). Does not one thing strike you as we sit here?

Helmer. What should strike me?

Nora. We have now been married eight years. Does it not strike you, that tonight for the first time, we two,—you and I, husband and wife,—are speaking together seriously?

Helmer. Well; 'seriously,' what does that mean?

Nora. During eight whole years and more, since the day we first made each other's acquaintance, we have never exchanged one serious word about serious things.

Helmer. Then would you have had me persistently initiate you into anxieties you could not help me to bear?

Nora. I am not talking of anxieties. All I am saying is, that we have never sat down together seriously, that we might try to get to the bottom of anything.

Helmer. But, dearest Nora, would it have been any good to you, if we had?

Nora. That is the very point. You have never understood me. . . . I have been greatly wronged, Torvald. First, by father, and then by you.

Helmer. What! by us two,—by us two, who have loved you more deeply than all others have?

Nora (shakes her head). You two have never loved me. You only thought it was pleasant to be in love with me.

Helmer. But, Nora, these are strange words!

Nora. Yes; it is just so, Torvald. While I was still at home with father, he used to tell me all his views; a d so of course I held the same views; if I had different ones, I concealed it, because he would not have liked it. He used to call me his little doll, and he played with me, as I used to play with my dolls. Then I came to live in your house.

Helmer. What expressions you do use to describe our marriage!

Nora (undisturbed). I mean,—then I passed over from father's hands into yours. You settled everything according to your taste; and so I had the same taste as you, or else I let it seem so; I don't exactly know. I think it was both ways, first one and then the other. When I look back on it now, it seems to me as if I had been living here like a poor man; only from hand to mouth. I have lived by performing tricks for you, Torvald. But you would have it so. You and father have sinned greatly against me. It is the fault of you two that nothing has been made of me.

Helmer. Nora, how senseless and ungrateful you are! Haven't you been happy here?

Nora. No; that I have never been; I thought I was, but I never was.

Helmer. Not. . . not happy?

Nora. No; only merry. And you were always so kind to me. But our house has been nothing but a playroom.

x
Pg
gl937
3rd ser,
v.5
1901/02
no.29

Here I have been your doll-wife; just as at home, I used to be papa's doll-child. And my children were, in their turn, my dolls. I used to think it was delightful when you took me to play with, just as the children were, whenever I took them to play with. That has been our marriage, Torvald. —From "Nora, or a Doll's House."

Some Reasons Why Love Should Die.

BY ELSIE COLE WILCOX.

I do not pretend to solve the whole riddle, but I can give a few reasons that I know have been instrumental in killing love between married pairs. They will be from a woman's standpoint, but I want to say to the brothers that if they will respond to the query, showing why their love dies, I will not shrink from the expose, and if any of the remarks hit me I will not be angry but will try to profit by the rebuke.

First, then, love is a tender perennial, fitted to live indefinitely with proper culture. The average man is like some amateur florists who seek diligently for new and rare specimens, but after the blooming season neglect their plants and permit them to die for want of care.

A man will exert himself in every possible way to win a girl he fancies himself in love with, and will make himself just as attractive in person and manners as possible, carefully suppressing, or concealing every bad habit or trait of character that would be apt to offend her. If he uses tobacco in any form, (and he usually does!) he will be very careful not to use it in her presence, and to brush his teeth and eat cloves, sens-sens, etc., to disguise the odor when he visits her. He will usually keep himself neat and tidy, wear stylish clothing and always look fresh and well-groomed.

But how is it after marriage? For a little while he is all devotion, devoted to his new toy, his rare plant, watching eagerly the unfolding of the flower of love, but satiety soon follows. He grows indifferent! It is too much trouble to keep his company manners on every day. He forgets the little acts of courtesy, the loving word or caress. He neglets to brush his teeth after smoking, trusting to the sen-sen to kill the odor, and by degrees he comes to neglect even that, but proffers the kiss of greeting with a breath that would "knock a mule down." Women, as a rule, dislike tobacco, and even the few who do not object to the odor of a good cigar when they smell only the smoke, will find its effect on a man's breath quite a different thing, and will often turn away in disgust from the man who is so inconsiderate of their olfactory nerves. They simply cannot help it, and I contend that it is an insult to a clean, sweet woman to thus offend her refined tastes. When using this argument I have been answered "But women sometimes smoke cigarettes." My reply is "Pardon me, but I am speaking of ladies! I know little of the tastes, or habits of the class you mention." As I said before, tobacco is offensive to nearly all women, (and to most men who do not use it themselves) and yet few, if any, married men will quit using it in order to make themselves sweet and attractive to their wives. The few who do should be canonized! And so far as I know their wives fully appreciate the sacrifice and repay it with the tenderest love.

What man would continue to love a woman who made herself repulsive to him with dirt and vile odors. Suppose a wife contracted the habit of chewing asafoetida, and presented her lips to her husband reeking with the fetid gum! How often do you suppose he would seek a kiss? And yet, tobacco is equally odious to many women.

This may seem like a small matter, but life is made up of trifles. The judicious watering, airing, weeding &c., are each small matters in themselves, but each is necessary to the healthy growth of the plant. And the little things of life that tend to give pleasure to the loved one are necessary to the life of love. The shrinking from, or refusal to accept the tobacco flavored kiss is the severing of one of the ties that bind the hearts together, and it is well known that when one strand of a cord is broken a slight strain will often sever another, and soon the strongest rope gives way.

Another "reason"—I have in mind a young couple recently married. For months before the marriage the gentleman was the most devoted of lovers, lavishing every attention on the lady, escorting her to theatres, lectures, &c. and buying every pretty present he could prevail on her to accept. But after the marriage!

For two weeks he never offered to take her out at all, not even for a walk! Then, her sister was going to a party and urged her to go. She timidly suggested to him that she would like to go, and be refused! And only married two weeks!

It is evident too, that he was resolved to begin as he intended to hold out, for in nearly two months he has taken her to but one entertainment, although they live in a city, and he has ample means to afford a reasonable amount of amusement. He also refuses on one pretext or another to take her to visit her girlhood home, only a few miles distant, and objects to her proposition to let her go for a few days without him. Now, perhaps, this sort of thing will tend to win or keep a woman's love, but it does not appear so to me.

These are a few of the thousand enemies of love. I could give many more instances, but my letter is too long already, and I will wait and see if some of the brothers will retaliate by pointing out some of our faults which assist in the deplorable tragedy —the death of love.

Lawrence, Wash.

Crackerets.

BY TAK KAK.

Christian Science is a great mistake, substituted for a greater.

* * *

Protestants err in denying the power of the church to forgive sins. They should have extended the privilege of the clergy to every member, for believers want to confess and to be absolved.

* * *

The woman that did not have man's passions, never had a father. They say that two wrongs do not make one right. I have, however, seen two rights create a whole train of wrongs. It generally takes much more than two wrongs to establish a right.

* * *

Those who escape from purgatory or the law, come out cleaned.

* * *

A thousand industrial co operators could become rich as Jews; a hundred could attain material comfort; ten intelligent adults could appreciably better their fortunes.

* * *

The correspondent who injects into his communication a suggestion concerning the business interest of the paper, thereby invites the editor to use his blue pencil on the irrelevant remark. Whatever is permitted is invited.

Wanted: A Jewel.

BY A. H. TUCKER.

That "consistency is a jewel" is quickly apparent to one who sits as a listener to the pleaders at the bar of popular approval or for public patronage.

There are those, I believe, who do not pretend to be consistent and yet there is no such thing as arriving at a logical conclusion without it.

For one to declare in one breath that there is no such thing as poverty, sickness or death and in the next to tell how the death of a dear child might have been prevented; or that for a stipulated price all diseases will be cured and success in life assured, is bound to have a mystifying effect on a mind accustomed to reasoning along logical lines.

To hear a sweet warbler chirp out the "I-lest assurance" that "her omnipotent word" will surely bring success, and then, later, when some one who has invoked the word and accompanied the invocation with the stipulated price, complains meekly of the tardiness with which success puts in an appearance, is told, softly, that "somehow, somewhen, somewhere," success will surely come, one's knowledge of legal matters will at once suggest how utterly worthless one's note would be, made payable "somehow, somewhen, somewhere."

What a solace to a "poor devil" who has "hustled" all his life without making any apparent material headway to be told to get up and "hustle" for success after he has been solemnly told that this "omnipotent" word would "do the business" for him.

People will damn the doctors and malign the ministers without reserve and then, if one or more of these should happen to say or do something in line with the particular reform (?) they advocate will trot them out with a careful display of M. D.'s and D. D.'s, as witnesses whose evidence is especially weighty

I have always been averse to giving much weight to the testimony of criminals who turn states' evidence. I know a man who has been twice vaccinated and yet no evidence of consumption or syphilis has ever appeared. Can he be blamed for believing it makes a difference who is vaccinated?

Vivisection perhaps, at times, may be conducted in a cruel and objectionable manner; but I am sure the man who has a chance to give up a few small sections of his skin to help "sod over" the lacerated cuticle of his sweetheart will ever be glad the "grafting" process was discovered.

And why all this fine spun sentiment about taking life? Can any one who "stops to think" conceive of the possibility of living without causing death? Nothing is clearer to my mind than that nothing in the universe is permanent. Constant change must take place that there may be life. Without change in the universe, "universal death" death would prevail.

It may be that as time goes on, life in its various forms becomes contaminated or polluted as does a pool of stagnant water in contact with decaying or soluble matter and needs to be freed from the restraint of more condensed forms of matter and allowed to purify itself, as do the waters of the running stream.

Some day I presume some one will start a society for the suppression of steam boilers, fearing the water in the universe will be all boiled away.

And here's another opening for a "good living" for some one—why don't some one organize a society for the protection of whiskers? The crime "against nature" of killing innumerable millions of feet of living human whiskers every year is something appalling.

If some one would only constitute himself the "head of the movement," start an "organ," work the "just one subscriber chestnut" diligently, deal in cosmetics and specifics for hurrying up and luxuriating the beard, Dowie wouldn't be "in it" with him, for a "snap." True, one would have to have sufficient "nerve" to enable him to present the matter with that assurance that passes for sincerity.

Of course the barbers would secure legislation against the movement, have its "organ" suppressed if possible, and make every one who wished to wear a beard pay for a license from the "board of health" granting them the privilege, in order that the "growing generation of barbers might have business." And right here is a place where the "cloven hoof" of our social order shows itself.

Two Wives in Same House.

BY ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

"Clearfield, Penn., May 25:—A remarkable case has been brought to light at Crenshaw, a mining town, by the arrest of John Vasilko, charged with bigamy.

"At the hearing it was shown that Vasilko had two wives, both living in the same house with him.

"The women were warmly attached to each other. Wife No. 1 had one child, while wife No. 2 had three children. In passing judgment Squire Felt decided to divide up the children each woman to keep two. Wife No. 2 was ordered to leave Vasilko's home, but Vasilko was directed to pay her $10 per month for thirty months.

"The scene at parting was very affecting, the two women deeply regretted the necessity of separating, and Vasilko being loath to give up one of his wives."

Behold how the law protects the sanctity of the home, and the mother and her children!

Closely investigated this becomes a curious case. As a man can have but one legal wife, woman No. 2 is no wife at all, yet he is obliged to contribute to her support—a meagre sum, for a short time. Apparently the righteous judge thinks there has been some partiality shown and he tries to equalize matters by giving one woman's child to the other!

Here were two women in the same house with one man!—very "irregular," to be sure, but who was injured by it?

The law steps in, makes one man and two women unhappy, breaks up the home, separates one child from its mother. "Morality" is upheld, but who is benefitted by it?

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 2.

BY A. C. ARMSTRONG.

July 7, Providence, (R. I.,) "Sunday Journal" prints a long letter from Francis B. Livesey on the marriage question that is alike a credit to the liberality of the "Journal" and the iconoclastic author of Sykesville, Md.

Richmond (Va.) "Sunday Times" prints one from Kent B. Peery of Longwood, Va., advocating the adoption of resolutions now before the committee revising the state constitution, striking the word Christian from Section 18 of the "Bill of Rights," taxing all church property and prohibiting state aid to sectarian institutions. July 8, "Traveler" (Boston) prints two fine letters from D. Webster Groh, on "Blue Laws" and "Order and Law." "Bulletin" (Philadelphia) Chas. A. Osborn on "Faith" and Edward Stern replied to Gidney on "Socialism." July 9, "Traveler" prints J. T. Small on "The World Aroused" by the "Transvaal War." A. A. Orcott on "What Are Our Courts For?"

Rockland, Mass., "Free Press" announces the award of the prize for the letter coming the nearest to the Stroller's ideal of spending a million dollars, to Francis B. Livesey; the point that decided the matter in his favor was that he would start a people's paper to be filled with the thoughts of unpaid contributors. "Bulletin" (Phila.) prints G. L. Gullickson on "Christianity and Progress."

July 10, "The World-Herald" (Omaha Neb.) prints a half column letter from William E. Bonney 1839 O St., Lincoln, Neb. in reply to that paper's question "Will some philosopher explain why lightning so often destroys churches and so seldom hits saloons?" Brother Bonney has well improved this opportunity to rub it in on the churches. "Traveler" (Boston) prints Edward Stern on "Natural Evolution;" D. Webster Groh "For Equal Rights;" Harriet M. Closz, "Blue Laws"; "Paine Hall" (Wm. Duffney) "Infidel and Christian;" and J. T. Small "Chase vs. Groh." "Discontent," (Home, Wash.) prints "Comment" from Kate Austin.

July 11 "Traveler" (Boston) "Paine Hall" (Wm. Duffney) pays his respects to the "Christian Hell."

July 12, Rockland, Mass., "Independent" prints one from J. T. Small on "Revaccination"; Bellefontain (Ohio) "Republican" prints the writer on the Sandy question with nearly two columns of editorial comment. He was not hit hard, but in a tender spot; "Bulletin" (Phil.) Edward Stern on "Basic Principles."

July 12, "Traveler," J. T. Small writes a good one on the "Doctor's Dream of Empire." Edward Stern replies to criticism. "Examiner" (San Francisco.) The writer commends an editorial against "The Stupid Frightening of Children."

NEW MEMBERS.

b. Johnson, A., 414 Lilly Ave., San Francisco, Cal.
a. Simpson, W. A., Philadelphia, Tenn.
a. Hutcheson, W. J., 54 C. Springfield St., Sta. A, Boston Mass.
b. Gilbert, J. M., Randolph, Texas.
c. Pope, J. W., North Madison, Lake, Co. Ohio.
f. Herron, Mrs. Carrie Raud, Mont Clair, N. J. Her gift to the Press-Writers' cause was ten dollars. Who will be next?
17 Leroy, St., Dorchester, Mass.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer.

Published every week at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

876

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Special Notice.

PREMIUM GIVING FORBIDDEN BY POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Just as we are going to press we are notified that premiums can no longer be given with papers which are mailed at regular second class rates of one cent a pound. This order is to go into effect Oct. 1, so our present premium offers can be good only up to that date.

The Outlook—Socialism.

A press dispatch from Indianapolis dated July 29, says:

The largest convention of Socialists ever held in the United States opened here to-day. The gathering was called by the executive boards of two divisions of the Social Democratic party to unite all factions of socialism and to adopt a new name for a united movement.

Delegates from almost every state in the union are here. One of the central figures is Professor George D. Herron of New York formerly of Iowa College, Grinnell, Ia., whose recent divorce and marriage drew national attention.

On his way to Indianapolis from New York, Professor Herron stopped two days in this city and made one public address to an audience estimated by the "Record-Herald's" reporter at 2000. The attendance would doubtless have been much larger if his coming had been properly advertised. The "Chicago American" of Friday morning last, stated that Prof. Herron would arrive in the city "to-night," and would lecture "to-morrow night (Saturday) at Socialistic Hall, 120 South Western Ave." His friends claim that they made special request that this error be corrected in later editions of the paper by substituting to-night, the corrected date, for "tomorrow night". No attention was paid to this request.

The Record-Herald's report of the lecture was, in part, as follows:

The public school, once the threshold and bulwark of American liberty and progress, is now throttled by the capitalist, by the man who owns the nation. Directors, superintendents, principals, teachers—every part and person of the system—are owned and tyrannized over by a single corporation, the book trust. The very history which your children read and are taught to believe, is made, written and enforced by a gang of organized capitalists. No man nor woman in power in the American public schools to-day dares to resist this influence in the schools. Your children are being taught, with or without your consent, the things and only the things which amalgamated money wishes them to know.

Your priests, preachers and religious teachers are all debauched by the same influence. There is hardly a pastor left who dares to stand in his pulpit and teach the word and spirit of God's teachings. Why? Because in a pew before him sits the man who owns his bread. Because in his church, which is owned by corrupt capital, sits the man whom it is his business to please, the man whose word has become in the United States greater and more potent than the very word of God; the man who owns the schools, the man who owns the congress, the legislators and the whole engineery of American life—the capitalist.

The same capitalistic power which is dominating your public schools, your churches and the literature of your country is the power which is upbuilding and directing the policies of your colleges and universities. It is preparing a way to combat the rising power of socialism. It is founding and inculcating its own schools of economics, of politics, of religion and of philosophy. It is weaving the bridle and making the saddle upon which, if you are not careful, it will ride back to power even after your first victories have been won.

It is history that tyrants have always regained their lost thrones upon the very movements which were started for their undoing. Already capital is building for itself a new middle class. It is proposing and carrying out schemes for co-operative industry. It is ignoring the producer, the workingman, the common people, and, by an ingenius and far-sighted scheme of warfare, is making for its future use and defense a race of dependents, of co-operative slaves, a people of serfs.

Every editor and newspaper in the land is bought and pledged, consciously or otherwise, to this scheme of destroying the gist of socialism and creating in its place a system of bastard socialism, of partial concession, of false pretense, a system wisely calculated to make the very people who demand reforms the vehicle and the mouthpiece of the common enemy—allied capital.

* * *

While newspaper reports of Socialistic utterances are not remarkable for accuracy these paragraphs probably are not far wrong as to the main drift of the discourse of the man who is now regarded by many thousands of people, in this hemisphere at least, as the best living exponent of the aims and animus of what is called the "Socialistic movement," "Social Democracy," Christian Socialism," etc.

That there are great and apparently insurmountable differences between the views of the various wings of the Socialistic workers is recognized and deplored by all who wish to see justice prevail, goes without saying, and hence the result of the conference now being held at Indianapolis is doubtless looked forward to with much anxiety by tens of thousands if not millions of people.

Since the foregoing was written a "special telegram" to the "Chicago Chronicle" reports that "Eugene V. Debs has been turned down by the (Socialistic) party and has ceased to be a controlling spirit in its councils," and a telegram from Milwaukee, tells us that Frederick Heath, leader of the Wisconsin Socialists, predicts that "another party will be organized."

This report, added to the later statement that the conference between the leaders of the "Billion Dollar Steel Trust" and the representatives of organized labor have failed to agree on a basis of settlement, once more gives a gloomy cast to the outlook—gloomy for all who hope for economic salvation through political parties, through leadership and through obedience to the commands of a leader

That concert of action, unity of action, is necessary to success of any movement is conceded by all, but that something else is needed before intelligent concert of action, effective concert of action can be practicalized on the part of the producers of wealth, is becoming more and more apparent, as time rolls on, to many who have carefully studied the history of political parties and of "labor unions."

What that something is will probably he made the subject of an article for these columns in the near future. M. H.

Old, Yet Ever New

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

Notes and Comments.

ERRATA:

In Lucifer No. 875, bottom of editorial page, first column, for "talk-gatherers," read toll-gatherers. On page 223, 15th line second column, for "enumerates" read enunciates.

* * *

SOCIETY OF ANTHROPOLOGY,

Owing to the rain storm Sunday afternoon the attendance at the hall of this club was not so large as is usual, the speaker of the day, Mr Jay Fox, himself being numbered with the absentees. The subject of discussion, "Labor's Discontent and the Steel Worker's Strike" was deferred until next Sunday—August 5, when Mr. Fox is expected to deliver the opening address. Time 3:.0 P. M., at Hall 220 Atheneum Bldg., 26 Van Buren st.

* * *

DROUTH BROKEN.

The disastrous drouth and intense heat that had long prevailed over the great Middle West, and over many of the Southern and south-eastern states of the American Union was broken by copious and very general rains on Friday and Saturday of last week, and also on Sunday of this week, bringing hope, joy and gladness to millions of people. This very welcome change in the program of the weather, added to the prospect of a near settlement of the great strike of the steel workers, causes the general outlook for the future to take on a much more cheerful aspect.

* * *

PRESS WRITER'S CLUB.

The main purpose of the Press Writer's "Notes," by A. C. Armstrong, the first installment of which is given in this issue, is to show what the members of the Press Writer's Association are doing; also to show in what papers they are getting a hearing, and the class of subjects chiefly treated upon by them. If our space were adequate to the demands upon it we would gladly print all that is offered by the secretary of this association—the most powerful for good or ill of all the agencies now in the educational field. Readers of the public newspaper are fast finding out that editors and paid contributors are hired, not to tell the truth, but, as some one has expressed it, to keep the truth out of print. Hence, if we are to have an approximation to truthfulness and candor in the public press, we must look to the unpaid volunteers—to the writers who have no bject to gain except the triumph of truth and justice.

A Definition.

BY ROBERT C. ADAMS.

A free lover is one who believes in the right of private judgment in sex morals. He thinks that continence, marriage, variety or prostitution are matters that concern the individual and that any restriction or dictation on the part of church or state as to private conduct in the exercise of sexual functions is a trespass upon freedom.

It is not correct to refer to a free lover as a varietist any more than it is accurate to call a freethinker an atheist. A freethinker is one who claims the right of private judgment in religion He rejects the claim that there is any revealed, authoritative standard of religious belief. He may be a theist, deist, agnostic or atheist but he demands liberty of thought and speech on religious topics. To be consistent he should demand it on all topics, but there are some persons who should be styled freethinkers limited, for they restrict liberty of thought to the realm of religion and are intolerant to anarchy, socialism, free trade, free rum and free love.

Some free lovers are continent and many are faithful to the marriage bond. They only agree in asserting the right for each person to determine how he or she shall live their sexual lives. Some advocate one theory and some another and few will venture to declare that any one system of life is adapted to all people and places.

Before the present era of higher criticism and scientific research the enemies of rationalism always classed freethinkers with blasphemers and blackguards, just as now the enemies o sex freedom allude to free lovers as rakes and debauchees. But as free thought was stood up to by its adherents in spite of religious abuse so free love must be championed against the assaults of prudery.

To Press-Writers and Others.

BY E. J. PAUL.

Perhaps if Friend Livesey and others knew of the struggle that the friends of Lucifer have been through to keep the sex-question before the world, since Heywood, by imprisonment and death, was forced to lay down the work, they would not want to change its name and central idea every month. An increasing number throughout the world realize that "sex contains all." That it will take a better race to change administrative and economic methods.

Ezra Heywood and Walt Whitman raised a banner on which was inscribed Purity of Sex—Respect for our Origin. Moses Harman took up that banner when no one else did, and Lucifer became the rallying point of all respectors of sex. This "coterie, which is world-wide, is content to trust our Moses and his daughter with the banner.

* * *

Unions fail when they cease to be mutual—or, as James would say, when they cease to be unions.

Goldman is right, but uses the wrong word. Men and women have an interest in each other when they love, and when they have duties toward each other.

When I have a sweetheart I'll do that which will cause us the least pain, and that will not be slavery.

When I love myself alone I cannot expect to find any love outside. I can form no unions. As quite a number of us look at it, the great trouble is that men and women get children but produce no love.

If the future has nothing better to offer we radicals had better quit reviling the priest and the chief.

The more gods and kings we have, the more tyrants.

I believe that we are something above and better than pismires, therefore I wish to change the present system.

A Common Disease.

BY S. T. SUDDUCK, M. D.

"What ailed Mrs. Jones, Doctor? I heard this morning that she was dead."

"Routine," replied the doctor tersely.

"Routine? Why Doctor I never heard of such a disease in my life."

The doctor laid his paper aside, removed his feet from the floor to the table, leaned back in his chair and replied: "Thousands of women die every year of routine, and the insidious disease is not suspected. It usually sets in about a year or two after marriage, and continues, if not broken up, until it lands its victim in an untimely grave."

"Why Doctor, you frighten me. Perhaps my wife has it now, and has it bad, too. I know she seems going into a decline, is thin, and looks weary all the time. I have tried different doctors, have treated her for liver complaint, heart disease, kidney trouble and even consumption, but nothing seems to do her any good. She is up and around all the time, and does her work as usual, but seems to be 'on the drag' all the time, no life, no spirit, and has a care-worn look."

"Those are the symptoms," said the doctor quietly, as he lit a cigar and, again, elevated his feet to the office table.

"Well, Doctor, tell me something of this terrible disease that you say is consuming the vitals of thousands of wives and mothers every year."

The doctor sat and puffed away for some time without answering, and then said, "What does your wife do? What has she been doing ever since, say a year after, your marriage?"

"Well," I replied, "about that time Charley was born, since then everything has gone on smoothly enough. Emma was a stout hearty girl when I married her fifteen years ago, as you know, and our eight children are as pretty a little flock as one ever sees. We have generally had good health, but somehow of late years, Emma has not been so well as she used to be. You see she never liked hired help. She did all her own work for so long before she needed help that she got used to it, and—I can't bear muddy coffee or raw bread, and we could never get a girl that cooks like Emma. Well, if she would see me frown, or leave the table before the meal was over, she would turn off the girl, and cook, herself, if it killed her. So for years she has done her own work. She gets up of a morning, dresses, gets breakfast, gets the children up, dresses them one at a time, gives them their breakfast and gets them off to school; then washes the dishes, makes the beds, sweeps and tidies up the rooms, etc., etc. By that time dinner is to get, and after dinner is over, dishes washed, etc., she takes up mending. You know children tear out clothes rapidly. Then at four the children come from school, and, while the older ones help some, the younger ones are in the way, and make a good deal of racket besides, and Emma does have a hard time with them I'll admit. Then after supper the children are to undress, and put to bed, and so many things to do that it is usually late before she comes up to bed. I scold her for sitting up so late, but it does no good; she always makes excuse that she has mending, darning or something else to do, and so it goes. Well, by the time she comes to bed I have had a good nap, and of course, not having much chance to talk to her during the busy hours, I like to talk, and have a bit of love with her as we used to do, but she is usually cross and fretful, and says sharp things to me, then I get angry and the day ends in a bit of hard feeling that worries us both."

The doctor had puffed his cigar vigorously while I was talking, and when I had finished he flung the stump, rather spitefully, I thought, into the spittoon, removed his feet from the table to the floor, turned towards me and blurted out—"Jim Welch, you're a brute!"

I almost sprung from my chair. The doctor and I had been chums all through our school-boy and college-days, and loved each other like brothers. He got acquainted with Emma after our engagement, and had fallen deeply in love with her himself, b utbeing too late, he shook hands at parting, (he was going to Philadelphia to attend the medical school,) and wished me much joy and happiness with my soon-to-be bride. (He was always a generous fellow.) Well, from that time on, his life and mine drifted apart, he graduated and settled down to practice, and later in life married a woman twenty years his junior. She was rather literary in her tastes, wrote pretty verses and stories, and of course he let her do just as she pleased. She was pretty, and little, and sweet, he called her pet names and she never gave him an unkind word, and life flowed along so smooth and nice with them that I contrasted her with Emma with her thin haggard face and snappish ways rather unfavorably, and sometimes I'll admit I was a little cross myself.

I had studied law and had a large practice, and had a good deal of annoyance and could'nt help carrying some of it home once in a while. But to be called a brute, by my old friend and chum, Dr. Gray, was a little too rough, and my face must have shown anger, for he continued, (laying his hand on my arm), "You don't mean to be, old fellow, but you are, all the same, without realizing it. And thousands of others are doing, today just as you are,—keeping your wives on that infernal tread-mill 'duty,' year after year till they get like old horses and if you would turn them out in a ten acre field they would go round and round, (figuratively speaking.) It is this 'routine' that kills, this going in the same old rut day after day with no time to read, no chance to go, or see anything, this eternal work, work, work. No wonder the physical wears out, while the mental and spiritual rust out. A man has no right to make a slave out of his wife, to do drudgery for him, all day and then expect her to be the sweet wife to him at night that she used to be when young and free from care. He should relieve her from child-bearing so soon as he finds her physical health failing, and limit his family to two or four at most, and not go on as you have done, compelling her to bear children—one after another until she is worn out,—dies, and orphans them all. Two children—one of either sex, is sufficient for any mother to care for and raise up, and do it right, and unless the mother is exceptionally clever as well as hearty two is as many as she can do justice to, and do justice to herself. And after the second one is born especially if the births have been laborious, the mothers look upon the nuptial act with more of pain and dread than pleasure, and her life is jeopardized with every such act. And children born under such circumstances, have fastened upon their lives such pre-natal conditions as no child should be born with. It is a fact that every one knows, that the latest born children do not compare favorably with the first or second born, and why? Because the pre-natal influences are not so good."

And so the Doctor talked on and on until I began to think I had been a brute sure enough, and I said, 'You are right, Doctor, I believe I have been in a passive dream all these years, but you have waked me up. Now what must I do?"

"Break up the routine," said the Doctor. "Get out of the rut. Take your wife out of the treadmill. Get a governess for your children. Have a play room and a school room, for them, and let the governess take them in charge; "farm" your cooking out, or get an experienced housekeeper to take full charge of the kitchen. Then let your wife take you to the office each morning in the carriage, and continue the drive for an hour or so. Take her to the country occasionally, get her interested in reading, don't scold her, or even look cross if the coffee is muddy or the bread dough, once in a while. Tell her of your plans, let her sit in your office, with the latest magazine in her hands for a blind, and take items once in a while, and see how you conduct your business; introduce her to your gentlemen friends and let her talk to them. Take her to the theatre and to a lecture occasionally. Do this and my word for it the bloom will come to her cheeks, the sparkle to her eye, and the elasticity to her step without dosing her with medicine, and you will soon have no occasion to find fault with her with regard to her 'wifely duties' and lack of loving kindness to yourself."

The above conversation occurred just two years ago today, and I put the good Doctor's advice into practice. I took the care of the children entirely off her hands, as far as manual labor was concerned, such as washing and dressing them, etc., etc., placed a housekeeper over the kitchen department, freeing her from all that part of the business, fitting up a nice bed-room for her exclusive use—next to my own; freeing her from any fear of a further increase in the family. Placed the horse and carriage at her service with a boy to bring it at any time, and in fact followed the Doctor's programme to the letter, and my Emma looks and says she feels fifteen years younger than she did two years ago, and it costs me but little more to live now than it did then, and I have the satisfaction of knowing that Emma is not a slave and that I am not a brute.

VARIOUS VOICES.

C. R. Fisk, M. D., Keokuk, Iowa:—What do you want now for the book "Government Analyzed" by Kelso? I remember the first one I bought of you, several years ago, I paid you $1.50. I never begrudged it; for it is a great book.

[The price of "Government Analyzed" has been reduced to one dollar; for those who buy to sell again, a further reduction will be made,—according to quantity. Now that the foundations of our various political systems are being examined and sifted, as never before, perhaps, this searching analysis of government by Col. John R. Kelso, supplemented by an able presentation of the Co-operative Commonwealth by Etta Dunbar Kelso, ought to be widely circulated. M. H.]

Frank Reed, Eureka, Calif.:—The pamphlet containing your address on Institutional Marriage to hand, for which I thank you. If Judge Dodge is correct in his interpretation of the spirit and letter of the law, and he himself is in sympathy with such law, the most I can say for both the Judge and the law, is, that they should be tarred and feathered, and then sent adrift down some terrible stream. The idea that man has a pecuniary or property interest in wife or child is repugnant in the extreme. Perhaps you could not do better than to print just the few, simple words of this learned donkey, and send them broadcast over the land. I will contribute my mite to this end. Let these be brought before the eyes of every married and unmarried woman, and there will be a little stir in society. There should be no other binding power than that of love between man and wife, for we may as well keep up the name husband and wife, as not, for only those who truly love each other can, appropriately, be called such. Legal marriage does not make righteous marriage.

Edward Stern, Phila., Pa.:—Your Institutional Marriage I regard as one of the best things you have written. You do not understand me to underrate the importance of the sexual problem, but as I have already written you, think that economic salvation will powerfully aid its solution. I do not think that there has ever been a time in the known history of mankind, when so many people have been seeking after light, as at present. . . . Much however depends upon how subjects are presented. Over and over again I have thought of writing up a little pamphlet on sexuality, one which would offend no seeker after truth. Many, many of your sexual publications repulse the very men and women whom they should attract. It is not for me to dogmatically lay down the law to you or any other human. What are the laws of nature (God) bearing upon sexual relationship of humans? Do you think that nature which has and does lay down laws regarding the minutest molecules of matter whether solid, liquid, gaseous etc., has overlooked the function and embrace from which and through which we all have come and continue to come? I know, you know, that in countless cases of bestiality, lack of knowledge, unnatural conditions combine to wreck the sexual unfoldment of couples. Many, many of these couples are eagerly desirous of light, light, but they are encompassed in gloom. You know, I know, that if a fair proportion of children were truly conceived and reared, that in a short time we would have a race of Gods instead of our present apologies, abortions or call them what you will. I am not Jesus Christ; I am not Elijah, or any of the prophets reincarnated, to the best of my knowledge and belief I am simply a fallible, erring man, but my heart has and does go out to suffering humanity, and when I perceive a truth, quietly I will hold fast to it, elucidate it, stand by it until I am shown to be in error, then I will quickly thank the man that enlightens me.

Iva P. Lowry, Mo.:—Enclosed find $3 for back dues on Lucifer. Thanks for sending after time had expired. The paper has been a great help to me; also a great agitator of my brain power. Your occasional strong opposition to socialism sets me to thinking as nothing else does. You seem to separate government from the people in your idea of the Socialist's Co-operative Commonwealth, and connect it with authority. This is not my idea, nor can I read it in their writings. I heard a socialist lecturer say a few days ago in his lecture, that he did not want the government as at present constituted, to own anything, and that he did not like to use the term government in connection with the co-operative commonwealth as it seemed to imply authority. You do not oppose a systematic plan of conducting co-operation in groups, by the people composing that group, so, why oppose the same in national co-operation?

Fifty years ago the group idea could have been inaugurated, but today, with the great trusts controlling the necessaries of life, or what is supposed to be such, it seems to me impossible. For my own part I could and would willingly choose freedom now, under these conditions, freedom from the law and everything the trusts have cornered for I can live and thrive mightily on fruit, nuts and raw cracked wheat, and wear the loose easy fitting clothes that cost so little—the "mother hubbard styles" (where I would suffer would be to be deprived of books,) but what good would it do to do this, in the solution of the great problem? If everyone did so of course the trust would go out of business, but they won't! Remove government and the trust will only laugh and stay in business! Isn't that so? Private ownership of Mother-Nature is wrong.

You and May Huntley say you don't know why love dies. My idea is that it is killed by the competitive spirit that dominates human beings. We wish to secure the love expressions of a certain person for our enjoyment before someone else does. Yes, even the best of us. When our concern shall be how much love we can give, we will have an altogether different proposition.

I am interested in the Press Writers and wondering if I could be of use to them in anyway. I've lots of time and a wee bit of brains, but am not yet able to write readable articles for publication.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. Price, 25 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, will be sent free for thirteen weeks with each order for "The Prodigal Daughter." Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Lucifer is Sold By:

W. L. Sinton, room 1^, 70 Dearborn St, Chicago.
N. S. Winnegar, 642 Washington St, Boston.
Warren, 127 Central Ave., Cincinnati.
Henry Bauer, 123 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheny, Pa.
Geo. E. Frye, Halifax, N. S., 100 Hollis st.
E. C. Walker, 244, 1423 st. New York.
William Duff, 9 Carlile St, Glasgow, Scotland.
Paul Robin, Rue Haxo, Paris, France.

ELMINA'S REQUEST. Women who would like gentlemen for correspondents and who feel free to discuss all reforms, will send name and address and two two-cent stamps to ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER Snowville Pulaski Co, Va.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1; paper, 60c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF THE FAMILY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

JUDGMENT. William Platt. Every man should read this. Once read, never forgotten. 5c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LOVE AND THE LAW. E. C. Walker. 3c.

LOVE IN FREEDOM. Moses Harman. 5c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MARRIAGE. Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER, and Other Essays. Rachel Campbell. 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Les. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

RBF
E
f#808
v-5, no.27
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., NO. 27. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JULY 20, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE NO. 874

Offspring.

BY ELI F. BROWN, M. S., M. D.

Every living thing begins its career in life as a cell which forms a part of the parent's body. After a season of preparation, during which time it remains attached to its mother, the embryo which has been formed from the original cell is separated from her and begins its existence as an individual living being.

The character of the offspring is determined so definitely by its parentage, that, during its whole life, it must remain like its parent in many important respects. This natural likeness of the offspring to the body which produces it preserves the various kinds or species of creatures among living things. There is no vital law more universal and unchangeable than this law of transmission of sameness of kind, which governs the nature of offspring and perpetuates the various types of vital existence.

The reason why the young being is of the same kind as its parent is simply because the embryo is a portion of the mother's body; hence, as it grows, it remains the same in kind, and must ever continue to be like the original body from which, as a part, it was derived. Any familiar class of living beings will furnish illustrations of the truth of this law. Thus a grain of Indian corn is formed by the parent of the plant as a part of itself; when this grain is ripe and is planted, it grows, and, in growing, must produce a plant like the parent corn plant: it cannot become wheat, nor can it be oats. The egg of the goose is formed by the mother bird from a part of herself; when this egg is hatched, the young bird is necessarily a goose; it cannot be a robin, nor is it possible for it to be an eagle. The calf, born of the common cow, is formed by the mother from a part of herself; when it is separated from her by birth, it must be of the cow kind; it cannot be a deer, nor can it be a bear. So also, the child of human parents is formed by its mother from a portion of herself and must be a human being like her; it cannot be anything else.

All living things die. There is nothing more certain than that every plant and every animal which has fulfilled its allotted season of life must disappear by death. Individuals perish, yet the race or species is continued by the origin and life of other individuals of the same kind. These new things take the place of such as die, and, in turn, produce others like themselves, and then pass away by death.

In the world of plants, the reproduction or succession of individuals is accomplished chiefly by the formation and growth of seeds. Each seed is made by a parent plant, and contains within itself some nourishment together with a living germ. This germ is really a tiny plant, ready to begin to grow as a separate plant under suitable conditions for such growth. Thus, if the seed is properly planted in the soil, the moisture and warmth of the earth cause the embryo within the seed to begin to grow. All plants which produce seeds have certain parts of themselves which perform this important duty. These parts are the flowers which the plant bears, often so noticeable for their sweetness and beauty. The showy portions of the flower soon drop away, but a part, called the pistil, still clings to the parent stem and perfects the seeds. The stamens and pistils of the flower are properly called the organs of reproduction of the plant, for they are designed to make the seeds which are the plant's offspring. These parts of the flower are to the plant what the sexual organs are the animals.

In many ways the lowest kinds of animals resemble plants, and the reproduction of such animals is often as simple as the formation of seeds and buds by plants. In some of the very lowest kinds, the adult or fully grown animal simply divides itself into separate parts, and each of these portions becomes a new individual which grows to maturity, to be divided again and again into new and distinct individuals. In other cases among the lower animals, the young are derived from the parent bodies as new buds and bulbs are formed by some kinds of plants. These "buds," on being separated from the mother animal, grow as distinct individuals, or, it may be, they remain attached to the parent stock and grow as branches do upon trees, thus forming a cluster or colony of animals. Such animals are little more than plants, and are wanting in all of those distinctive features of animated bodies which distinguish the higher animals from the other forms of creation.

In animals such as fishes and birds, with few exceptions, the female forms eggs within herself, which correspond precisely to the seeds formed by plants. An egg, like a seed, contains a living germ, the same in kind as its parent, and, also, nourishment for the early growth of this germ or embryo. During the process of hatching a bird's egg, the embryo within the egg becomes a young bird, which breaks from the shell at the appointed time, quite able to begin life on its own account.

In animals of the highest orders, among which the human being is included, the egg is retained within the mother's body until the young animal is ready to be born alive, after which it is nourished for a brief season by the mother's milk. All such animals are called mammals because they nurse their young, and the mother is called the mamma.

Per QL937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
No. 27

The human being is not unlike the other mammals in these respects, excepting that the human offspring is less strong after birth and needs the attention of its mother for a much longer time before it is able to care for itself in the world. However greatly man may excel the brute in mental and moral endowment, the human being is not otherwise an exception in the animal world, but is like other mammals in all essential respects, subject to the same laws of life, health, development and reproduction.—Sex and Life.

More About the Press-Writers—No. VII.

BY FRANCIS B. LIVESEY.

LUCIFER AS A SEX REFORM PAPER.

If there is any hesitation in making Lucifer what I call an all round reform paper, I am just as well content to see it confine itself to its sex work, provided it will take up the Press-Writers' methods in carrying on its campaign. With all possible economy the paper is barely large enough to do justice to this one line of effort. Then, too, times have changed considerably since Lucifer first started amid misunderstandings and persecutions. There is no call for the timidity that has been exercised in the past on the part of some. Lucifer should be called "Chicago Lucifer," its name, address and date should be at the head of every page and all its writers whose names are worth mentioning at all should have them accompanied with their full address. How can strangers be made acquainted with the writers if they or the paper fail to give their address? I note that Lucifer has failed to give my address in its last two issues. How am I to welcome strangers if this is continued? If the paper is intended merely for a coterie of friends, well and good, but we are supposing that Lucifer is a reform paper and that a goodly number of every issue is sent by zealous friends to foes and friends who are strangers to it; hence, it must have the appendages necessary to reform.

"HOW TO REFORM MANKIND."

The "Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer" has an immense circulation, running into the hundreds of thousands, and in every issue devotes a whole page to articles from the people. It goes among people of all sects and conditions in life and there is not a paper in the country in which a reform article of any kind whatever would be so certain of bearing a crop.

In its issue of June 13 there was a start made by "Helen Blazes" for a symposium on marriage and divorce. Now, I thought, is the chance for Lucifer's writers. But it takes two or three weeks to get a thing in Lucifer, so what should I do. The "Ring Letter" must be the recourse. But then I wanted Lucifer's writers and I looked in vain for their addresses. I was only able to lay hands on the addresses of Walker and Lloyd.

Well, I got up "Ring Letter No. 90" to go to Lloyd and Walker and also to a Massachusetts lady, to Miss Phelps, to Armstrong, to Maud Abbey and to "Waldo." I of course sent the page of the "Enquirer" to which they were to reply. Now, Lloyd and Walker are not members of the Press-Writers' Association, as yet, and I felt some fear lest they would be insulted at being unceremoniously called upon to write in any other than their favorite paper on their special subject. But "nothing ventured, nothing gained," is my rule, and I thought it possible that my expressions in Lucifer might have stirred them up to the new need of the hour.

The "Enquirer" of June 27 was the grandest issue, considered from a reform point, that the paper ever issued. In it were four up-to-date articles on marriage and divorce. Lloyd and Walker were there in all their glory, a Massachusetts lady did nobly and I was there in one of my characteristic documents, involving sects and persons, with names and addresses. The four articles gave evidence of having been written by persons who meant business. They were in strong contrast to the gossipy articles of the average writers for the paper. They will be eye-openers to tens of thousands of people. All the writing that Lloyd and Walker have done for the liberal press for th past five years will in no way equal in its results what has here been accomplished. It is grand!

Now, in the same "Enquirer" of June 27 there was an old moss-back who needed answering. We four can hardly expect another immediate hearing and there ought to be about four more of Lucifer's best writers to whom I could send the article for reply; but here I am prevented by the lack of their addresses. Now, I would propose that Lucifer's best writers, who appreciate this work, send me their names and addresses and let me give them something to do along lines that will wake the country. The time is ripe for it. I acknowledge that sex questions are the very first to be discussed by reformers; but I say that Lucifer and its able ones are in no wise doing their duty at present.

There is not much danger of anybody answering me in the "Enquirer," but it may be the other three partners in this pie may be answered by some who will raise their hands in holy horror. How grand it would be just then to have half-a-dozen new men and women who can take up their pens in defence of those attacked—not that they are unable to defend themselves, but that surprise and consternation may follow the uprising of so many more in ambush. Then, too, editors are partial to the new comers. They only like to hear once on a given subject from the same person.

WOODS FULL OF 'EM.

There is not a city in the country that does not almost weekly spring some sex sensation upon the country. Every one of these can be made the text for all that the most ambitious sex writers could desire to write on. I have followed up scores of them myself, and have gotten in ultra letters in these connections where such a thing, under no incitement, could never have been dreamed of. There are certainly a score of able writers connected with Lucifer's work that should join in this. As I say, let there be a sex writers' association formed at once and I will give my services to its management until it gets able to manage itself. We want these special associations in every reform. The action of Lloyd and Walker in the above-mentioned case inspires me with the hope that other leading sex writers may follow their example. Sex questions are now before the public as never before, and sex writers have only to "make hay while the sun shines." At the same time there can be such an overwhelming introduction of the subject that the snakes of Comstock will find no openings through which to protrude their slimy heads, and, with some little subsequent attention, Comstockism may be abolished.

I have enough lively matter on hand to fill a whole issue of Lucifer, but I will stop right here and transfer some of it, as I have done for some weeks, to the "Pioneer Press," of Martinsburg, West Va. All I want are twenty men to continue work along lines begun by J. William Lloyd, Westfield, N. J., and Edwin C. Walker, 244 W. 143rd St., New York City. Thanks, Brothers! Let Recorder Armstrong put your names down in a list of Press-Writers. By the by, the "Enquirer" will likely publish the others who have responded to my call.

THE CHICAGO "RECORD-HERALD."

All the faint hearts that think the Press-Writers are not in flouncing anything are mistaken. Taken directly and indirectly, their influence is enormous. We know not how directly we have prompted the papers to come out in open columns for the people. The Chicago "Record-Herald" now devotes one of its Sunday pages to what it very properly calls "The Battle-Ground of Modern Thought." As I understand it, it is unlike the playground of the big New York Sunday papers, on which paid writers disport themselves with their platitudes. Here is what the "Record-Herald" says of its "Battle-Ground" page:

"This page of the Sunday 'Record-Herald' is open for the free and sane discussion of all problems engaging the attention of the American people. Writers of ability will present their views on subjects not generally treated in the daily press, and readers are invited to join in the debate. The fairest, most forceful and most original contributions will be published in this department.

"For the dogmas to be upheld, the theories advanced, or the panaceas championed, "The Record-Herald" disclaims responsibility. Our duty in the premises will be confined to preserving order—to seeing to it that personalities and rancor shall not creep in and that candor and good temper characterize the discussion."

Is not that near to the idea of every member of the Press-Writers? Keep on Brothers, with your incitements to the editors, and in a little while the Sunday paper that does not act similarly will be deemed behind the times. For a long time the sturdy old Providence (R. I.) "Journal" has devoted a page of its Sunday issue to the people.

But the beauty of the "Record-Herald's" offering is that it does it with a bold, free hand. Large headings appear to the articles and all over three or four hundred words in length have appropriate sub-headings, which I have always contended for in newspapers. The writer's address partially accompanies the articles; this is an improvement over the old reticence, but still more improvement is needed by the giving of street and number when the writer is in a large city.

The "Record-Herald" of June 30, gave a valiant defense of Tolstoy, by Edwin D. Wheelock, of Chicago, a Socialist. He sustained Tolstoy in his demand for church annihilation. The price of the Sunday "Record-Herald" is five cents and the able Press-Writer with a five topic can now know where to place himself to the extent of six hundred words at a time.

Sykesville, Md.

A Physician's Testimony.

BY C. E. W.

[This article was printed in last week's issue, but with so many typographic errors that it is here reproduced in correct form. M. H.]

It is strenuously insisted by the defenders of the scientific Inquisition that only the ignorance of the layman makes possible the denial of the great beneficence of vivisection, it being tacitly admitted that there is no excuse for the abominations of the physiological laboratory if there is not enormous resulting benefit to the human race. The impression is sought to be given that regular medical men are a unit in the championship of vivisection, and hence these excerpts from the Presidential Address of George Wilson, M. D., M. A., L. L. D., at the meeting of the British Medical Association in 1899 possess more than common interest. The subject was, "Bacteriological Research and Preventive Medicine." Doctor Wilson said, in part:

"In the brief interval at my disposal there is no subject on which I desire to speak out with more direct frankness and sincerity than the relations of bacteriological research and methods of treatment to preventive medicine. And at the outset, I may be permitted to say that ever since the great Pasteur announced the results of his prophylactic inoculations with respect more especially to fowl cholera and anthrax, I have been a close, and, I hope, unbiased, student of bacteriological literature. I may say, too, that my attitude towards these newer methods of treatment was at first one of expectancy, though I could never see that there was any legitimate analogy between them and Jenner's great discovery, on which they are admittedly based, and the more I have studied them the more firmly I feel convinced that they are based on errors, and are the outcome of illogical inductions, every one of them. That, you will say, is a very strong statement to make, but after all these long years of flickering hope, I am prepared to contend that the indiscriminate maiming and slaughter of animal life with which these bacteriological methods of research and experimentation have been inseparably associated can not be proved to have saved one single human life, or lessened in any appreciable degree the load of human suffering. I have ventured to make that pronouncement before, but in halting academic fashion; I reiterate it here and now with the strongest and fullest conviction.

"I have not allied myself to the Anti-Vivisectionists, but I accuse my profession of misleading the public as to the cruelties and horrors which are perpetrated on animal life. When it is stated that the actual pain involved in these experiments is commonly of the most trifling description, there is a suppressio veri of the most palpable kind, which could be accounted for at the time only by ignorance of the actual facts. I admit that in the mere operation of injecting a virus, whether cultivated or not, there may be little or no pain, but the cruelty does not lie in the operation itself, which is permitted to be performed without anæsthetics, but in the after-effects. Whether so-called toxins are injected under the skin, under the peritoneum, into the cranium under the dura mater, into the pleural cavity, into the veins, eyes, or other organs—and all these methods are ruthlessly practiced—there is the long-drawn-out agony. The animal so innocently operated on may have to live days, weeks, or months, with no anæsthetic to assuage its sufferings, and nothing but death to relieve.

"And what triumphs has bacteriology achieved in stemming the tide of human disease, on these empirical lines? Pasteur's antirabic vaccination is, I believe—and others with me—a delusion. Koch's tuberculin cure of phthisis has long since been labelled as worse than worthless. As a test, even for bovine tuberculosis, tuberculin possesses only a secondary and not a specific value. The much vaunted anti-toxin cure for diphtheria does not commend the universal approval of even the physicians of the metropolitan fever hospitals."

There has already been quoted the like emphatic opinion of Dr. Elmer Lee, a regular physician, of the American Association of Medicine. And there are many others, of all schools of medicine, who join the humanitarian layman in condemnation of vivisection. The solemn affirmations of such medical men are not to be blown away on the contemptuous breath which bears such epithets as "fools," "charlatans," and "incompetents." Nor can this testimony be disposed of by exhibiting the pale specter of the Roman church and talking irrelevantly of "The Movement in Favor of Ignorance." If there is no liberty save in lands "that have been Christian," as C. L. James says, then we need not fear Rome, for outside the pale of Rome there is not and never has been any simon-pure Christianity.

"Institutional Marriage."

BY ELMINA D. SLENKER.

This is the title of No. 12 of Light-Bearer Library. In it marriage is treated from a new, an unbiased and impartial standpoint. I have always said that if one who had never heard of the Bible could read it simply as a common book, it would be at once condemned as a conglomeration of impossible happenings and absurd narratives.

Just so would our institution of marriage appear, if suddenly sprung upon an intelligent and enlightened people who had never before heard of it.

Mr. Harman has supposed a case where an inhabitant of Mars—one of a race far superior to ours—was banished for some crime to earth seventy years ago. This Marsite views the marriage institution, of earth, as something as far back beyond the historical age of Mars communities, as we would now consider the opinions and ways of the troglodites or cave-dwellers of the long past ages.

It is saying much, to claim that this little booklet is one of the most convincing of all the series, but I think it will be the general verdict of its readers.

WANTED: Names of women and men who READ, and who would possibly take interest in the work of Lucifer and its pamphlet literature. Each of our readers is acquainted, doubtless, with many who are willing to hear all sides, and who are not now subscribers to our weekly or monthly publications. Please send us their names, and if with the names a few stamps can be sent to cover cost of postage and time spent in mailing, the favor will be doubly appreciated. But don't forget to send the names. We need them NOW.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer.

Published every week at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

874

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

The Outlook.

It is now high noon of the year 1901—common calendar, the first year of a new century.

Watchman, what of the NOON? What of the OUTLOOK?

Weather Observer Welch, high up in the tall Auditorium tower, Chicago, casts his eyes over the map furnished by the Weather Bureau at Washington and tells us of a little relief in sight for the sufferers from drought and heat in the "Middle West"—the states lying immediately west of the great Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

But while partial rains have fallen, and while the prospect is good for more, the welcome moisture will not save the corn, the most important crop, and main reliance of the farmers and stockmen in this vast, sun-parched area.

Norman J. Colman, Secretary of Agriculture under President Cleveland, says "the devastations by drought in Missouri cost more than the ravages by civil war in that state"—this for one year's drought against four years of war in a state that was one of the chief sufferers during that ever memorable struggle.

Not only in states west of the Mississippi, including the great state of Texas, but also in many states east of that river,—notably Mississippi and Tennessee, the corn and cotton crops are reported as well nigh ruined, while hay, pasture and root crops, also fruits, have suffered in scarce less degree.

In strange contrast with the losses by drought in the great central and also in many southern states is the fact that in North Carolina the crops are destroyed by floods.

Added to the prospect of great and wide-spread suffering among the poor, from short crops, is the threat of a general tie-up of the great wage-paying industries of the country, consequent upon the controversy between the managers of the billion-dollar "Steel Trust," and its allied monopolies, on the one hand, and the "Amalgamated" unions of working-men on the other, involving the enforced idleness of hundreds of thousands if not millions of working men.

As we go to press for this week the prospect of settlement of differences between these great opposing forces is exceeding small. The "Chicago Daily Tribune" of July 17 says, Steel trust has accepted the opportunity for a finish fight with the labor unions. No compromise is to be made with the Amalgamated association, whose absolute surrender is determined upon.

That the steel trust with its affiliated combines can fight labor unions to a finish and win its fight, there can be little doubt. Aided by famine in the homes of the working men; aided by the opportunity of closed mills to advance the price of their products; aided by federal judges,—such as Judge Wing of Ohio who makes it a criminal offence for "union" men to "persuade" non-union workers to join the strike; aided by the militia and the regular armies of the United States in guarding its claims to a monopoly of the earth and its opportunities—why should not the billion-dollar steel trust, under the leadership of major-general J. Pierpont Morgan, win its fight?

* * *

A few brief reflections, for this time, on the above:

If to profit by experience be the dictate of wisdom, what is the lesson to be learned by the agriculturists of the west and south from the disasters of the present phenomenal weather?

Is it not the lesson of CO-OPERATIVE SELF-HELP?

The greatest damage to crops of all kinds in the great Middle West, extending also to many states east of the Mississippi, is caused by the simoons, or hot winds that blow from the sun-baked and treeless plains of the Great American Desert, lying immediately east of the Rocky Mountain range. Artificial irrigation and the planting of trees would change this natural desert to one of the garden spots of the world.

Western farmers have long been petitioning the Washington government to undertake the reclamation of this desert, but our paternalistic rulers need all the money they can raise by taxing the producers, to carry on a war of conquest in the Philippines, and also, in building up an American aristocracy by "Protection" of the vested interests of certain favored classes.

Now, if instead of depending on the general government at Washington; or upon state aid; or upon the charity of the benevolent rich; or upon prayers to a supposed ruler in the skies (as the Missourians and Mississippians are now doing)—if instead of asking aid from any outside source the farmers and stock men of the west would unite their own forces; bore artesian wells; build reservoirs and irrigating ditches; plant trees, grape vines, etc.; cover the arid plains with alfalfa clover that is little affected by drought, and cease trying to raise grain on a large scale until atmospheric conditions should be materially changed—which change would most surely come when the sun-baked plains are once covered with growing vegetation, the problem would be solved.

Having spent many years of his life in and on the borders of the American Desert aforesaid, the writer of these lines knows, by experience and observation, whereof he speaks.

Not to make a long article, the consideration of obstacles in the way of co-operative self-help for the farmers and stock men of the west is deferred to another issue.

M. H.

Notes and Comments.

There are few subjects more worthy the time and careful thought of our readers than is that of bodily health and disease. Without health life itself is of little value. Closely connected with the subject of health and disease is that of doctors and "doctordom." To discuss questions relating to health and disease involves the discussion of systems of medication, or theories in regard to diseases and their cure. It also involves questions of personal right—questions of liberty to choose one's physician or to refuse the aid of all physicians, on the one hand and on the other the question of privileges for a class or classes of physicians that are denied to others.

It is because of the importance of a right understanding of these questions that so much of our limited space has been allowed to C. L. James, E. C. Walker and others, for the discussion of "vaccination," "vivisection," "doctordom," "quackery," etc.

The last article of Friend James occupies more than three wide columns in our little paper. This means the exclusion of many others who would like to be heard on this or some other subject of vital interest. Is it right that one man should monopolize the space that belongs equally to many? Is an editor open to just censure when he declines to allow the space of his paper to be monopolized by a few long-winded correspondents? In all kindness, then, I once more say to all contributors to our columns that, except for reasons quite out of ordinary, such articles as that from Friend James on the "Right Use of a Pithy Phrase" will hereafter be "declined with thanks," by him who now occupies Lucifer's editorial tripod.

SYMPOSIUM ON "FREE UNIONS."

It will be remembered that "The Failure of So-called Free Unions" was the subject of a lecture by Emma Goldman at Lucifer's rooms a few weeks ago, and that a promise was made that a report of the lecture and of the criticisms thereon would probably appear in Lucifer. Miss Goldman reports that illness and press of other work have caused her to neglect the matter, but promises now to reply to her critics through Lucifer. In this week's issue will be found a synopsis of their own remarks as furnished by three of those who took part in the discussion referred to.

The home life, the conjugal life, of each individual, and especially that of each woman, involves more of happiness or misery—also more of right or wrong development, than does any other human relation, and if by a candid and earnest comparison of ideas we can do something towards lifting this conjugal life out of the irrational and superstitious conventionalism in which it is now mired, the meetings of our Lucifer club will not have been held in vain.

M. H.

Free Unions a Failure.

SAYS C. S. WOOD, M. D.

Free unions fail for the same reason that marriage fails, as it is a form of marriage. About the only difference there is between a free union and marriage is, that while marriage is encouraged, upheld and sanctioned, made holy by church, state and Mrs Grundy, the other is a bastard or scab kind of marriage, and subjects those living under this form to persecution and ostracism. It has no advantage but many disadvantages.

Marriage fails simply because it does not satisfy the needs or desires of man for associative life. We have developed, evolved from protoplasm up to our present condition. Early in our development marriage was invented to serve the needs of our savage animal ancestors, who had but little need for love expression and social life, burdened as they were by the hard struggle for existence. The home then was a kingdom by itself; producing all or nearly all it consumed, and could, and often did, exist independent of all the world. As man developed his wants, needs and desires increased. To satisfy these required co-operative labor. But instead of enlarging, developing the family, man being afraid of losing his power, his kingly right as a ruler of the household, worked together in shops or manufactories, leaving the home, the family in its primitive undeveloped state, a kingdom of savagery. This co-operation of labor, this conservation of energy, has by cheapening production afforded opportunity for greater development and cultivation of our faculties, the gratification of our desires; first to the rich of employing class, but eventually in a measure to all.

Man cannot develop wholly one sided; however much he may strive to keep any one faculty under control or hidden, it will find expression at times and in time develop, as our desire to hear a pleasing sound has increased to a desire to hear a combination of pleasing sounds or a tune, and from one tune to a variety of tunes, and not only a variety of tunes but a variety of tunes played on a variety of instruments. So our need of sex love has developed beyond the point where it can be satisfied by one tune played on one instrument, choose we the tune and instrument however well we may. No home, no form of marriage will satisfy developed, advanced humacity that does not supply a complete variety of tunes as well as instruments. This can only be done by associative homes homes composed of a large variety of members of both sexes. In such homes by co-operative labor and interdependence may humanity obtain freedom and happiness, and in no other.

* * *

SAYS A. ISAAC, (EDITOR OF "FREE SOCIETY.")

A "free union" is a failure for the same reasons that make marriage a failure. Freedom is a condition, and the "living together" is a condition which limits freedom and creates indifference. Why is there no question of courtship to solve? Thus must marriage be solved. This makes family life impossible. It shocks you, because the father loves his children also. But often they are not his at all. Under freedom we will love those children most that we come frequently in contact with. I do not agree with Miss Goldman that men claim ownership of women because of intimacy. The orthodox man usually abandons the woman after illegal intimacy, and the lover of a married woman is hardly ever jealous of her husband. On the contrary he rather urges her to stay with her husband—he then has no responsibilities. As to pain and suffering in love, we will never be free from it. We will follow the line of least resistance. If I see that my sweetheart suffers because I am courting another woman, I will do that which gives me the least pain. And this is not slavery.

* * *

SAYS O. A. RICH, D. D. S.

I hold that the love and care of children—whether one's own offspring or whether belonging to another, is inherently an attribute of mankind. Woman may be more inclined to particularize; man having a more comprehensive view of life—seeing that the welfare of all includes the welfare of one's own, is the more prone to generalize, and there is nearly always an attempt on his part to practicalize this larger ideal life.

Observing this tendency on the part of the man toward practical generalization, the woman, in order to divert his mind, and for the purpose of limiting his attentions and directing his thoughts and care to herself and family, assumes the premise that a man cares—or should care—only for one woman, and for his and her children. This assumption I hold to be narrow and short-sighted, and that in the end it defeats the result she is most anxious to secure—the social and pecuniary betterment of herself and her children.

The outcome of this policy of denying to herself and children the society of men who would gladly take sympathetic and pecuniary interest in her and them, is seen in the isolation of families, and in our discontented, narrow and generally unsatisfactory home-life.

It does not pay to thwart nature.

How is it that there are a thousand ways in which I may be permitted to damn my soul, but when it comes to a trivial matter like temporary ill health, the Legislature must prescribe how I shall do it. It is absurd and ridiculous.—Mark Twain.

The Right Use of a "Pithy Phrase."

BY C. L. JAMES.

[Concluded from last week.]

I have been charged with discourtesy in taking something of a magisterial tone towards these dupes. I assure them all I never regarded them as serious opponents—only rather slow and obstinate pupils. But if one of those practitioners who has imposed upon them dares to meet me, I promise to consider his a case in which the rod ought not to be spared. The challenge is a safe one. None will. They understand their trade too well. I am told some of them are round defying the regular doctors to debate. This reminds me that to debate with Ingersoll was a favorite ambition of every two-penny sky-pilot, who would quickly have shirked a corner-grocery encounter with a free-thinking farmer.

It is scarcely worth while to go on exposing such inconsistencies as that between Mr. Walker's insinuation that vivisectors do not use anæsthetics whenever the function experimented on permits, and his most sensible observation that pain disturbs all functions, and therefore hinders experiment upon them. It is scarcely worth while to notice such claptrap as the proposal that I should offer myself for vivisection, or the suggestion that this would not "outrage liberty!" I should be ashamed to retort by asking whether zoophilists are in the habit of offering their own flesh to the butchers for cat's meat, or their own skins (even by a last will and testament) to the community for leather? The best that can be said for such "arguments" is that they are very stale and silly jokes. The best which could be said for the reply would be that it might illustrate what Solomon meant by answering a—promoter of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance, according to his own—wisdom.

Neither argument nor reply, then, is worthy a discussion of matters affecting human life. This, however, is pertinent—that if surgery is to advance, experiments must be made either on animals or patients; whence it clearly follows that the only real advocates of human vivisection are those who oppose animal. Does Mr. Walker perhaps doubt that surgery can advance? When he finds even a quack practitioner to deny what I have said about its progress in the last twenty years, I will talk—to the practitioner. Till then, I submit the evidence is indisputable that vivisection ought to and will increase.

And why should any one who does not object to the slaughter of millions of animals for food, hides, leather, furs, oils, pomatums, ivory, bone, or simply because they are useless and troublesome, object to the slaughter of hundreds for purposes like that of him who brought the angel of anæsthesia to cripples and mothers—of him who robbed the battle field of its chief horror in making amputation possible?

I will tell why I think it is, and leave Mr. Walker to meditate. First, the church, with her obsolete miracles of fol-del-rol, is green with envy at the growing miracles of science—such as anæsthesia. Secondly, "natural healers," who still practice the miracles of fol-de-rol, because they are not doctors, "learned" in the other kind, do what they can to work up feeling against those who are. Thirdly, because the professional zoophilists—the canting hypocrites who keep a market for stray dogs, and call it a "home;" who suffocate unsaleable inmates of this "home" with carbonic oxide, and call that "disposing" of them, must do something to earn their money. Fourthly because it is a weakness of ignorant human nature to be shocked, not by the cruel, but the unfamiliar—by vivisection, not Rough on Rats, e. g.

On this weakness, the church, the quacks, and the professional zoophilists are making common cause to work for "more laws" against vivisection; which, no doubt, a fresh lot of Comstocks would be quickly found to enforce—or extort bribes for not enforcing. If this be not a phase of the Movement in Favor of Ignorance, I certainly do not know the meaning of a plain English compound phrase.

And, in conclusion, though it be true that, in the abstract, the Pope's views are neither worse nor better than some one else's, yet—there are certain old saws about Tray and Snap, about a man and his company, not unworthy to be considered when the promoters of such a movement go to writing for liberal papers. If they had not done that, I have far too much confidence in the multitude to have given them any attention at all.

The multitude consists of "average men and women." They have little "erudition," else they might be Anarchists. But, unlike the dupes of charlatans, they possess common sense. That prevents their believing that the best qualification for success in medical practice is to know nothing about medical history. It prevents them applying the terms "advanced" and "progressive" to nations as old as the Indian medicine man and the gipsey fortune teller. It will not allow them to describe as the methods "of our grandaddies" discoveries which their patent inside papers have told them about as novelties during the last ten years. It enables them to see that the depths of human meanness are fathomed by those who employ vivisectors when likely to need death-certificates, and slander vivisectors when in health. It tells them that the man who says he would rather the human race became extinct than have an experiment performed on mice, is a misanthrope if he would not have his own corns treated by a professional chiropodist, and a blatherskite if he would. It teaches them that the combined trade of dog-fancier, slogger, and "humanitarian," may more tersely be designated as that of Humbug.

If they possessed "erudition," they might reason that "monopoly" is injurious to science, and compulsory vaccination laws encourage the crusade against vaccination. But having only common sense, they stop at seeing that "doctordom" is good and quackery bad. Accordingly, they prohibit the latter. I have not the least fear they will the former. What I object to is that their ignorant prejudice against Anarchy should be encouraged by the ill-judged liberality of the Anarchist press to something not above but below their average standard of intelligence.

* * *

Since I have spoken unkindly of the church, and since Mr. Walker credits me with knowing "a great deal about the distant past" I ought to tell him he is quite mistaken in saying doctors of divinity reasoned that either dissection or cremation "would interfere with resurrection!" D. Ds., are apt to know very little about experimental science, but no class are more practised in syllogistic logic; and none of them ever imagined such an absurdity as that "a god of infinite power" could not "gather together the fragments of a dissected or cremated body," though he could "lift up a body buried in one place!" The church's ostensible reason for objecting to dissection and cremation was that they were disrespectful to "the temple of the Holy Ghost." Her true reason, I suspect, is that she hates science. For why does she object to vivisection now? Not because dogs and rabbits are temples of the Holy Ghost—that would be quite a new idea. Not, surely, because some experiments on these animals are painful—that would be too good a joke, when we remember the Inquisition and the bull-fights. But Mr. Walker is not happy in his interpretation of other people's logic—else he might see that experiments on dead bodies must be limited to structure; and that experiments on function are not necessarily painful—he has himself given two excellent reasons why most of them should be painless—though the body upon which they are performed must necessarily be alive. It is, I suppose, by reasoning like this that he arrives at the conclusion that vivisection means "the more suffering the more knowledge," though, as he says doctors and physiologists aver that "in so many words." I will undertake to prove he has misunderstood the passage—if he can tell me where to look for it.

* * *

I think it would be better for the profession if we all would recognize the fact, that it is better to have patients to die under scientific treatment, than to recover under empirical treatment, therefore use tonics if needed for your dignity and thereby accept no dictating by the laity.—B. F. Posy, M. D., in the "Medical Times," Philadelphia, Pa., and Boston, Mass., Oct. 1900.

VARIOUS VOICES.

A. C. Armstrong, Dorchester, Mass.:—Find enclosed $2.50 for five copies of Lucifer for one year sent until otherwise ordered as follows:—

[Brother Armstrong is one of the most active and efficient members of the Press-Writers' Association. At present he is secretary, or enrolling clerk, of that Association, and this brief letter shows his appreciation of the work done by Lucifer towards bringing about a better understanding, and the adoption of more effective plans of campaign by and among the members of this rapidly growing power in the field of helpful agitation and education. M. H.]

Laura Varner Reed, Ohio:—The dress of woman is unscientific because it disregards the center of weight in the human body, whereas it should conform to it. The clothing should be adjusted in such a manner that one-half of its weight is above and the other half below the point of poise in the body. This point is in the lower half of the trunk between the hips. Disregard of this scientific principle is a cause of prolapsus, loss of buoyancy and lack of ease and grace in motion. We must go back to Nature. We must not only cease to be ashamed of our bodies but learn to adjust ourselves to the method upon which they are built. The attire of man is very correct except in a few minor details. But that of woman is at variance with the principles of natural and mechanical construction.

J. W. Kelley:—I am arranging to open in my store a department of reform-literature and would like list and price to dealers of any publications which you may have to offer. Every author who has any proposition for social elevation to offer will be given a place in this department, no matter what his remedy may be. What I hope to accomplish is the stimulation of public thought, confident that in any agitation that may result therefrom nothing but the truth can live.

[It strikes some of us that this is an excellent plan for merchants to increase their business and at the same time help the work of agitation and education for better social conditions. We shall be glad to furnish Friend Kelley a stock of our books at wholesale rates. M. H.]

W. E. Bush, Girard, Kan.:—I have your little book on Institutional Marriage, and have handed it to the "Army Editor" to read. It is all right. The only trouble with you is that you are ahead of your day and generation. But how would the rest get there if some one did not take the lead? Some one must go ahead and blaze the trees and be snarled at and have their flesh torn by the two-legged beasts of the intellectual wilderness before the more timid will venture upon the ground. As for myself, I endorse all there is in the book. The mumbling of words by priests or magistrates can not marry people. There is but one true marriage—a true and genuine union of hearts. "What God has joined together let not man put asunder" I believe in, but there are too many marriages that God (Love) has had nothing to do with.

Fred C. Furth, Pine Bluff, Ark.:—When I saw your name in the "Iconoclast," at once the recollection came back to the days when in the short period of two years, I saw more suffering and misery in the United States penitentiary than in my whole previous life. You yourself have suffered and bore it so bravely, and, as I see, came out—I hope, hale and hearty—and your noble daughter Lillian who stood by you and fought for and carried on your life's work. When you see her give her my kindest regards. I do not know whether she will recollect me, nevertheless I admire her for her great courage and fortitude. I am glad indeed that it was not my lot to remain there, for I was not cut out to be brutal and inhuman towards mankind, even if those guarded by me were criminals. I hope you are doing well for you surely deserve it. Books have not arrived as yet, but will surely enjoy them, knowing the writer and their history.

[The writer of the above lines was a "guard" at the Federal prison, at Forth Leavenworth, Kansas, during my enforced detention at the same place six years ago. It is pleasant to be thus kindly remembered by an official who did what he could to make life tolerable to one, at least, of the victims of man's inhumanity to man. It was Mr. Furth who was detailed by the warden, to guard me to my home at Valley Falls, Kans., when permitted a short respite to be present at the burial of my wife, Isabel. With characteristic thoughtfulness my guard reduced his guardianship to the merest formality, and was the considerate companion and friend, rather. M. H.]

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. Price, 25 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, will be sent free for thirteen weeks with each order for "The Prodigal Daughter." Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Health Hints and ready recipes. Dr. E. B. Foote's time-tried handbook, comprising information of the utmost importance to everybody, concerning their daily habits, together with many useful suggestions for the management of various diseases; recipes for relief of common ailments, including some of the private formulæ of Dr. Foote, and directions for preparation of delicacies for invalids as pursued in the best hospitals of this country and Europe. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

ELMINA'S REQUEST. Women who would like gentlemen for correspondents and who feel free to discuss all reforms, will send name and address and two two-cent stamps to ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER Snowville Pulaski Co, Va.

Lucifer is Sold By:

W. L. Sinton, room 10, 79 Dearborn St., Chicago.
N. N. Winnegar, 342 Washington St. Boston.
Warren, 327 Central Ave., Cincinnati.
Henry Bauer, 173 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheney, Pa.
Geo. E. Frye, Halifax, N. S., 109 Hollis St.
Henry Heyne, 11th and Market, Phila. Pa.
E. C. Walker, 244, 143d St. New York.
William Duff, 9 Carfin St, Glascow, Scotland.
Paul Robin, Rue Hazo, Paris, France.

For Rent: FURNISHED ROOM, Large; light; near elevated and surface cars. Inquire of Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA

OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All in "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,500 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,268 pages, 400 illustrations, (87 in colors), 700 recipes. Price, Cloth bound, $3, mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

Wanted: Addresses of ladies, free to all that the word implies, especially from religious and mother grundy, that will correspond with gentlemen likewise free. No fee. Gentlemen sending ten cents silver and a two cent stamp receive any one list. Arthur C. Everett, N.-M., General Delivery, San Diego, California.

Typewriters—"Rebuilt" standard machines, guaranteed as represented, at prices that will astonish you. Good serviceable machines within the reach of all. Booklet, samples of work and prices for two cent stamp. Address The Hill Top Agency, Box 129, Springfield, Mo.

Press Writers! On receipt of 25 cents silver I will mail you directions for making a hektograph; invaluable for copying press; about fifteen impressions can be made of one writing. Will E. Mason, 1229 Lafayette, Ave., Chicago.

Wanted By a free couple, who are devoted to literary pursuits, a lady as aid and companion. Reference, Lucifer Office.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1; paper, 60c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF THE FAMILY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

JUDGMENT. William Platt. Every man should read this. Once read, never forgotten. 5c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LOVE AND THE LAW. E. C. Walker. 3c.

LOVE IN FREEDOM. Moses Harman. 5c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MARRIAGE. Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 20c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER, and Other Essays. Rachel Campbell. 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1880. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

RBR
E
ff 802
V-5, no-30
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 27. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUG. 10, E. M. 301. [C. P. 1901.] WHOLE No. 877

THE BRAVEST BATTLE.

The bravest battle that ever was fought,
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you'll find it not:
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen!
Nay, not with eloquent word or thought
From the mouth of wonderful men!

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of woman that would not yield;
But bravely, silently bore her part—
Lo! there is the battlefield.

No marshalling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave!
But oh, these battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave.

—Joaquin Miller.

Will You Lie, or Tell the Truth?

BY ADA L. VREELAND.

The season for planting garden had arrived. A mother and two children, one a bright boy of seven years, the other a girl of twelve, were busily engaged in putting seed into the ground.

The boy looked anxiously into his mother's face and said, "Mamma, did I grow?"

"To be sure you grew."

"But mamma where did I grow and who planted me?"

"Oh, Johnnie, don't ask such foolish questions!"

"But mamma, I want to know!"

"Never mind now, it doesn't matter."

The boy lost interest in his work and soon joined some children who were playing marbles in the street.

Said the daughter, looking earnestly at her mother, "Tell me where you did find us."

The mother said, "I want you to stop asking such questions, they do not concern you nor the garden and these seeds must go in the ground before dark, so hurry up."

What an opportunity lost for a mother to get in sweet accord with her children. How easy to explain the mystery of life, as far as we know it, from the tiny seeds they were planting in the garden. Why had this mother spent her life time in novel reading, instead of preparing answers to the above questions, which are sure to come where bright children abide. Had she never heard of the delightful volume "The Song of Life" which is so helpful to mothers and children?

What more fitting time than Spring, with the bursting blossoms and growing plants to impart the truth to the innocent, inquiring mind of childhood. Do mothers ever think what sort of answers their children are going to obtain from other children who have been filled with all sorts of vulgar lies? Has a child no right to an honest answer? Here are a few questions and answers that are within my personal knowledge.

A young German woman, standing near a window preparing the evening meal, noticed her only child, Rudolph, a beautiful boy of five years, sitting in a little cart, whip in hand, lines hitched to a tree, playing it was a horse. She thought how nice it was he could amuse himself so well, and how happy and care free he always was; and always so obedient. As she looked upon him in loving pride, he suddenly dropped his lines and whip and stood gazing straight before him—she wondered what he was looking at. Very soon he came in and said, looking quite perplexed, "Mother, when you buy little boys, where do you buy 'em?" She laughed merrily and said, "Why, we never bought you Rudolph."

"Then where did you get me?"

"Oh, one day when we were on the farm, your father was making sour kraut and he cut open a great big head of cabbage, and there you were right in the middle of it." Then she stooped and kissed his rosy mouth, looked into his clear blue eyes, patted his curly head and laughed again. He laughed with her, went out of doors, picked up his lines, called to his make-believe horses and no doubt felt convinced of the truth of the lie he had been told.

The next door neighbor had no children nor any love for them. They had a garden. Several months after the lie had been told Rudolph, the neighbor came in leading him. She was very angry and said: "Mrs.——I want you to take care of your young one, and if you don't give him what he deserves I'll do it myself."

"Why, what has my boy done?"

"I have been away from home this afternoon and when I came back just now, I found him with a club just smashing the last head of cabbage in the garden; he has broken down every one; he needs a good thrashing." The neighbor's just anger excited the mother, and getting a strap she whipped her pretty boy severely, and shut him in the bedroom.

Soon after the father came home and hearing the child cry, and learning the cause, he took the strap and whipped Rudolph again.

Then, when the child had sobbed himself nearly to sleep the father said: "Rudolph, why were you so naughty?"

"Father, I do want a little brother to play with and I was looking for one."

X
PE
9L937
3rd ser.
V.5
1901/02
no.30

Then the mother remembered the lie she had told that little fellow.

Who deserved the thrashing?

The neighbor was paid the price of the cabbage but what could pay for the wrong done the child?

* * *

Two young boys who lived in the same town with their grandfather, who was a physician, were often told by the town children, "Your grandfather brought a little sister, (or brother), to our house last night."

Finally the boys became curious and asked their mother "Where does Grandpa get all the babies?" Without hesitation she pointed out to them the rocky face of a mountain a mile away and said, "Grandpa climbs that mountain in the night and finds them among the rocks."

Some weeks later the boys were missing at bed time.

A search was made about the streets; no one knew where they were. At dark it was reported that one of the boys was found dead at the foot of the mountain. The mother, crazed with grief, and other women and many men went to investigate.

One boy had been found, but not dead, as reported; one arm broken and was unconscious from the effects of his fall. The other child was hanging far up among the rocks, with a clothes line tied about his waist and supporting himself by a slender shrub which he had caught hold of. Some men above were trying to instruct him how to fasten a slip noose under his arms with the strong rope they had lowered to him. At last he was saved without injury. Who was to blame?

* * *

Another instance: A mother with two sons. One aged fifteen she knew had very wrong ideas of fatherhood and motherhood. She could not approach him to remedy the evil; and she recognized her own fault in having told him that which was untrue when she had the opportunity of giving proper instruction. She had been watching over her younger child awaiting his questions.

He had a pair of rabbits which he was very fond of. One day a neighbor's dog ran down one of the rabbits and catching it near the barn, was tearing it to pieces as the boy arrived at the spot. The dog was driven away but the poor rabbit was dead. The boy was crying bitterly when suddenly he ceased and in perfect wonderment he gazed upon his pet.

There, inside of her torn body he saw three little rabbits. He quickly ran and brought his mother and showed her, saying, "Oh, mamma, my bunny is killed, but see, here are three little bunnies; how did they get here?" This was the opportunity she had waited for. "I will tell you Ned, all about it; but first let us lay poor bunny away. What I am going to tell you, you must not talk to anybody about excepting papa, brother, and me. We are one family and belong to each other and can be interested in all things together.

Your little bunny was going to be a mother and the three little ones were her children. Inside her body was a muscular pouch, or pocket, where the little ones were growing. Every mother's body has a similar pouch and the blood from the heart of the mother is sent there to build the little ones and make them grow." "Did I grow?" said Ned! "Yes, Ned, every living thing grows from a tiny seed which is the spark of life; I do not know about life itself, but this I do know, you were allowed to grow in my body and my blood made you grow and you did not know it at all, because you were all curled up like a little flower. Mamma carried you close, close to her heart and was so glad all the time; and when you had grown strong enough so you could stand the sunshine and air, then you were born into the world; and you were hungry and cried; then mamma's blood made milk and you nursed at my breast, just as Mrs. Redmond nurses her little baby we saw yesterday; and when you were old enough to drink from a cup, then I did not have to nurse you any more. This is why you belong to me, Ned—because I am your mother and you are my little son; a part of me. This is why I love you more than I do the neighbor's children, and why you love me more than you do the neighbors, because we belong to one another. This is why you come to me when you are frightened or hurt; because we are a part of each other. I want to teach you something now you have never known. So we will see how the little baby plants grow from the seeds."

"Will that teach me more about the little bunnies?"

"Yes indeed. Now let us get some seeds. We will take beans and wheat and when you find a big chestnut we will plant it also."

"Can I get them?"

"Certainly, and we will let them grow in water so you can watch them and some in the ground. Then I can show you every day something about how the mother plant nourishes and helps the baby plant to grow."

Later on the elder brother became interested in the explanations of the growing seeds, and the mother made the "Talks" so interesting that she felt each day brought both her boys nearer and nearer to her.

It is a common thing to hear mothers say "I wish somebody would tell my daughter the things she ought to know, for I can't." How deplorable! Yet it is true that mothers have lied so many times to their children that the children have lost confidence and cease to ask questions from those who should be their truest friend, but go to others who have been no better taught, for the information regarding the most beautiful and sacred things of life. With what results we all know.

How many women there are living a miserable existence physically who will tell you they have been "poorly" ever since they entered womanhood. And these same women, who entered womanhood as they say with no knowledge on the subject, are allowing golden opportunities for instructing their own children to pass by every day. If asked "why," they will answer they are waiting for their children to get old enough to understand." Then they may find the vulgar thoughts and untruths gleaned from other children have already closed the door of their children's heart against such confidences as they expected to impart when "they could understand."

Many girls have their health utterly ruined at the eventful time of puberty. As soon as the parents notice a girl's pale looks, and suspect she is nearing womanhood, they begin to drug her system. All the old women of the neighborhood, and the family physician are appealed to and each one prescribes, and each prescription is tested upon the girl. No need to say more, as all mothers have seen the results. To the mothers who are raising young children I appeal. Make a study of how to meet the earnest questions of your children with the truth. Before your daughter and son reach the age of puberty teach them what to expect and to look forward to it with gladness as one of the beautiful events in their lives.

Teach them physical culture as far as you can, yourself, and if not sufficient—get a teacher—use no nauseating drugs. Have no fear of a decline called "quick consumption." Perfect development of every organ of the body can be obtained through proper exercise, fresh air, sunshine, pure water and plain food. How little the expense! How great the results.

Hurry up, young mothers, study a little each day. Your children are growing fast and will soon be claiming the true answers to their important questions.

A Pink Rose Conception.

BY ADA BERTONI.

A large majority of our mental and physical exponents of advanced ideas on the different new thoughts of the later years fail to give us a solid rock on which to build. The use and power of the mind is set forth in many long, tedious lectures, and while many good points are made, the principal ingredient that would benefit the world in general is omitted, or lightly touched upon.

I refer to the creation of children.

It is a difficult matter to solve the problem of a happy love, when we appeal to the half made men and women of today, whose thoughts are on a par with what they shall eat and wear. With them the question of sex is of minor importance.

The reason love so soon dies out between the sexes is on account of lust and excess.

Many of our advanced thinkers decry the marriage tie, but I hold it a good thing for one reason if there were none other.

Shou'd we adopt the plan of natural selection, and do away with the marriage tie in this present age, the men would finally act as I have seen numerous household animals. While the females were pregnant with a brood of young ones around them, the males would be elsewhere following the Bible advice "increase and multiply". The poor females would have to scratch worse than the old hen with her chickens to feed her family, while papa followed the bent of his desires. Marriage makes the he part of humanity a little more careful and obliges him to care for his offspring.

Say there is no tie and a natural selection is made where both are faithful. The relationship grows monotonous in time, one or both want a change and they usually get it.

The truth of the matter is, men and women do not know how to love. We have few real, genuine lovers, but many of the sloppy, artificial, beastly kind. This is what causes so much unhappiness.

We are the product of those gone before us, and when we consider how babies are made, is it any wonder we need asylums and penitentiaries, and that there is a growing demand for the same?

We are each one to blame in a measure for existing crimes, and the deplorable conditions of humanity, for we are each of us related to the other by ties existing since the world was swung into space.

You will find great happiness in life and can create excellent children if you follow out the suggestions set forth herein, and every woman whose husband will not follow such a course, should not allow herself to become pregnant unless she is indifferent to the kind of offspring she would produce.

For every great and grand thing in life there is training and preparation, and the finer result desired, the greater the preparation required.

Stop a moment and think how our Planet is peopled. We have a few grand souls, but the mistakes, accidents, chance productions that pass for men and women can be traced back to a fierce ungovernable heat thrown off in a moment of passion as means of relief only.

How many millions of pitiable objects exist who were conceived under the worst possible surroundings. Father and mother gave them life when their physical and mental powers were at low ebb, without even a thought as to the outcome of their careless act.

This subject is exhaustless, and I can give here only the basic cure for diseased love conditions.

Should you feel disposed to put my advice into practice, give the rule plenty of time to work, for by following out the mode of operation the right kind of people would succeed us, and we would be benefitted, as what helps one generation helps another,—life is eternal, and we will not escape present actions thousands of years hence.

I draw no line as to your object in union, let it be sexual gratification or the creation of a child, for should seed be planted at any time and germinate it will ripen into a magnificent production under my formula, all things being equal. We must of course take into consideration the health and mentality of both parties, and there must be a constant love vibration flowing from one to the other during the gestation of the mother.

Abstinence prolongs love and adds to its enjoyment, but not the abstinence that breeds degenerates and monstrosities.

You who desire to try my plan, practice abstinence two or three months, but ever be preparing, by that I mean all the delightful attentions that one loved being can show to another, treating each other with the greatest consideration and adoration. Worship each other instead of God or Christ, for within yourselves lies your kingdom of heaven. Let your room be made as charming, beautiful and clean as your purse will admit. Let it be a dream of spiritual harmony, touched here and there by refined sensuous luxury. Use pink roses for the floral decorations if you can procure them.

Flowers play an important part in social events, especially weddings, why not then for the most enjoyable occurrence of your physical life, and when a child is to be created decorate with the rarest flowers obtainable. The pink rose is the flower of love, then why not have a Pink Rose Conception? It is no more improper than a Pink Tea and far more sensible, for in the Pink Rose Conception you bring an immortal soul into being, and in the Pink Tea you create much that bespeaks the imbecile.

All can not afford flowers, but all may be sweet and clean.

Do not have nocturnal children. Sunlight children and those created in the day time cannot but partake of the light vibrations.

When your preparations are complete and the blissful hour is at hand give yourselves to each other in all the fullness and ecstacy of love's keenest pulsations; but do not try your strength beyond endurance.

If all the dear sisters who preach woman's rights would teach the females of our country how to create a fine child, their time would be better employed.

If just a minimum portion of the money expended on expositions etc. was used in the right manner of creating children, how profitable it would be both for present and future families. We would be sure to have children well born.

When children are made right the world will grow better and not till then.

I am quite sure that love would last much longer, if not forever, under the Pink Rose method with both parties sincere and loyal, than it would in the usual careless plan, and there would be this one great advantage, love and its delights would be idealized and hold the highest place in our hearts, where oftentimes under the present low plane of its position, sinks humanity to the deepest strata of reeking filth, glossed over with a polish of hell, which passes for the divine energy of life, and causes the unintelligent to gradually dig their own graves.

Leaflet Literature.

"To Mothers" by Charlotte Perkins Stetson, is a poem which has been greatly admired by many of our readers. We have had it printed as a leaflet and hope that it will be widely circulated.

The paragraphs headed, "Do You Know?" printed in a recent issue make another leaflet worthy of general circulation.

These leaflets contain seed-thoughts which will spring up and bear fruit in thousands of minds and lives.

Will You make yourself a "committee of one" to sow these leaflets broadcast?

Sent for 20 cents a hundred if you can afford to pay for them. If you can't spare the money, tell us how many leaflets you can use, and we will send them to you free.

Lucifer,the Lightbearer.

Published every week at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so-called rom its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science gainst Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for ustice against Privilege.

877.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Twenty-one Years Old.

August is Lucifer's natal month—anniversary month. Twenty-one years ago, as a four page monthly, under the name, "Valley Falls Liberal," Lucifer began its journalistic career. For some months previous to its birth as an independent entitity it had existed in an embryonic state, so to speak, as a weekly "supplement" to the Valley Falls (Kansas) "New Era," whose editor, G. D. Ingersoll, though not in full sympathy with his great namesake, was liberal enough to allow a discussion of "Freethought vs. Orthodox Christianity" to be carried on in his columns. Then, when the discussion became too warm and too voluminous for his columns it was decided by the local "Liberal League"—of which the writer of these lines was a member, to publish a small monthly of their own.

This, in brief, is the history of the origin of the paper now and for more than eighteen years known as Lucifer the Light-Bearer.

Believing that many if not all our friends would like to see the twenty-first anniversary of Lucifer's birth celebrated in some way it has been decided to issue a double number, a mid-summer double number, to signalize the passing of "The Son of the Morning" from the stage of life commonly called MINORITY to the stage called MAJORITY, or period of full-grown MANHOOD!—the period that brings to the American youth the right to vote and to pay POLL-TAX!

A brief retrospect or history of Lucifer and its work will form a leading feature of this anniversary number, and believing that such statement will be useful and interesting to many, especially to our later subscribers and the general public, the request is hereby made that as many as can do so will send for a few extra copies for circulation among neighbors and friends who may thereby become interested in the agitation for as the basis for all rational improvement in man and his institutions.

FREE AND RESPONSIBLE MOTHERHOOD,

Please let us know at once, how many copies of the anniversary number you can take. The price will be two cents per copy or twenty cents per dozen.

Hoping for your orders we will print an extra large number of copies, and that there may be time for all orders to reach us before going to press the double number wil not be issued till August 24, or two weeks from the date of the present issue. M. H.

The Great Strike.

At this writing, August 6, negotiations for the settlement of differences between the Steel Trust magnates and the Labor Unions have once more failed, and now again the word comes that it is to be a "fight to a finish." The "Chicago American" reports President T. J. Shaffer as saying, on Monday of this week:

The Amalgamated Association has made every human effort possible to avert this struggle. Now let it come!

We shall not show the white feather, not even if it means hardships for those we love most.

We are fighting for something other than a mere principle.

We are warding off the rapacious clutch of a trust that would have our children grow into manhood as much slaves as we are today.

We are struggling for the sake of our children's children, for this battle for right and liberty will be felt in generations to come.

At the close of the conference that resulted in failure to agree, President Shaffer is reported to have used these words, addressed to the Steel Octopus, J. Pierpont Morgan:

You steel people admit that the wage scale of last year was unfair to the men. In asking for the increase, we are only asking for what is just.

As to making union men of all the Amalgamated men, we have just as much right to combine as you people have.

Mr. Morgan, you have never made any overtures to us looking toward an honest settlement of this difficulty. You have continually flaunted the red flag in our faces.

In the lining up of the forces thus opposed it appears that the men belonging to unions more or less directly affected will number two millions four hundred thousand. On the other side is a total "trust fund" that foots up $1,-175,000,000.

As dollars represent inert matter it would seem that millions of men could easily conquer in a conflict with millions of dollars, but on nearer examination it is found that it is not dollars, as such, that are arrayed against the men who contend for their right to a share of the earth and its opportunities. Against the men of the labor unions are arrayed the men who have, by force or fraud, taken possession of the mines of coal, of iron, of tin, of petroleum, etc., etc.; also the means of transportation and distribution; also the lands upon which the cottages are built that shelter the workmen and their families; also the machinery, the tools, the mechanical inventions, by which labor is expedited and lessened in wresting from mother earth her hidden treasures.

The men who have combined their dollars and their wits to rob their brethren who work with their hands, are few in number as compared to the workers, but they are backed by the thing, the invisible, intangible thing, called "government," which, though it cannot be seen nor heard nor felt, has such power over men's minds that they eagerly fight and die for it. This invisible intangible government appears to have really but one object, but one reason for existing, and that is the protection of the wealthy and cunning in their schemes to rob the poorer and more simple-minded members of human society.

Proudhon wrote, "Property is robbery."

In the sense that the property of the rich has been obtained by robbery, the aphorism is certainly true.

And in the sense that government exists chiefly if not solely for the purpose of protecting the rich in their robberies of the poor it may be truthfully said that Government is Robbery.

* * *

This is why the millions of workers commonly fight a losing battle when arrayed against millions of dollars.

Whether dollars or workers will win in the great conflict now begun by the Amalgamated Labor Unions against organized and government protected robbers, remains to be seen. M. H.

National Marriage and Divorce Laws.

Congressman Taylor, of Lisbon, Ohio, has made himself somewhat famous, if not notorious, by his advocacy of uniform marriage and divorce laws, for the various states and territories of the American Union. To secure this he wants an amendment to the United States Constitution. The following article clipped from W. J. Bryan's "Commoner," (Lincoln, Neb.,) in which paper it appeared with the apparent endorsement of the editor, was sent us by Francis B. Livesey, Sykesville, Md.:

Not many years ago a citizen of New York left his family, went to Pennsylvania, and, by constructive notice to his wife, procured a divorce. He remarried, became the father of children by that marriage, again deserted his family and turned up in California, where he procured a divorce, valid by the law of that state, and took a third wife, by whom he reared a family.

In the course of time he died, owning lands in all three of the states in which he had married.

In California he had a lawful wife and lawful children. Had he taken them to Pennsylvania, the California wife, by changing the name of the sovereign state in which she dwelt, would have descended from the status of a wife, given her by the highest law of the land, into the position of a woman against whom the finger of scorn could justly be pointed and upon whom the hard hand of the law could be rightfully placed. And the children, while under the humane policy recognized as the offspring of the mother, would have found the bar sinister in their escutcheon and their father's property in Pennsylvania denied to them.

Nor would the Pennsylvania wife and her offspring be in any happier lot if they went to New York. There wife No. 1 was still the valid and only wife of the much-married husband. Her children and hers alone would be in that state legitimate. However pure and innocent either the second or third wife, she would in New York possess and enjoy exactly the same status as belonged to those between whom no sort of marriage had ever occurred, and her children would be classed with the offspring of those who loved not wisely but too well.

For the courts of New York say that the husband's divorce in Pennsylvania is void and that the marriage relation with the first wife continued to exist. The law of Pennsylvania said the same thing about the California divorce, and the Pennsylvania wife continued to be the wife, notwithstanding the second divorce. Of course, neither Pennsylvania nor California recognized the New York marriage as still existing, and California explicitly annulled the Pennsylvania marriage. In the land which the husband owned in New York his first wife took dower. In the land which he owned in Pennsylvania the second wife took dower. The third wife took her widow's rights in the California land.

It is monstrous, but it is true, that if the husband had been careful to keep his first wife out of California and Pennsylvania, his second wife out of New York and Pennsylvania, and any two from being in one state at the same time, he could have continued to sustain marital relation with all three, and in so doing have violated no law.—Congressman R. W. Taylor in "Harper's Weekly."

The ease with which the invasive Comstock postal laws were obtained from our national congress by a religious syndicate, and the apparent impossibility of ever securing their repeal, should remind and warn all Americans who value the modicum of personal freedom still possessed by them, that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

The arguments of Mr. Taylor are inserted here not so much for the purpose of refutation at this time, as to set our readers to thinking, and as a target or text for letters to be addressed by them to Mr. Taylor himself, also to the "Commoner" and also to the local papers of Lisbon, Ohio, which, as Mr. Livesey informs us, are four in number, namely, "Patriot," "Buckeye," "Journal" and "Republican Leader."

Letters addressed to Mr. Taylor and to the papers named, should be short, pointed, plainly written, courteous in tone, but written with the earnestness and candor that will carry conviction that the writers know their rights as human beings and as citizens of the world, and that they intend to maintain them. Especially—as it seems to me—should the ground be taken in these letters that marriage and divorce are private and personal matters with which the servants of the people, in Congress or elsewhere, have nothing whatever to do. Also that the mother, as the natural guardian of her child, should never assume the role of maternity until assured of sufficient means of support for herself and child to make her independent of aid from men—one or more—and thus secure that most necessary of all kinds of self-ownership, that of her body—her maternal powers and functions.

Such being the rational basis of ethics in the sex relations of women and men it will be seen that the interference of the legislator and judge in matters of marriage and divorce, is a gross impertinence, if not a criminal invasion of personal right. M. H.

Notes and Comments.

THE VIVISECTION AND VACCINATION CONTROVERSY.

Lack of space compels us to side-track, for this issue at least, more than one article now in type on the subject of vaccination, vivisection, etc. C. L. James, who first threw down the challenge that was taken up by Mr. Clarkson, E. C. Walker and others, now retires from the discussion but asks a little space in which to take leave of his critics. This final word will appear next week.

WHY SHOULD LOVE DIE?

The symposium upon the question of May Huntley in regard to the "death of love," has now been running for many weeks—if it be allowable to say that a "symposium" can run, and the end is not yet. Several good articles on this subject are yet on file, which in time will probably appear, unless otherwise ordered by their writers.

"APPEAL TO REASON."

Among the journals with large circulation that are now arousing the public mind to a healthy discontent, to a righteous indignation with and towards our present rule of spoils and greed, a very honorable place must be accorded to the "Appeal to Reason," published at Girard, Kansas. Whether Brother Wayland is one of the "I Ams" or not he certainly understands the art of securing success as an editor and publisher. Send for a sample copy of this stirring evangel of the Gospel of Discontent with the old and false, this harbinger of the new and true. Published weekly at only fifty cents per year.

Have you seen our Special Premium Offer? Not a day goes by in which we do not fill orders for Ibsen's grand work. At the present rate our stock will be exhausted before Oct. 1.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Unphysiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition, edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 440 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line" presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story;" 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Girls (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Xclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Sensual Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tradition (G. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Inheritance (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (G. W. Coolidge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 5c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Moralist. M. Harman. 5c.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

It will be long before Jesus can pay his debt to the world, and that only when his friends cease to make any demands upon the world in his name.

He will be received as a friend when he forgets his cross, and makes no claims because of it.

He will become a world-teacher when he ceases to be an authority, a brother when he is no more a master, a comrade when he is no longer a god. —Geo. D. Herron.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Albert Stroot, Davenport, Wash.:—I have just received a sample copy of your paper. I send you twenty-five cents for a copy of the "Prodigal Daughter" and Lucifer for thirteen weeks as per your "special offer." If ever I have a dollar I shall send it to you—as I believe you are with us (the socialists.)

B. F. Odell, Flagler, Colo.:—Enclosed I send you $2.25; to apply on subscription to Lucifer and Heinzen's "Rights of Women". We are now making an effort to establish a community here according to the principles advocated by Lucifer. I think we shall succeed. We are now about making an experiment for more freedom and voluntary effort and less law and official regulation. When we have acquired more stability I will write you again,

V. L. A., Hannibal, Mo.—Copy of Institutional Marriage received. You ask for my opinion. If you wish for an argument on the subject I am forced to say "there is no room." Every sentence you have written has found in my heart the response, "True, true, most true!" My head has kept time to the heart vibration. For many years, whenever the question of "woman's rights" has been spoken of before me I have said: to me political rights are secondary as compared to the right of woman to her own body. In your address every word is responsive to this sentiment.

E. H., New York:—If you do not cease sending your trashy literature (which should be suppressed by law) to Elizabeth H., Willett St., N. Y., legal proceedings shall be taken. Your so-called "Light-Bearer" was never solicited. Keep your abominable stuff in Chicago. New York does not want it.

[It seems hard to get some people to understand that no one is compelled to read Lucifer. The name of Elizabeth H. was sent us by a friend accompanied by the price of a trial subscription. The time paid for had expired and the name taken off the list before the receipt of the above note of mild protest. Whether time paid for has expired or not, all that a subscriber who does not want the paper has to do is to refuse to take it from the office, or from the carrier. M. H.]

Lucetta J. Curtis, Mishawaka, Ind.:—Thanks, for Institutional Marriage. Such booklets sent out can not help but create thought. Woman once alive to the thought that she is in serfdom, and that the marriage laws are holding her there, she will spring to the work of self-salvation. Others may help to a certain point, then she must be able, individually, to grasp the situation and control her own life, own her own body and bear just as many children as she wishes and no more. She will demand of man her freedom and nothing else. Your booklet surely will make those think who have not thought before and encourage those who have thought feebly, and be a good weapon in the hands of those who wish to help the call along. I shall keep mine in active use.

E. J. Paul, Oskaloosa, Iowa:—Here is your long-delayed dollar. I wish I could send you more—"but there are others." I got a letter from the Post Office Department asking if I was a paying subscriber to Lucifer. I answered it. If all Lucifer's subscribers were to ignore the government in this matter, and refuse to answer, how could we circulate Lucifer?

[If Lucifer's subscribers had refused to reply to the question, we would have been denied second-class rates. That is, it would cost us one cent for each copy mailed, instead of one cent for about twenty copies. Lucifer's postage, to each subscriber, would then have been fifty-two cents a year instead of a fraction over two cents a year. This would have crippled Lucifer decidedly, but would not have forced it to suspend, for I am sure Mr. Paul and nearly all the other subscribers to Lucifer would rather pay $1.25 or $1.50 a year for it than to do without it entirely.

But, he may ask, what would we have done if the use of the mails were entirely forbidden us? As the Government has a monopoly of the mail-carrying business, we would be in a similar position to that in which we would be if, after the Government acquires ownership of all transportation facilities, it should exclude from their use all who do not endorse Governmental methods. It is difficult to "get around" any absolute monopoly, when backed by the policeman's club. L. H.]

Ida C. Craddock, Room 5, 134 W. 23rd St., N. Y.—Permit me to thank you for your booklet. I had been intending to send you a dime for this and for Dr. Juliet Severance's essay on "Marriage," published in your Light-Bearer Library; but put it off from day to day, through press of other duties. I enclose the dime now, to pay for the book. Am much pleased with "Institutional Marriage;" think it will do good work among the hitherto thoughtless, in turning their attention, without wearying them by heavy argument, to some of the evils which sex reformers are to-day seeking to overthrow.

I do not, however, agree with what you quote from Ingersol near the end—that to put it into the power of the woman to decide whether she will or will not be a mother, is the solution of the sex question. Bound up with this is another need—the right of the woman to demand that she shall not be used, even by the man whom she adores, as a sexual convenience. Preventatives—even when they prevent, which is by no means dead sure with any preventative yet invented—although they often serve the purpose of preventing conception when it is undesired, do not solve the sex question; they do not insure the loyalty of the man; they do not render the woman less a sexual convenience for her lover, when his passion is roused to its tigerish extreme. My dear Mr. Harman, only sex union in self-control can accomplish this. But sex union in self-control must also be accompanied by a mood of aspiration to the highest ideal, the highest force recognized by the parties, if it, too, is not to be degraded to mere sense-pleasure. The metaphysical is of far more importance than the physical, in solving the sex problem; for sex desire takes its rise within the depths of the subjective being, and is largely worked out there; bodily congress being but the final flowering out of an interior process.

I enclose herewith my office card for oral instruction. I should appreciate it if you would kindly mention in your paper that I am now permanently located in New York, at this address; that, owing to the fact that the frankness and explicitness of my books render me liable to trouble with the authorities (I having been thrice arrested during the past eight years, and having lately emerged from a police court hearing in Washington, D. C.) I am withdrawing my books from the public, and confining myself to oral instruction, which, so lawyers inform me, is perfectly safe for me legally.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. Price, 25 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, will be sent free for thirteen weeks with each order for "The Prodigal Daughter." Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

CHANGES AND CREDITS on mailing list are now made but once each month. When, therefore, our friends do not see the number on their tabs changed promptly they will understand the cause. Our mailing list is now set by a linotype machine, hence changes and eliminations cannot be so promptly nor so cheaply attended to. No loss of numbers, however, will be sustained by subscribers, as duplicate copies will be sent to them at their new place, when notified of change.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
The Darwins. A domestic radical romance. Elmina D. Slenker, 25c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.
Seven Financial Conspiracies, which have enslaved the American people. Mrs. S. E. V. Emery. 5c.
Teapot Philosophy. With supplementary thoughts and suggestions. Walter L. Sloton. 10c.
Ten Men of Coney Island. S. F. Norton. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin, 5c.
Eureka, How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword, G. W. Foote, 10c.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore, 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
The Ballad of Reading Gaol. C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde.) 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice, 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Waittick, 25c.
Occult Stories. Chas. W. Close. Boards, 10c.
Vashti; Old and new. A romance of the Wheel. 340 pages, 15c
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 190 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 95 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 20.
Holy Smoke in the Holy Land. D. K. Tenney, 4c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
Swept Away. A sermon on the sins of our lawmakers who hide behind a refuge of lies. Moses Hull, 5c.
St. Matthew Before the Court For the crime of forgery. Secularist, 5c.
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes, 5c.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1895. Among the Contents: The Old and the New, Ingersoll; What the Church has not done for Woman, Matilda Joslyn Gage; What are Women Here for? Helen H. Gardener, and much other interesting matter. 10c.
Twelve Essays. Frederick W. Burry, 10c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized, H. W. Booser. 10c.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1892. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B. Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers, Illustrated, 10c
Hilts's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Grant. 25c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso, 40c.
The Woodworker's Conspiracy Case. Clarence S. Darrow. 5c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George 87 pages, 15c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship, J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bornarardi 295 pages. 20c.
The Giant Delusion. Otto Weitstein, 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists, Mrs. M. M. Turner, 10c.
The Life of the Harp in the Hand of the Harper, Illustrated. Francis Schlatter. 20c
The Gods of Mizraim. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
The Godhood of Man. His religious, political and economic development and the sources of social inequality. Nikolai Mikailowitch. 15c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh, Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.
Vaccination a Curse. C. W. Amerige, M. D.
Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 340 pages. 20c.
The Proletarian Revolt. A history of the Paris Commune 235 pages. 15c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 5c.
The Teachings of Jesus Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. Geo. W. Brown, M. D. 5c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian. In the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
The Legal Revolution of 1895. By a law-abiding Revolutionist, 314 pages. 20c.
The Sinaboard and Other Stories. Theophile Gautier et. al. 250 pages. 15c
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harmam, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1; paper, 60c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF THE FAMILY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 512 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

JUDGMENT. William Platt. Every man should read this. Once read, never forgotten. 5c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LOVE AND THE LAW. E. C. Walker. 3c.

LOVE IN FREEDOM. Moses Harman. 5c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MARRIAGE. Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 296 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER, and Other Essays. Rachel Campbell. 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

RBR
E
f#803
v.5, no.28
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 28. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JULY 27, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 875

IN THE FAIR FUTURE.

"Fair the crown the Cause hath for you,
Well to die or well to live;
Through the battle, through the tangle,
Peace to gain and peace to give."

Ah, it may be! Oft me seemeth,
In the days that yet shall be,
When no slave of gold abideth
'Twixt the breadth of sea to sea.

Oft, when men and maids are merry,
Ere the sunlight leaves the earth,
And they bless the day beloved,
All too short for all their mirth—

Some shall pause awhile and ponder
On the bitter days of old,
Ere the toil of strife and battle
Overthrew the curse of gold.

Then 'twixt lips of loved and lover,
Solemn thoughts of us shall rise;
We who once were fools and dreamers,
Then shall be the brave and wise.

—William Morris.

Neither Sacred Nor Moral.

BY AUGUST BEBEL.

"Marriage is the basis of the family, the family is the basis of the State; if you attack marriage you attack society and the State and undermine both," exclaim the advocates of the present "order" of things. Certainly, marriage is the basis of social development. But we must ascertain which form of marriage is the more moral, or, in other words, more likely to conduce to the advantage of humanity in all its phases, a marriage founded on the bourgeois idea of property, and therefore compulsory, with its many attendant evils and mostly imperfect realization of its object, a social institution beyond the reach of millions, or a marriage founded on the free, untrammeled choice of love, such as only possible in a Socialistic society.

Even John Stuart Mill, whom no one will suspect of being a communist, declares "Marriage is at the present day the only actual form of serfdom recognized by law."

According to the doctrine of Kant, man and woman together represent an entire being. The healthy development of the race depends on the moral union of the sexes. The natural exercise of the sexual functions is a necessity for the healthy development of the individual, whether man or woman. But as man is not only an animal but also a human being, his strongest and most vehement impulse cannot be fully satisfied by mere physical gratification; he feels the need of mental affinity to the being with whom he unites himself. When this is absent, sexual intercourse becomes purely mechanical and is rightly stigmatized as immoral. Such intercourse cannot fulfill the requirements of a higher humanity, that seeks to ennoble a relationship based on purely physical laws by the mutual personal attraction of two sexual beings. The man of finer mold demands that this mutual attraction should outlive the consummation of the sexual act, and extend its elevating influence to the beings called into existence by that act.

It is therefore consideration of the offspring, duties towards it and pleasure in it, which, under the most various social forms, first causes the amatory relationship of two beings to become permanent. Every couple which desires to unite in sexual intercourse should ask itself whether its reciprocal bodily and mental qualities are capable of advantageous intermingling. The reply can only be an unbiased one under two conditions. Firstly, the removal of every interest foreign to the proper purpose of union, namely, gratification of the natural instincts and the perpetuation of the individual in the propagation of the race; and secondly, a measure of discernment sufficient to bridle the blindness of passion. As both these conditions, in our modern society, are more frequently absent than not, it follows as a matter of course that our modern marriage is very far from fulfilling its true purpose and has therefore no claim to be regarded as either sacred or moral.

It is impossible to prove statistically how large a number of marriages are concluded in the present day on a basis the reverse of that described above. It is in the interest of those concerned to let their union appear to the world other than that which it really is. Nor has the modern State, as the representative of Society, any occasion to institute researches the result of which might throw a curious light on its own proceedings. The principles which the State lays down with regard to the marriage of numerous categories of its own servants and officials will not bear the application of a standard which the same State declares obligatory in other cases.

We agree that the matrimonial union should only be entered upon by two persons inspired by mutual love, for the purpose of exercising their natural functions. This motive is rarely pure and unalloyed. On the contrary, marriage is regarded by most women as a kind of almshouse into which they must obtain admittance at all cost, while the man, for his part, generally counts up the pecuniary advantages of marriage with the greatest exactitude. And even into those marriages in which low and egotistic motives have had no place, the stern reality of life introduces so many elements of disturbance and dissolution, that they but

Per
21937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.28

rarely fulfill the hopes of youthful enthusiasm and passion.

And very naturally. If married life is to afford satisfaction to both husband and wife, not only mutual love and respect must be present, but also the certainty of possessing that measure of the necessities and agreeables of life which they consider indispensable for themselves and their children. Gnawing anxiety, the hard struggle for existence, are the first nails in the coffin of matrimonial happiness and content. And the more fruitful the union is, in other words, the more the natural purpose of marriage is accomplished, the more pressing does the anxiety become. The peasant, who congratulates himself on the birth of every calf, who counts with complacency his litter of young pigs, and reports the number smiling to his neighbor,—the same peasant listens gloomily when he hears that his wife has brought him an addition to the small number of children that he hopes to rear, and all the more gloomily if the newborn child has the misfortune to be a girl.

The simple fact that the birth of a human being, the image of God, as religious people say, is in so many cases regarded as of very much less importance than that of a domestic animal, proves the degraded condition in which we live. And here again, it is chiefly the female sex that suffers. In many respects there is little difference between our ideas and those of ancient and modern barbarisms. The barbarians put their superfluous girls to death, and most girls were superfluous, in times when wars of extermination were the order of the day. We are too civilized to kill our daughters, but we mostly treat them as pariahs in society and in the family. Man, as the stronger, drives them back everywhere in the struggle for existence, and when, nevertheless, the instinct of self-preservation forces them to compete, they only too often meet the hate and persecution of the more powerful sex, which fears their competition. In this respect all trades and professions are alike. When short-sighted workmen seek to forbid the employment of women altogether—the demand was made, for instance, in 1877 at the Congress of French Working Men, but rejected by a large majority—their narrow-mindedness is excusable, for they support their demand by pointing to the undeniable fact that the increasing employment of female labor is entirely destroying the family life of the workmen, and that a consequent degeneration of the race is inevitable. But prohibition is impossible. Hundreds and thousands of women are compelled to seek work in factories and in many other branches in order to keep soul and body together. Even married women are forced to take part in the competitive struggle, to supplement the earnings of the husband, who is more often than not unable to support the family alone.—Woman in the Past, Present and Future.

More About the Press-Writers—No. VIII.

BY FRANCIS B. LIVESEY.

SOUTH OPPOSES NATIONAL DIVORCE LAW.

The "Washington Post" recently asked:

"Is the South going to abandon opposition to centralization? Is the solidified Democracy of that section making up its mind to surrender to the central government powers which, not having been 'delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited to the States, are reserved to the States, respectively, or the people?' This inquiry is suggested by the recent accession of several leading newspapers in the South to the small number of journals that advocate national control of marriage and divorce."

To this the "Virginian-Pilot" of Norfolk, of July 2, promptly replied along a line that will make the liberty-lover look to the South for aid in the coming battle against national control of marriage and divorce. It said:

"The South is not 'going to abandon opposition to centralization.' If the 'Post' desires confirmation of that assertion it will find it in the very cool reception given in the South to the proposition that trusts be controlled by means of a federal charter law. Strong as is the anti-trust sentiment in the South, it was perfectly plain to any close observer that the surrender of State prerogative involved in the proposition made it extremely distasteful to Southerners.

"The same may be said of the proposition to control marriage and divorce through federal legislation. It cannot command a corporal's guard as a following in the South. The 'leading newspapers' that have joined in the clamor for a federal marriage and divorce law doubtless regard the question—as it is—as purely academic and one that cannot, therefore, entail unpleasant consequences upon the country or the newspapers.

"It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that the dominant political sentiment of the South today is anti-federal. There is nothing that so rouses a Southerner as a hint of federal interference in the State affairs. No; the South is not by any means ready to abandon its opposition to centralization."

The "Pilot" is a staunch Democratic paper and as Representative Taylor of Lisbon, Ohio, is a Republican, we can know that the Democrats are the most likely to oppose Mr. Taylor's efforts on behalf of a uniform marriage and divorce law.

The "Pilot," by the by, is one of the very few Southern papers that, as yet, sees the wisdom in allowing the people to have their "free speech" in the press. At the head of its "People's Forum" it says:

"The 'People's Forum' being freely open to all parties, classes, persons, views and capacities, the 'Virginian-Pilot' is responsible for none of the statements nor opinions expressed therein, nor for the style in which they are set forth. The ignorant and uneducated shall be heard here equally with the learned."

This beats the world. Every daily should imitate it. The "Pilot" is three cents a copy. Let the Press-Writers remember it when they want to reach the South. Each writer addresses it as suits his fancy.

The "Appeal to Reason" Girard, Kansas, of June 29, gave an article from the "Pilot" on "The Drift Toward Socialism." The same issue also gave one from the "Philadelphia Record" by Carroll D. Wright, on "The Economic Trend Toward Socialism." The "Appeal" now has 154,480 subscribers.

HE MARRIED 3,500 COUPLES.

About as fine a specimen of an old, self righteous minister as we can find is the Rev. W. L. Meese, "the marrying parson," of Waterloo, Ind. He has a matrimonial association of which he was the minister and he has married 3,500 couples; as many more he has turned away. The marriage and divorce of the present day is not what he has been used to for the past seventy-five years, and he has kicked. His fame has gone all over the country and it is time he was given to understand that Jesus Christ never delegated him to fill his pocket by any such process, and that present conditions are such as to make of him a back number. I addressed him an "open letter" through the "Waterloo (Ind.) Press." The editor acknowledged the receipt of my letter by sending me a copy of his issue of June 20, in which Rev. Meese was set forth in all his matrimonial glory, both in type and pictures. Then, in the next issue of his paper, on June 27, he printed my letter next to the editorial column. As it is necessary to show the able writers how simply such letters must be written, I think it worth while to here give my letter.

"DEAR SIR:—'Grit' of Williamsport, Pa., of June 23, gives a column devoted to you and your marriage work. You are in vulgar parlance, 'the last of the Mohicans.' Our educational system has prepared all the country for anything but proper marriage. All you ministers foster it, hence you are all responsible for the divorces. Nothing causes them more than chaos in the homes. Homes cannot be happy where the wives know little or nothing of how to cook, scrub, wash or iron. Girls are educated to everything but practical household duties. The most casual observer can see that divorce has kept pace with education.

"A Common Law Marriage Bill has just become law in New York. Of two evils the legislators thought they better allow the people to choose the lesser. They now have it that a couple can sign a paper in the presence of one or more witnesses, then live together for six months. If at the end of that time they find they have made a mistake they separate, each can marry again. If before the six months are up, they find they can get along, they take their little paper and have it recorded at the court,—that settles it. No minister gets a fee. What do you think of that?

"This plan will save abortion, infanticide, suicide, poisoning and murdering in large degree. Of course, there will be no God-joining together in a way that man should not put asunder. It will be 'awful' for a girl to be sent to her mother's home shortly to become a mother, but don't forget it is better to have one child in peace, under a mother's roof, than a dozen under a roof where unhappiness reigns and anything up to murder may happen at any moment.

"Then, there is Prof. George D. Herron; he says your kind of marriage is a failure, and he takes a wife under another plan entirely. Verily, you will be a very sad man if the capers of the present generation are allowed to go on. But you have educated the people up to it and you are reaping just what you ministers and the educators have sown. I will answer any of your questions on the subject." FRANCIS B. LIVESEY.

Sykesville, Md.

Now, it will not at all be amiss for any writer to follow up this letter to the "Press," or to Rev. Meese himself. We may rest assured that there is no small sensation in his town. It is to all these old veterans in the hypocritical circus that reformers must address themselves. Like the "Press," we must pick off the officers of the enemy. Let it be remembered that Rev. Meese is a fighter. His "Meese Matrimonial Association" stands pledged for a uniform divorce law. He had a reunion in his town recently and "nearly four thousand couples all agreed to work for reform of the marriage and divorce laws." We can thus see the desirability of sequestrating the old general by the many press processes at our command.

THE MAN WE ARE LOOKING FOR.

He is Rev. Albert T. Shields, Rector of the church of the Redeemer, Boston. In the "Philadelphia Sunday Times" of June 30, he had an article under the caption of "Let Discussion of the Marriage Question Continue." Let me dialogue:

Shields: There cannot be too much or too constant discussion of the marriage question. It, of all questions before the public today, is by far the most important and most far-reaching in its consequences for civilization.

Livesey: Just so! But the "Times" wont discuss worth a cent. I have written Rev. Shields to join the Press-Writers and be put in a position to have all the discussion he wants. I also wrote the "Times" deploring its littleness in not allowing discussion and stating that I know one dozen able men who could quickly reply to Rev. Shields.

S.: Discussion brings to light the common conscience of the people, if on the special point there happens to become, and, if it be but crude and unformed, chaotic and indefinite, it is by the clarifying process of discussion that it comes to take definite shape, and its blind intuitions become conscious convictions. It is one of the best means of education.

L.: Fine, indeed, that! Verily the world moves. Rev. Shields must have been reading Brother Groh's circular 2900. Let him at once preach this doctrine to the church papers, as we are already preaching it to the secular press. I have written Rev. Shields to get the "Cincinnati Weekly Enquirer" of June 27 and read Lloyd, Walker and the rest who there give just such men as he all they want to think about. The articles in that issue, published in pamphlet form, would be instructive reading for all vaunting clergymen. My production of that occasion has appeared in circular form and I regret being too poor to strike off a pamphlet from the whole.

S.: "Let such discussion continue and hasty marriages will be discouraged as much by the fear of public disfavor in case of failure, as they are now thought by many to be encouraged by facility of divorce. Let it continue until ministers of the gospel who shamelessly advertise their willingness to marry divorced persons and no questions asked, shall hide their diminished heads in shame and mortification.

"Let it continue until we have less sentimental twaddle about 'affinities' and 'spiritual kinships,' and of 'platonic affections,' and when a sane public will brush aside such sophistries and expose to view the lurking demon of lust. Let it continue until such a spectacle for gods and men as has just been exhibited by the trusted social and moral leader of thousands of earnest citizens throughout the country, shall have become a thing impossible of recurrence, and when one's mind will less frequently have occasion to revert to the tragic applicability of the lines from 'Browning's Lost Leader:'

"Blot out his name, then, record one lost soul more,
One task more declined, one more footpath untrod,
One more devil's triumph and sorrow for angels,
One more wrong to man, one more insult to God."

L.: The above furnishes all the apology necessary for a full defense of Prof Herron. The Massachusetts Press Writers who have access to the Boston "Traveler" and "Globe" should at once proceed to do their duty.

Sykesville, Md.

Criticism and Suggestion.

BY W. F. PECK.

I cannot agree with many of the views championed by Lucifer and its editor. They seem to me distorted and extreme. Where one adopts a hobby he is certain to become more or less narrow and near-sighted in his vision. Nevertheless, the questions discussed by Lucifer are of very vital importance and I should be sorry to see the paper fail for lack of support. I believe, however, that Lucifer, under a different name, and conducted less radically, would have a hundred fold greater circulation and accomplish a thousand times the good it now does in the line of its chosen work.

Even if the theories expressed are true they are "strong meat for babes" and fail to reach the very people who most need awakening. It seems to me that Lucifer is rather an arena in which radical thinkers break verbal lances than an evangelist for the conversion of sinners. How can you hope to correct the erring unless they read your paper?

* * *

I was greatly amused at Mr. Harman's very witty comment upon the sudden conclusion of the story of "Nature and the Law." If the author had not killed her hero and heroine they would have killed her, or words to that effect.

It became evident before the first chapter was complete that the author had begun to realize that she was "carrying too much weight"—to use a racing term—nothing could be farther from "Nature" than the refusal of the untaught and inexperienced boy to bind to him for life the object of his desires. No lover, untaught by experience, will indulge for a moment the thought of the death of love and consequent separation from its object, hence anything which promises to secure to him permanent possession is eagerly welcomed. It is only when experience has shown the fickle and changeable character of most "loves" that men protest against the irrevocable binding together of the sexes. If Nature were man's only guide he would quickly revert to savageism.

* * *

What a singular combination of progressiveness and old fogyism do Mr. James's articles present. His arguments for vaccination and vivisection were so completely refuted by the clear headed E. C. Walker that little is left to be said. However, regarding the humbug of vaccination I can claim some experimental knowledge. Among my immediate relatives—myself included—have occurred eight cases of small-pox. Three of them fatal. Every one of the victims had been vaccinated. While of the two members who escaped, and who nursed the afflicted ones all through the course of the disease, one had never been vaccinated, the other had but it did not "take."

There is very nearly as much superstition in medicine as in religion.

We may sacrifice everything for truth, but we must not sacrifice truth for anything.

We have a right to throw away our lives for a truth, but we have no right to throw away a truth to save our lives.

—Geo. D. Herron.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer.

Published every week at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 60 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, B. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so-called from its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

875

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

The Outlook----Politico-Economic.

The leading article in the July "Arena"—"Arena" REDIVIVUS, "Arena" rejuvenated—is by Frank S. Monnett, late Attorney General of Ohio, whose name will long be remembered as that of a man who could not or would not be used by the combination that now owns and controls the administration at Washington.

Mr. Monnett has had rare opportunities for observing the ways of the men who now pull the wires that make jumping-jacks of public officials, both executive and judicial, in this great Occidental Empire known as the United States of America.

In his article entitled "Transportation Franchises Always the Property of Sovereignity," Mr. Monnett, after going into a somewhat elaborate account of the present plutocratic regime, showing how its powers were acquired, asks the pertinent question,

> Has not the present national Administration already abdicated the throne? Has it not given away its real powers of government to its Hannas and Morgans and Rockefellers, and retained but few franchises, to wit, the right to draw its salaries and underwrite the vouchers presented by the trusts that it lives to nourish?

From the standpoint of a loyal adherent of our system of government as advocated and expounded by such men as Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson, the article of Mr. Monnett is unanswerable, but he seems to overlook the fact, the fundamental fact, that the national government is ITSELF A TRUST! that those who administer this government enjoy many and very great privileges denied to the unelect citizen, and that were it not for the existence of this parent trust, the national government, the plutocratic trusts of whose wealth and greed he justly complains, would have but very little power for evil.

Looking for causes we see absolutely no cause for surprise at the artificial rise in the price of such commodities as "steel, iron, copper, coal, oil and salt"—as instanced by Mr. Monnett—nor at the enormous rise in freight rates on all the leading railways, nor at the general result that "a little knot of talk-gatherers"—one-half of one per cent. of the entire population of the United States—should "grab more than forty-seven per cent. of the property" of the whole people, nor that "one per cent. of the people should pocket fifty-eight per cent. of all the wealth of the Republic."

All this is simply what we might expect. In this world's history "birds of a feather have always flocked together." The government of the The United States, like all other governments, state and national, republic or monarchy, is simply a gigantic trust, or combine, whose chief purpose and end is the securing of privileges—salaries, perquisites, emoluments, for the office-holding class; and the most natural thing in the world is that this office-holding trust should assist other and non-official combines in order to get help in return, to increase and make permanent their own privileges.

PATRIOTISM—TREASON.

The chief cause for surprise in reading the carefully prepared indictment against the plutocratic trusts and their official co-partners in the national administration, is the fact that a man who sees results so clearly should not be able to see all their underlying causes. An instance of this blindness is the quoting, with approval, by Mr. Monnett, of this utterance:

> The way in which these new burdens are borne by the masses of the people is an expression of the highest patriotism, but the way in which they are imposed by these powerful interests is the most ignoble form of treason.

What, let us ask, is "patriotism," and what is "treason?"

Does not our valiant assailant of the monopolistic trusts know that these are the words of all others that are used by the privileged classes to hypnotize the stupid masses into obedience, into quiet submission to their exactions!

Stript of the halo that now envelopes these words, patriotism means obedience to the rule of the many by the few, and treason means rebellion against that rule.

It was patriotism to rebel against the collection of a few dollars by direct taxation for the benefit of the British aristocracy a little more than a century ago. Now, it is patriotism in the descendants of these revolutionary sires to bear patiently the collection of countless millions of their own hard earnings, by direct and indirect taxation, for the benefit of home-grown aristocrats who have not even the halo of hereditary titles of "royalty" to uphold their claim to special privileges—their claim to a monopoly of the earth and its opportunities.

Where do these home-grown aristocrats get their right thus to tax the industry of the country for their own benefit?

Where but in that same compromise between freedom and privilege that gave to the Southern slave-driver the right to buy and sell and work human beings like so many horses or oxen,

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES!

"If this be treason, make the most of it!"

But there is a human institution still more basic than the constitution of the United States, an institution still more fundamentally responsible for the present enslavement of the many to the few, in this country, that cannot be properly treated of in this article. For the present I close by quoting one more paragraph from the Arena article of lawyer Monnett, and would recommend our readers to send for the July number of that excellent journal and read for themselves.

> The real danger to our beloved Republic is not and cannot come from an Aguinaldo hiding in the swamps and bulrushes of Pananay in the district of Isabella. Our future victories will not come from capturing a half barbarian with a silver bait by a venal Administration. Our future glory will not consist in spending $100,000,000 in buying high-priced armor plate from contributors to campaign funds for the sake of $1,000,000 worth of enforced trade, or a small percentage to be given back to us in libraries amid the applause and huzzas of the victims, to keep them quiet. Our future prosperity will not consist in transferring our governmental powers, rights, and franchises to private corporations until 58 per cent. of the wealth of the Republic is concentrated in the hands of 1 per cent. of the people, and the Presidents and Congresses retaining but a moiety of the power originally vested in sovereignty. Our future patriotism and philanthropy will not consist in robbing the widow of her mite by filching one-half of her salt from her table, levying a trust tribute of 70 per cent. upon her oil can, and exacting toll in twofold measure for every mile she rides upon a street-car, and with these enforced tolls and by means of these monopolistic exactions pile up $300,000,000 per year legally, and, to blind the outraged masses, send a check to a ladies' seminary or stand upon the college graduating platform and with a small per cent. of the booty so obtained buy the endorsement of a venal faculty with LL. D.'s.

The times are ominous of great changes in our politico-economic systems, and if ever there was need of wisdom on the part of those who guide public opinion there is need of wisdom now. M. H.

Notes and Comments.

The Chicago Society of Anthropology meets in hall 220 Atheneum Building, 26 Van Buren St., July 28, at 3.30 P. M.—sharp. Mr. Jay Fox will address the Society on "Labor's Discontent and the Steel Workers' Strike."

* * *

Brother "Tak Kak" thinks "whatever is permitted is invited"—and thinks the editorial blue pencil should be used on "irrevelant remarks," referring to suggestions from correspondents regarding the "business interests" of the paper. This may apply to the management of some papers, but Lucifer's platform permits free expression of honest thought on all lines, not excluding suggestions as to business management.

* * *

"Fred Barry's Journal" for July comes out enlarged and otherwise improved. It is bright, sparkling with ideas, and those interested in Mental Science can do no better than to subscribe for it. The price is $1 a year—with two volumes of Fred Barry's "Twelve Essays" given as premium. Address Fred Barry's Journal, 240 Lippincott St., Toronto, Canada.

* * *

Readers of Lucifer who have taken interest in the case of Sadie A. Magoon—a good article from whose pen appears in another column—and of William P. Magoon, will be glad to know that, with the aid of friends they are about to remove to Home, Washington. Lucifer takes this occasion to thank all who responded to the call for temporary help for this very worthy, but much afflicted couple.

HEREDITY AND ENVIRONMENT.

Mrs. Bettie M. Roberts cites the case of "Ecuador, where it is claimed, three-fourths of the births are illegitimate," and wonders whether it be heredity or environment that is responsible for the fact that the people are great in nothing "except blind obedience to priestcraft." Does not the good lady answer her own query? Is not the heritage of "blind obedience" sufficient explanation? Whatever be the environment freedom of motherhood is impossible under priestly rule, and without freedom of motherhood there can be neither freedom nor greatness for the people at large.

* * *

"More About Press-Writers No. VIII," closes for the present the admirable series contributed by Brother Livesey, one of the most active, most nearly ubiquitous, perhaps, of the Press-Writers' Club, an association of volunteer and unpaid agitators and educators that is doing more at the present moment to bring about better conditions in associative human life than any other single agency. Mr. Livesey is still willing to write for Lucifer but thinks a change of reporters of the doings of the club would be beneficial, and so he yields the place to Brother Armstrong of Dorchester, Mass., who will write a series of "Press-Writers Notes" for our columns. While Bro. Livesey's letters are found in many papers he appears weekly in the "Pioneer Press" of Martinsburg, W. Va. His home address, as before, is Sykesville, Md.

IF NATURE WERE MAN'S ONLY GUIDE.

W. F. Peck thinks "man would quickly revert to savageism if Nature were his only guide." Will Brother Peck kindly tell us what other guide we now have, or can have? Is there anything superior to Nature? Anything outside of, above, below or beyond nature—whether spelled with a big n or a little one?

Nature, if I understand the word, includes reason. It includes also intuition, spirituality, "inspiration"—etc., if there be such endowments, attributes, powers or forces—includes, in fact, all that there is! I have heard Brother Peck deliver many and very able and scholarly discourses—since I first met him at the Freethought Campmeeting at Valley Falls, Kansas, eighteen years ago, and never did he advocate the theory or the philosophy of "supernaturalism," so far as I now recall. On the contrary, and in common with most Spiritualists, I have always understood him to teach Rationalism,—which means Naturalism, instead of super-naturalism.

CONVERSION OF SINNERS, ETC.

Brother Peck would have Lucifer's name changed; would have it "conducted less radically" so that it could reach the people who most need awakening and conversion. He thinks Lucifer's writers are hobbyists, "narrow and near-sighted," etc. These objections have all been discussed in our columns often, and are again given a hearing because, as a paying subscriber I recognize the right of the writer of "Criticism and Suggestion" to have his say in his own way.

Having replied at some length to the objection of narrowness and hobby-riding, in a recent issue—No. 871, I refer the reader to that number.

As to conversion of sinners—I, for one, desire to convert no one. All healthful growth, all beneficial changes of human beings, are from within, not from without. Much of the strife, the wars, the miseries of mankind is the direct result of the effort to "convert sinners." Lucifer seeks only to remove the chains of ignorance and superstition so that all may have room to grow, to develop, naturally.

As to change of name, increase of circulation etc. Under any other name the ideas of Lucifer will be accepted only by those whose minds are prepared for them. There are many and widely circulated papers that are doing this preliminary work—educating the public mind up to the point at which Lucifer and its radical teachings can be accepted. To all so educated the name itself will be a helper rather than a hindrance; a help to show how egregiously John Milton, Eusebius and other Christian theologues have humbugged the people by giving to their own "demon of pride the name of the pure, pale herald of daylight," as Yonge puts it, see Webster's Unabridged, page 1621, edition 1886.

SPIRITUALIST CAMPMEETING.

The "Mississippi Valley Spiritualist Association," of which organization Brother Peck has been for several years President holds its annual meeting at Mount Pleasant Park, near Clinton Iowa, beginning Sunday July 28, and including Sunday August 25. Many investigators in the line of the occult, the unseen, the hidden from the average human eye and ear, including many of the active friends and supporters of Lucifer, are in the habit of attending these annual gatherings on the bluffs overlooking the broad Mississippi, on the spot that was once a favorite camping ground of the American Indians. Having spent several short vacations at this noted camp of Spiritualists, and being personally acquainted with many of its managers, in the past, I can recommend it to those of our readers who can avail themselves of reduced fares on railroads, and who can spare the time as well as money to get away from home and the cares of business for a few days or weeks. For particulars as to reduced rates, also as to expenses while on the grounds, address the Secretary, Stella B. Fisk, Keokuk, Iowa, or at the campground near Clinton, Iowa, after July 28. M. H.

A Sketch From Real Life.

BY MAUD ABBEY.

"You think then, that this agitation in favor of larger liberty for married woman is uncalled for?"

"I certainly do think the story of their wrongs is greatly exaggerated."

"You believe the noble men and women who are giving their lives to this cause are insincere?"

"Not insincere, perhaps, but carried away by their belief in the cause they advocate."

The speakers were seated on the broad cool piazza of a pleasant country house, on a lovely June day. A luxuriant climbing rose flung its wealth of fragrance and shade over them, while an occasional contented twitter from the neighboring tree tops, told that their feathered friends were as tranquil as themselves.

They were sisters who had been separated in early girlhood, and were now spending the summer together after years of separation.

"Your life has been peculiarly fortunate, and that is why you are slow to believe in the sorrows of others."

"I am not unsympathetic," was the smiling reply.

"No, your heart is warm and tender, sister mine," said the other gently, but your own life has been so guarded and sheltered that you have not thought that there might be others less fortunate. The fetters which bind you are wreathed with roses, and you have never realized they are chains of steel."

"In the years of our separation," she continued after a pause, "I have known many bitter trials, and death has drawn its curtain over the mistakes and miseries of my married life, and the story I shall tell is not of myself, but came under my own personal observation.

"I have a very dear friend who lives in a neighboring city. She is a refined and cultured lady and we were very intimate as girls. Her marriage made no difference in our friendship, but her removal to another city prevented our meeting frequently. In our occasional exchange of visits I noticed how pale and languid she was growing, and the pathetic hopelessness in her great dark eyes. Oh, Lottie, so many of us poor women know what that means, that I asked no questions and she made no sign. Children came and by their love helped her to make the best of a shipwrecked life. But even I knew nothing of the misery she bore in uncomplaining silence. I had no suspicion of the real state of things until this spring when business calling me to the city where she resided I determined to visit my friend. She received me cordially, and we spent a pleasant afternoon together.

"Her home is in a nice neighborhood and the house is commodious and well furnished for people in their position. Mr. Brown provides well for his family. She, however, does her own work and take care of the children, and the rooms bore many evidences of taste and refinement.

"She prepared the evening meal, and we waited awhile for the master's return, but he did not come. No thoughtful message came, that he would not be be home for supper, so after waiting for a time, we had supper without him.

"During the evening which followed I could not fail to see that my friend was worried and uneasy, so, pleading weariness, I retired early. The house was small and our bedrooms were adjoining, so after the children were asleep, she came into my room to have a 'bedtime' chat as we used in our girlhood days. After awhile she withdrew and prepared for bed. I could hear her moving about for she had forgotten to close the door between the rooms.

"I had just fallen asleep when Mr. Brown came in. He walked about the room noisily, overturning chairs and flinging coat, hat, and shoes in various directions. After considerable noise and not a little profanity he blew out the light and retired.

"Oh, Lottie, tongue cannot tell of the horror of that night. I shall not attempt it. Only one or two of his most gentlemanly expressions, to give you an idea of it. It was the most brutal outrage ever perpetrated. They burn negroes in the south for less.

"A slight resistance on her part and he said angrily: 'See here! I'll bust you in the eye directly'—coupled with a fierce oath.

"'Mrs. Clark is in the other room and will hear you,' she remonstrated.

"'I don't care a —who hears. Hav'n't I a right to talk as I please to you? Don't you belong to me?——you, you'd better submit! Ain't that what I got you for?'

"The coarseness and utter brutality of his language, and actions are beyond description. I could not stand it, I arose quietly and dressing myself drew a chair to the fartherest side of the room, sat down heart sick, to wait for morning.

"He had spent the evening with some friends and was slightly intoxicated. And this I learned later was a frequent occurrence.

"Was it any wonder that she looked old and faded before her time? Or that her eyes are dark with sorrow, or wild with fear?

"And over the mantel in the little parlor hangs the marriage certificate. 'United in Holy Matrimony.' Oh the mockery of it!

"What is there holy or sacred in such a union as that?

"Her whole being, mental, spiritual and physical trampled beneath the feet of the man to whom she is bound.

"And there is no redress; she must go on living that life, or give up her children.

"They are his, she cannot keep them if he sees fit to take them from her, and knowing his power over her he will use it to the utmost."

"This is not an isolated case; there are thousands of them, and while there is one person completely in the power of another, we must battle for emancipation.

"George Eliot understood human nature when she wrote, 'Give any man unlimited power and he becomes a tyrant.'

"Strike the shackles from the limbs of our sisters and in so doing give our brothers a mighty uplift that will bring the race to heights before unknown.

Books Received.

Modern Researches, Physiological, Psychological. In Four Parts—The Problem of Sex; Drug Effects; Vernix Caseosa; Difficult Parturition. Bayer, (United States,) author of "Maternal Impressions, a "Study in Child Life;" "Study of Life and its Variations," and "Child Study." Scientific Publishing Company, 96-5th. Avenue, Chicago. Bound in vellum de luxe, price $3.00.

This seems to be a work of great value, both to the medical practitioner and to the unlearned layman.

Sex and Life: The Physiology and Hygiene of the Sexual Organization, by Eli F. Brown, M. S., M. D., author of the "Guide to Health," "The House I Live In," etc. Schultze and Co., publishers, 334 Dearborn St., Chicago, price $1.

The Political Economy of Humanism, by Henry Wood, author of "Ideal Suggestion through Mental Photography," etc. Paper fifty cents, English cloth $1,25, Boston, Lee and Blanchard publishers.

Lack of time has prevented a suitable review of these and of several other books, in our columns. Selections have been marked for reproduction when space shall permit. These books will be sent from this office on receipt of price. M. H.

In the Semitic theology—the theology of the Jews - there are said to be no female angels. The Jew prays: "Blessed art thou, O Lord our God! king of the universe, who hast not made me a heathen; Blessed art thou, O Lord our God! king of the universe, who hast not made me a slave; Blessed art thou, O Lord our God! king of the universe, who hast not made me a woman," showing that in his theology the woman stands on a level with the heathen and the slave, and that the Jew is better than his religion.—Truth Seeker.

Beliefs.

BY SADIE A. MAGOON.

We cannot help our beliefs, at least I cannot mine. I may change them, but whatever they are at the time I cannot help them. I can however avoid making real creeds of them, and trying to force those creeds on to others.

When I get to be so terribly conceited as to think I have the truth, and the whole truth, and every person who believes otherwise are such benighted creatures that they need a missionary like myself to "convert" them, it is time I stepped off this earthly sphere. I have seen religious and non-religious people also, actually abusive to those who believed differently from themselves. Reformers even quarrel and wrangle over some little abstract belief that had no bearing in their social life or business relations.

I heard one person say to another, one day with whom he had been conversing, and met for the first time: "I am so glad you believe as I do in regard to so many things, perhaps if I can talk with you a few more times I can convert you." If there is one word in the English language I despise more than another, it is "convert."

There are other creeds as well as religious creeds. Creeds in breathing, eating, drinking, bathing, sleeping, etc. My grandfather used to say: "Four hours sleep is enough for any one, I don't care who it is. Whoever sleeps more injures themselves thereby, and in more ways than one, let me tell you. If you, and some others I know of had slept less in their lives they would be in better health today, and not one-half so dull in intellect." Another, a woman, reduced the time to one hour.

One man very emphatically affirmed that wheat kernels soaked in water, and eaten with apples would supply every need of the human system. His wife who felt she needed other articles of food felt herself forced to partake of this diet only.

Another person believes in sexual freedom, but in religion and diet it is: believe as I believe, eat as I eat, and you will be saved. I have the wisdom and the light, follow ye me.

I think that each of us has a natural right to freely express our views and beliefs on all subjects, but to force them on to others is not freedom, or doing by others as we would be done by.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell. Price, 25 cents.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Lucifer, the Light-Bearer, will be sent free for thirteen weeks with each order for "The Prodigal Daughter." Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA

OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages, and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, (80 in colors), 500 recipes. Price. Cloth bound, $3, mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

VARIOUS VOICES.

W. P., S. D.:—When you push the sex question, and it alone, you are on the right track. "Never mix drinks." There are plenty of Anarchistic and Socialistic publications. Let their job alone, and stick to the sex question, and you are doing the proper caper.

Mrs. M. Beckwith, Cazenovia, New York:—I have just finished reading your admirable booklet called Institutional Marriage. I must write and say to you that what you have published is all truth, and I only wish it could be read and appreciated by every daughter and son of earth. I intend to do my little mite to further its priceless revealments and teachings, and so enclose fifty cents in stamps, and ask you to send me ten copies.

S. A. W., Kansas City, Mo.:—I have read the booklet Institutional Marriage, and can find no fault with it. It enumerates the truth in your own clear, fearless fashion, and I only wish there were more who dared to do likewise. It is all true,—especially that "no child should be born except as the result of an over-powering passion, an all-absorbing love. But O how few have such a rich heritage bestowed upon them by their parents! Even those who are well-mated are so ignorant of the laws which govern sex-life that they make dreadful blunders. I begin to believe that my husband is right when he says that we ought not to have children unless we make special preparation for it. For, as he avers there are enough common-place children now in the world.

Mrs. Bettie M. Roberts, Mo.:—I believe in the Christian (not orthodox) religion, you do not; but I call you Brother because I think you are true to your convictions. Since last fall I have been receiving Lucifer regularly. I cannot say I yet endorse free love, for I do not know that love has yet been truly defined. One thing is sure, there is something radically wrong with our present system of bondage, and I want to study your system thoroughly. I have seen some free love children who are as great puzzles to me as the old fashioned orthodoxy has produced. Again, I get puzzled as to which is the greater, and stronger influence over our lives, heredity or environment. I used to believe heredity far more influential over our destiny but many reformers claim statistics prove that environment influences us more. If free love were the remedy for so many defrauded birthrights we should see a better proof of it than we now find. For instance, take Ecuador. It is claimed three-fourths of the births there are illegitimate. But are they a great people? No they are not great in anything except blind obedience to priestcraft. Some would argue their environments have kept them chained. That being true, is not environment stronger than heredity?

Again, I have noticed children of love often excel the children of law; so all I have to say does not prove anything. I do not defend any system but try to learn the truth. I cannot conceive how any one interested in the welfare of humanity can condemn your work, although they might not endorse it. I enclose fifty cents on subscription. I do not feel the least particle soiled from reading Lucifer.

Lucifer is Sold By:

W. L. Sinton, room 10, 79 Dearborn St., Chicago.
N. N. Winnegar, 642 Washington St., Boston.
Warren, 527 Central Ave., Cincinnati.
Henry Bauer, 123 Spring Garden Ave., Allegheny, Pa.
Geo. E. Frye, Halifax, N. S., 109 Hollis St.
E. C. Walker, 244, 1434 St. New York.
William Duff, 9 Carlin St., Glasgow, Scotland.
Paul Robin, Rue Haxo, Paris, France.

Health Hints and ready recipes. Dr. E. B. Foote's time-tried handbook, comprising information of the utmost importance to everybody, concerning their daily habits, together with many useful suggestions for the management of various diseases; recipes for relief of common ailments, including some of the private formula of Dr. Foote, and directions for preparation of delicacies for invalids as pursued in the best hospitals of this country and Europe. Price 25 cents. For sale at this office.

ELMINA'S REQUEST. Women who would like gentlemen for correspondents and who feel free to discuss all reforms, will send name and address and two two-cent stamps to ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER Snowville Pulaski Co, Va.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harmam, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1; paper, 60c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF THE FAMILY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

JUDGMENT. William Platt. Every man should read this. Once read, never forgotten. 5c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

LOVE AND THE LAW. E. C. Walker. 3c.

LOVE IN FREEDOM. Moses Harman. 5c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MARRIAGE. Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

REGENERATION OF SOCIETY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 20c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER, and Other Essays. Rachel Campbell. 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Leo. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

RBR
E
f#808
v.5, no 31
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., NO. 28. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUG. 17, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE NO. 878

HERESY!

Pile high the burning fagots! Laugh at anguish! Curse his prayers!
Stir up the embers till the red light fiercer glows and glares!
He dared to dedicate his soul to independent thought,
And worshiped God by other rites than priestly bigots taught;
He strove to square his inner life to fit a higher rule
Than priests prescribe or law permits within their narrow school.
To doubt their words was heresy! And rack, and wheel, and stake
Preserved God's law against the rebel for religion's sake.

'Mid martial sounds and clang of arms the patriot laid his head
Upon the scaffold's blood-stained block—he had for Freedom plead;
With burning words of living fire he stirred the human soul;
With gallant deeds he carved the name of Man on history's scroll;
He raised the light of freedom's torch where power insatiate
Proclaimed the rule of man o'er man invested in the state—
To doubt kings' rights was heresy! And ax, and block, and chains
Preserved kings' law against the rebel who the state disdains.

The somber priest and despot king no longer mankind own—
Free thought and deed on many fields have overturned their throne—
But still lives on in trading souls their legacy of hate;
Their spectral forms still lurk behind the pillars of the state;
For they who dare to lowly hearts still breathe the words of hope
Are seized as culprits as of old; for them the hangman's rope,
For they are social heretics! And prison, scaffold, death
Preserve Old Mother Grundy's law—the nation's saving breath!

But still the torch of freedom's altar burns with radiant light,
And wider still its beams effulgent dissipate the night;
The blood of martyrs slain was sown beneath oppression's yoke,
But fields already white for harvest wait the reapers' stroke.
Raise the ensanguined labor banner, stained with martyrs' blood,
And let it fly in freedom's breeze where once our martyrs stood—
For heresy is progress! Man at last shall govern self,
And capital no longer be the instrument of pelf.

—Dyer D. Lum.

Man's Inhumanity to Woman.

BY RACHEL CAMPBELL.

When I say that overwork and low wages virtually force working girls to prostitution, I do not make the assertion without having evidence to sustain it. In this matter I "speak of what I do know, and testify of what I have seen." Born a Campbell, backed by a long line of hardy Scotch ancestry, I was endowed with more power of physical endurance than falls to the common lot of women; consequently I have been able to stand by my looms, year after year, while one relay after another of fresh help came into the room, worked a few years, grew sick and feeble from overwork, and at last were obliged to give up and yield their places to fresh hands. I have seen young girls come into the mill, buxom and bonnie, right from their country homes, watch them as they faded year by year, and finally go back to their homes, broken in spirit, health gone—invalids for the rest of their lives. I have observed others, of different make and tempermanent, whose natures were such that it was utterly impossible for them to patiently bend their necks and take on the yoke of hard labor. The allotment of work to each worker is measured according to the capacity of skillful, capable women, and nature had not endowed them with "gumption" enough to entitle them to rank in this class. They were pretty girls, generous, amiable and good girls, but they lacked tact and skill requisite to perform their daily tasks, and failure fretted and discouraged th m. They grew restive and reckless as the burdens of their lot pressed too heavily upon them, did their work badly and were often absent, were found fault with and fined, and at last discharged; and very soon after that I met them on the street wearing the "livery of shame."

But I did not allow my acquaintance with the girls to end thus. I had begun to have radical opinions, and to judge people by their merits rather than by what was said about them. These women were my friends, and I knew the evil that had befallen them was their misfortune, but not their fault. One in particular, a "wee, winsome lassie," who had worked close beside me, I was especially interested in. She was one of those sweet, gentle darlings, who blossom out in beauty and loveliness, beloved and petted by all who know them, happy themselves and making others so, when born into homes of comfort and plenty, but who, in the atmosphere of poverty and hardship, soon sink into infamy or the grave. I won her trust and confidence by giving her what little help I could about her work, her childish helplessness so appealed to my sympathy that I thought of her as my little sister. She did the very best she was able, but each loom was a "harp of a thousand strings," and the strings broke and tangled till she grew nervous and almost frantic. She could not weave, and she spoiled so much cloth, that, though my heart ached for the poor girl, I could not blame the overseer when he discharged her. Then followed a long and fruitless search for another place to work, till at length, hopeless and desperate, she sold herself to a "respectable" married man who for some time had been watching and waiting for just this opportunity. From this to the brothel the step was, in her case, a short one, and there I found her.

I had two motives in visiting these girls in their new homes. First, I liked them, and wanted them to know it.

Per 9L937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02

I wanted to help them to maintain their self-respect, and make them hope and watch for a chance to escape from their bad surroundings, and try the game of life over again in some other way. Divorce occasionally frees a woman from the bondage of legal prostitution, and I would say to every woman who has fallen a victim to the illegal sort: break loose from unlawful bondage, and go free at the first opportunity, without asking leave of Madame Grundy or anybody else. Then again, I wanted to learn definitely something about the prostitute's life. I had become conscious of a great wrong, a terrible injustice, somewhere in our civilization; something that degraded and made merchandise of the sexual nature of woman in every department of social life. I did not then comprehend where this evil originated, nor who was to blame for it; so I investigated in all directions. I had been a wife and viewed marriage from the inside, and here was my opportunity to interview its twin monster, prostitution.

Statistics tell us that the average length of the prostitute's life is five years, but, as to the cause that so soon destroys life, we are left in the dark. We cannot believe it is the sexual commerce, in and of itself, for we know that the same men who associate with the harlot also mingle freely in the home life of the pure, the virtuous, and the good. The patrons of one class of women are husbands of the other; so, unless a "fountain can at the same time send forth sweet and bitter waters," these men cannot carry disease and death to the brothel, without also bringing disease and death to their homes.

I wish I could present to you the picture, as it has been revealed to me, of the perils and persecutions that pursue the foot step of the prodigal daughter while traveling the downward road to ruin and death. Let me try, and perhaps I can show the causes that induce premature death. We will take the case of one, neither better nor worse than her sister women. She has fallen in the struggle for subsistence, and, turning her back on all she has hitherto valued in life, —her hope, her pride, her good name and her self-respect, she forsakes want and accepts shame; leaves a cold and cheerless room and goes to a home of splendor; changes her shabby garments for fine and costly raiment, and eats till she is satisfied, without a fear that tomorrow's bread will not be forthcoming. She now lives in a "high-toned," fancy establishment, one that is patronized by gentlemen who make up our first-class society; she is, for the time being, a favorite with the habitues of the place, and has plenty of leisure and plenty of cash; she is surrounded with pleasant associates, and is courted, flattered and caressed; she revels in luxurious indolence, and declares herself a fortunate and happy woman. Were it not for an unspoken feeling of sadness and shame, when she remembers that she is scorned and despised by virtuous people, she might, perhaps, be satisfied and content.

But a favorite in a brothel is such only till new faces appear; and, because the same forces that conspired to bring her to this place are still operating to bring in others, it is not long until she sees the fond attentions she has hitherto received transferred to new arrivals. She very soon comprehends the "true inwardness" of the situation, and begins to regard those about her with suspicion. Gradually the house gets too full, and she is made to feel herself one too many; so she prepares for a change, and sets about finding another boarding place. She is cordially welcomed in another house; but, when there, discovers that she has taken another step downward. She realizes that she has been crowded out of the choice place, and that she has crowded some one below herself, who, in consequence of this constant pressure caused by the coming in of new recruits, has displaced another lower still. She soon learns that there are as many different grades in houses of ill-fame as there are different classes of men in the community, and that the woman who finds her way into a first-class house is, as soon as she ceases to be a "winning card" there, crowded out and obliged to seek shelter in one of the lower grade; being systematically forced down, down, ever downward, nor is she permitted to halt nor rest until she reaches the very last and lowest den of drunkenness and debauchery.

She is now in a second-class house, patronized by second-class men, and begins to taste the bitterness of prostitution. She comprehends the full horror of her position, and O, if she only could, how gladly would she go back to hard labor again! To escape the terrible fate she sees before her, she would welcome the hardest task, the plainest fare, and endure them, if she must, until death released her. But this cannot be; the door of honest industry is barred and bolted against the prostitute; and, besides, there is a demand for her lower down. The men who compose the lower classes are just as hungry for human flesh as their richer neighbors, and just as firm believers in the doctrine that "woman was made for man"; but, lacking the wealth wherewith to work the ruin of unfortunate girls, the brothels they frequent are kept full by receiving the discarded inmates from those of a higher grade. Every move is downward! The road to ruin grows darker and more dismal at every step, but she can neither stop nor turn back. The power that "regulates prostitution" is heard in the voice of the policeman, crying "Move on, move on! don't block up the way, make room for others, MOVE ON!" and if she does not move on, quickly too, she is arrested, dragged before a police court, fined, and perhaps given a few months in jail.

Nine out of every ten of the noisy quarrels and fights, among the inmates of brothels, are caused by the persistent refusal to "move on" of some poor, desperate creature who is crazed and maddened by the prospect before her. She began her career of prostitution in the society of men who were, perhaps, her superiors in education and social culture; has found her peers and passed them in her gradual descent, and now the men she is compelled to associate with are so coarse and brutal that she shrinks from them and dares the consequences of a brawl rather than step to a lower level. Wild, reckless and defiant, careless of herself, she takes to whisky or morphine, rushing madly on, hating and hated, fighting her way with "tooth and nail" against fearful odds. At every turn she is met by an officer of the law, who hurries and jostles her along, arresting her often and clubbing her sometimes, forcing her on and down until the "last ditch" receives her.—The Prodigal Daughter.

The Wanderings of a Spirit.

BY R. B. KERR.

Some time ago I was invited by a friend to go to a Spiritualistic seance. I had always regarded Spiritualism with a very sceptical eye, but being quite open to conviction I accepted the invitation. I was well repaid for my trouble, for not only did I see one spirit, but I met with a number; and, as there were not many guests present, I was able to get a beautiful young spirit, with long golden curly hair, all to myself. She was full of interesting information, for she had just been on a holiday trip to the planet Jupiter. I seized so splendid an opportunity, and asked her to devote the whole of her time to an account of this great planet and its inhabitants, if any. She complied, and spoke as follows:

"Many people have doubted whether Jupiter could be inhabited, but as a matter of fact it is thickly populated by beings with spirits like our own, although differing very much from the people of Earth in the shape and composition of their bodies. But there is not time to tell you everything, so I shall confine myself to the most striking peculiarity of these beings. You will hardly believe me when I tell you that the whole tone of life and morals in the planet Jupiter is determined by one strange rule, that no person shall during the whole course of his life hear more than one tune.

"So strict are these people on this point that they place the the virtue of having heard only one tune far above those virtues which make people happy. In fact, when you call a Jup "moral," you usually mean that he has heard only one tune. He may be a liar, a shrew, a hypocrite, a monster of spite and cruelty; yet, if he has heard only one tune, all will admit that he is at least virtuous. On the other hand, he may be full of love and tenderness for everything that lives; but, if he has ever heard more than one tune he is cast into the gutter as a thing too foul to be touched, or even mentioned by decent people.

"Each Jup is supposed to have the choosing of the tune he is to stick to for life, and this cannot well be done before the age of discretion is reached. Accordingly it is necessary to prevent the young from ever hearing any music at all, or even guessing at the existence of such a thing, in case it should disturb their minds and arouse a precocious curiosity. The result is that the young of Jupiter are brought up in great ignorance. They are closely watched, cannot go out after certain hours, and are only allowed to read selected books which do not allude to music.

"At last when old enough, each Jup is taken into a large and gaily decorated hall. In the center is a table covered with musical boxes done up in frills of many colors, and each containing one piece of music. From these the young Jup may choose one. Of course he cannot hear the different tunes played over before choosing, but must judge by the frills and the colors.

"His choice is made more difficult by the inquisitive curiosity of all present. Music being a wicked and forbidden thing, whatever concerns it arouses the most breathless excitement in the breast of everybody. Every eye, and every available eyeglass or opera glass, is fixed upon the young Jup as he makes his choice. If he hesitates, and looks first at one box and then another, the onlookers wink and nudge their neighbors, and it is whispered that the youth would like to hear more than one tune if he dared, and who knows if he has not already heard some music! For in Jupiter everyone is virtuous, and would blush at the mere idea of hearing more than one tune; yet everyone thinks that all the others are dying for a chance of hearing illicit music.

"When the young Jup has at last chosen his tune, he and it are at once registered, so that it may be easy to watch him in future, and see that he never hears any tune but his own. A great feast is next held, and then the Jup and his musical box are escorted home. The crowd withdraws, and he is left for the first time to hear and enjoy his tune. In well-ordered houses the box stands on a side table, and pours forth its melody, the walls of the room being well padded. Whenever the tune is finished it commences again, and so on for the rest of its owner's life.

"Many of the Jups get tired of the one tune. Those who have no ear for music, or little sensibility, do not mind; but persons of delicate ear and fine sensibility become distracted by the eternal repetition of the one tune, however beautiful it may be at first.

"It would be a great mistake to suppose that the Jups are as virtuous as they look. On the contrary the young, who are supposed to have heard no tune at all, secretly frequent haunts of illicit music kept by disreputable characters. Those who are too timid or ignorant to seek such haunts excite their minds by reading forbidden books and papers about music, or listening to wicked stories about the Beethovens and Wagners of Jupiter.

"In one division of the planet people have become so tired of always hearing one tune that a law has been passed by which anyone can get a license to change his tune as often as he pleases. But it is compulsory to stick to one tune at a time. In that section a person will have one tune the whole of one year, then another the whole of next year, and so on. But this law has done little good. It was thought that the only reason why people got tired of their tune was that they had got the wrong one, and that if they could only change until they got the right one, they would then stick to it for life. But the result is different. Every time a new tune is chosen it gives great pleasure for awhile, but sooner or later it gets as tiresome as the old one, and another change is wanted.

"This deplorable state of things is causing the people of Jupiter the gravest concern. They are passing severe laws to make each one stick to his legal tune, and many societies of earnest people have been formed to grapple with the terrible evil of discontent with one tune. I had the privilege of attending one of these gatherings. Nearly all the speakers agreed that the only thing to do was to make public opinion and the law stricter. The young must be entirely prevented from hearing of music, and to bring this about it was recommended that a bell should be rung every evening to bring the children in before dark, and that all persons who circulated musical literature should be severely punished. As for the grown-up persons, it was thought that they should be compelled to stay at home, instead of going to clubs and other wicked places where there might be devices for hearing illicit music. All were exhorted to pray without ceasing, and to wrestle with the dreadful sin which was undermining the life of the planet.

"After many of these speeches had been made, I was introduced as a visitor from another planet, and asked to give my views. I made a few remarks as follows:

"'Instead of trying to advise you how to make people contented with one tune, I wish to say that perhaps the prevailing discontent is not such a serious evil after all. In our planet Earth we can all hear as many tunes as we like, and we find that a variety of beautiful tunes softens the heart and broadens the mind. Are you sure that it is ever an evil thing to love the beautiful? Is it not strange that the greatest sin in your planet is a sin of love? You kill each other in bloody wars, and cheat and lie, and hate and oppress one another; but all these things can be forgiven. The one unpardonable sin is to love a beautiful thing unlawfully. Would it not be well to get rid of some of the hatred in your planet before you abolish any of the love?

"'As for your theory that people should love only one tune, I cannot square it with the great law of nature that variety is necessary to health of body and mind. Every doctor recommends a varied diet, and frequent change of air. We love to change the scene from mountain to prairie, from inland to the sea, from town to country. There is no place like home, but we all like to leave it for awhile, and we enjoy it more when we return. Change of study refreshes the mind; indeed, one of our great men of Earth called Gladstone said that the best rest was to turn to a new subject. In all matters except music every sane being will admit that there is no tonic like change. Is it likely that nature has given us one law for music, and another law for everything else?

"'It is not because you have got a bad tune that you tire of it. Nearly all tunes are good, but all become bad if played over and over again without change. In fact we know that the sweetest things are the first to cloy. If you only vary your tunes enough, you will never tire of any; but each will be a joy forever.

"'In a word, there cannot be too much love of the beautiful. I beseech you to hear and love every beautiful tune. . . . .'

"At this point a howl of rage burst from all present, and they rushed at me with one accord. But I vanished from their sight, and returned to this planet."

Miss Alma: "When did you become acquainted with your wife, doctor?" Doctor: "After the wedding."—Heitere Welt.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer.

Published every week at 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so-called rom its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.
LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.
LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.
LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

878.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereo by postal shou d be sent us at once.

Anniversary Number.

As stated in last week's paper we expect to issue a double number, an anniversary number of Lucifer, the leading feature of which will be a brief history of its journalistic career during the years of its minority, having now completed its twenty-first year. August 24 was named as the date of appearance of this Anniversary double number, but owing to the fact that the editor has for nearly a week been laid off for repairs—a temporary indisposition, we all hope—it is thought best to postpone the date of this issue one week, or till Aug. 31.

This delay will enable us to get several articles representative of Lucifer's central work, from old-time contributors living in distant parts of the country, which articles will add greatly to the value of the proposed double number as a campaign document, or evangel of agitation and education along radical lines of thought.

Meantime the request is renewed that our friends and co-workers, far and near, will send orders for this Anniversary number, to distribute to such of their friends and acquaintances as may be interested in the agitation for Freedom of Womanhood and Motherhood as the necessary basis of all rational and permanent improvement of human society.

Another "Markland Letter" Case.

In 1885 Lucifer published a letter from W. G. Markland, telling of a worse than brutal outrage on a sick and helpless wife by her husband—an outrage which, when occurring outside of marriage, is usually punished by lynching.

The prosecution, for nine years, of Lucifer for the publicity given the terrible affair is a matter of history, and need not be re-told here. It is mentioned because vividly brought to mind by the report of a similar case, clipped from the Sioux City "Tribune" and sent us by a correspondent.

In the preliminary hearing of the case of William McKnight, accused of wife-murder, the evidence, as given by neighbors and the physician who attended Mrs. McKnight showed she was so bruised that she could scarcely speak, and could move but one arm and leg, and these only slightly. After detailing the appearance of the woman, one of the witnesses—a police matron—was asked to give Mrs. McKnight's statement in her own words. Here it is:

"She said her husband came home and wanted her to go into the bed-room with him and when she refused he knocked her down and dragged her into the room. She got away, and then he threw her down and stamped on her chest. That's what made her lungs sore."

Mrs. McKnight made the same statement to other witnesses. The physician added in his statement that when the husband stamped on Mrs. McKnight she said, "Oh, you're killing me!" and he replied: "I don't give a —— just so I have my fun." The outline of one of the bruises, the physician testified, was that of the heel of a boot or shoe.

Our correspondent adds details that the paper dared not print, and which, if we should print, might bring another "Markland Letter" prosecution. One of the least dangerous (to the publisher) of these statements is that the husband "frequently outraged the wife before the eyes of the younger children."

"This was his third wife," adds our correspondent. "The others died of too much husband."

The information placed against McKnight by the Prosecuting Attorney accused him of murder in the first degree. The Judge held, however, that, as the testimony showed no premeditated malice, he should change the charge to the milder offence of murder in the second degree, or manslaughter.

So the woman died from the excessive love of her husband, and not from his malice! Fortunate creature! Let it never be forgotten that marriage laws were enacted and are maintained for the protection of women.

When a negro was burned in Leavenworth, for an outrage on a girl, did the lynching committee stop to inquire if the act was perpetrated as a result of "premeditated malice"? Is such a question ever asked when a woman is mangled and killed by a man who is not her "lord and master?" The courts of inquiry in such cases do not usually take time to inquire whether the man was actuated by malice toward, or love for, his victim. The sight of the destruction wrought is sufficient.

I do not mean to advocate lynch law. Nor do I wish to be understood as maintaining that McKnight should be legally sentenced to be hanged. It is evident that he is a sexmaniac, and as such he should be placed where he could not have the power to outrage women. I do not even mean to preach a sermon from the text so apparent in this case. But I do wish to call attention to the difference between the public feeling manifested when the outraged woman is a wife and when she not.

Why should it be less a crime for a man to maim and kill his wife, the mother of his children, than to kill a woman who is not his wife?

L. H.

Notes From the Circulation Department.

If you receive Lucifer regularly without having ordered it some one else has paid for your subscription. If you do not want to read it, please drop us a line to that effect, or return the paper to letter carrier. Lucifer is of too much value to be wasted by sending it where it is not appreciated.

* * *

The advertisement referred to by R. C. C., (see "Various Voices") is that of "The Prodigal Daughter," with Lucifer thirteen weeks, for twenty-five cents. If any of our readers are in a position to act on R. C. C.'s suggestion, that advertisement will be found quite effective. Notices calling attention to the Anniversary number would be very timely just now.

* * *

Two weeks ago, just before going to press, we received a copy of new regulations by the Postmaster General which we construed to prohibit premium-giving. Since that time we have consulted the Superintendent of second-class matter at the Chicago post-office. He tells us that our premium offers are not of a nature to be affected by the new ruling; hence they continue open.

* * *

We hope to be able to announce, in our next issue, some of the special features of our Anniversary number. We hope to make it one of the most valuable numbers of Lucifer ever issued. Please let us have your orders as early as possible, that we may know how large an edition it will be necessary to publish. One hundred copies for one dollar; twenty cents a dozen.

* * *

One of the most active workers in the extension of Lucifer's circulation is George B. Wheeler, 1441 East George Street, Chicago. He is indefatigable in sending in new trial subscriptions, and has addressed many hundreds, if not thousands, of wrappers for sample copies. With a few more such workers as he and "R. C. C." Lucifer's subscription list would be doubled in three months.

* * *

The offer of Lucifer ten weeks for ten cents is withdrawn. It made too much work in the mailing department. In its stead we give Lucifer five weeks for ten cents, and as premium "The Coming Woman," "A Tale of the Strassburg Geese," or "Institutional Marriage." Either of these premiums will be useful to present to those who are just getting "out of the woods."

* * *

Trial subscriptions are discontinued promptly on expiration of time paid for. If you want the paper, please renew a week or so in advance and save us the time and expense of taking your name from the mailing galleys and re-entering it thereon.

L. H.

Crackerets.

BY TAK KAK.

They tell us that the creature has no rights as against the creator. That is from the creator's point of view, and that is where the creator fools himself if he thinks so.

It is too simple, to prove the value of alcohol by weighing a man. Bulk is not necessarily health.

Marriage is a trap invented by man to catch woman, but he puts his foot in it.

When a woman is only half slave and half free, there is apt to be many family jars in the household.

A vote for a South Carolina no-divorce law is in fact a vote for poisoning as the thing that has happened and will happen.

In the Koch tuberculosis controversy, it should be borne in mind that even if Koch is right about milk as it comes from the cow, milk may easily be contaminated by dust containing human spittle.

Another View of It.

"There were a great many difficulties in the courtship," said the romantic girl to the married woman, "but their trouble is all over now."

"Dead, are they?" asked the married woman.

"No, of course not. They are married."

"Then their trouble has only just begun."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

C. L. James to His Critics.

P. P. C.: Since April 20th Lucifer has published no less than five papers addressed to me personally, and together occupying eight columns against my three—not to mention squibs. It must, therefore be on some other ground than wanting space if this very brief reply to all which need any, be "declined with thanks"—or without.

To W. P. Peck, I will say I can prove in just his fashion that Friday is an unlucky day. Comparing a few thousand examples, like a "progressive" doctor, instead of half a dozen, like a "superstitious" old grandmother, leads to slightly different results.

To Rheinhold Starcke, I observe that the Old and New Testaments, the Lives of the Saints, the Catholic and Mormon journals—in short all fanatical religious publications—are full of mental cures which knock the spots off his. That's the right place for them. Leave them there.

To C. E. W. I say, "George Wilson, M. D., M. A., L. L. D." must be a very big man. Did you get him all in? Was not there a D. D. left ashore, perhaps? Anyway, I defy him to answer the same questions I put to Elmer Lee; and if you will give me his address, I will see he gets my challenge. To the laity, whom such "physicians" have misinformed, I have no more to say than that they are imposed on. I challenge the imposters to meet me direct.

To "him who now occupies Lucifer's editorial tripod"—only his peremptory order to quit prevents my showing him, as I said I would, that doctors do not profess to make old rakes young again. That quacks do, he has shown himself. Every man, woman and child, knows it is quacks who write the "Lost Manhood" advertisements; and that it is to punish just such quacks the "monopoly" laws on this subject are made.

REPLY.

From a couch of pain I will attempt a brief reply to the above, confining my remarks mainly to the first and last paragraphs.

1. Friend James' arithmetic is at fault, else my eyes deceive me. Since the discussion of the medical doctor question was begun in Lucifer March 16, C. L. James has had seven and a quarter columns of space, mainly devoted to replies to his critics, while his critics have had ten and three quarter columns. A large part, however, of these articles opposing the views of Mr. James have been directed to the subject as such, rather than to him personally. His name was mentioned incidentally often, rather than conspicuously, as the only person addressed. But is it not right and proper that five or six writers should have more space than one writer? The above count of columns was somewhat hastily made and may be only approximately correct, but am sure it does Mr. James no injustice.

2. I have issued no "peremptory order" that Mr. James must "quit" the discussion of the medical doctor question. What I said was that, such articles as his last, occupying three and a quarter columns of our wide measure, would be "declined with thanks,—except for reasons quite out of the ordinary." This was said in reference to all contributors, not directed to Mr. James alone. Three-column articles are much better adapted to a monthly or quarterly magazine than to a small weekly.

3. If by "quacks" he means a large portion of college-bred doctors I can agree that "it is quacks who write 'lost manhood' advertisements." My recollection is that some of the most famous of these advertisers tell the public that "hung up in my office is a diploma" from a "regular" medical college. I have known personally more than one medical graduate whose practice is largely in the lost-manhood-restoring line.

4. As to Medical Monopoly Laws: I am glad to know that there are many learned and skillful physicians who do not ask for such monopoly, and am quite sure that these laws are secured, not so much by people who employ doctors as by that portion of the medical profession whose greed and love of power prompt them to seek exclusive ownership and control of the business of physicking, bleeding and blistering people, and who therefore oppose all doctors who teach and practice methods of healing that do not require drugs, blisters, the lancet, etc., and who very rarely find it necessary to resort to surgery.

In securing these medical laws the doctors are greatly assisted by the lawyers whose interests are thereby promoted, since the more laws the more work and the more power for the lawyers.

This is all I care to say at this time. Will try to give later some of my own personal experiences and observations among the medical fraternity and also as a "quack doctor" in a small way.

M. H.

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 4.

BY A. C. ARMSTRONG.

July 21, "The Times" Richmond, Va., prints a fine letter from Kent C. Peery, Longwood, Va., on "Religious Liberty."

July 22, "Traveler," (Boston) William E. Bonney, "Mr. Armstrong and the Preachers;" D. Webster Grob, "Single Tax and Religion;" Edward Stern "Single Tax." "World-Herald" (Omaha, Neb.), prints the writer on the "Reasons why Lightning Destroys Churches in preference to Saloons."

July 23, "Traveler" prints Lucy Waters Phelps, "Bible and Divorce;" W. J. Hutcheson on "Infidels" and William Duffney (Paine Hall) congratulates Mr. Groh on his victory over Prof. Moore; "Bulletin," (Phil.), Edward Stern gives a "Plan to Elevate Humanity." "State Journal" (Lincoln, Neb.), William E. Bonney on "The Rain Problem, Shall the People Depend on Prayers or Reservoirs?"

July 24, "Traveler," Francis B. Livesey, "Educators Help Socialists;" J. T. Small "College Men." "World-Herald" (Omaha, Neb.), Walter Breen, "The Prayer Gauge." "Bulletin" (Phil.), Albert P. Lewis "Wealth and Happiness."

July 25, "Traveler," George B. Wheeler and Francis B. Livesey appear in Doctor Pangloss column in criticism of the "Doctor's Praise of the Preachers."

July 26, "Traveler," J. B. Beattie has a round with E. H. J. about the Boers and John B. Barnes attacks the righteousness of the missionary cause under the heading "China's Payment." "Bulletin" (Phil.), Edward Stern "Philadelphia Plans;" J. A. Powers "Faith and Doubt."

July 27, "Banner of Light" (Boston) prints two fine letters from D. Webster Groh and Francis B. Livesey in re the important work of the Press Writers. "Traveler," W. C. Knowlton, "Sunday Laws." "Pioneer Press," Martinsburg, (W. Va.), James B. Elliott, "The Age of Reason;" D. Webster Groh "A Misunderstanding;" W. C. Knowlton "Father Abraham says come to Jesus;" Francis B. Livesey, "Cook and Comstock," "Home Education the Thing." "Thomas and Tice hard at it;" J. A. Powers, "Only as a Back Ground;" and one from the writer entitled "An Ideal Paper" which applies to the "Pioneer Press." "Old Side Methodist" seems to be satisfied that Francis B. Livesey is the name of a live man but still queries "What's in a Name?" "Bulletin" (Phil.) prints a fine letter from Mrs. Inez C. Pratt, Lawrenceburg, Ind., in answer to the writers question as to why Col. Ingersoll's name should be omitted from the "Vision of War" framed and hung in the offices of our national cemeteries. Printer and Press Writer F. Wm. E. Cullingford thought so well of it that he immediately printed 1000 circulars bearing the writer's question and Mrs. Pratt's splendid answer and sent them to the leading Press Writers for distribution.

"Truth Seeker," (New York) prints notes of the Press Writers work from D. Webster Groh, and the writer.

CORRECTIONS.

a. Closz, Mrs. Harriet M. 537 Bank St., Webster City Iowa.

f. Herron, Mrs. Carrie Rand, Metochen, New Jersey.

d. Quaintance, B. T., North Creek, Ohio.

b. Byron, S. S., 393 Cumberland St., Brooklyn, New York.

b. Ballou, A. L., Wellesley Hills, Mass.

b. Varteyl, Gerrad 235 W. 69th. St., New York, New York.

NEW MEMBERS.

c. Addis, Henry, Portland, Oregon.

a. Clyde, Ralph C., Box 390, Portland, Oregon.

b. Craddock, Mrs. Ida C., Room 5 134 West 23rd St., New York, New York.

a. Cullingford, F. Wm. E., 21 S. 7th. St., Philadelphia, Pa.

c. Doering, Chas., Mt. Tabor, Oregon.

b. Ferris, P. F., 125 W. 133 St., New York, New York.

c. Morrow, M. Lena, Gen. Del., Portland, Oregon.

c. Osborn, J. A., Gen. Del., Portland, Oregon.

a. Park, W. M., 720 Ave. D. Bayonne, New Jersey.

c. Wight, Alex E., Wellesley Hills, Mass.

c. White, George Allen, South Framingham, Mass.

c. Swartz, C. L., Wellesley, Mass.

VARIOUS VOICES.

M. L. Lake, New York:—Being one of the multitude, an average woman, having little erudition and therefore possessed of common sense—according to C. L. James I would like to say to him, in regard to a phrase in his article, "The Right Use of a Pithy Phrase," where he says, "The depths of human meanness are fathomed by those who employ vivisectors when likely to need a death-certificate, and slander vivisectors when in health."

My common sense teaches me that the only possible use I could have for a vivisector would be to write a death certificate for me. And as the laws of our land render it absolutely necessary that I should have such a certificate written by such an one, what am I to do? Must I (because the law compels me against my wish and common sense to have this certificate) remain silent while my friends and neighbors are being killed, maimed and rendered imbecile by these same vivisectors senseless use upon them of drugs, toxins, vaccine virus &c?

R. C. C., Portland, Oregon:—Enclosed please find four more trial subscriptions to Lucifer. As Lucifer has many friends who desire to increase its circulation I will inform them of a good method: Advertising. That's it. By placing a small advertisement in their local paper the circulation of Lucifer and its noble work can be materially increased. Am at present running a small advertisement for Lucifer in five weekly papers and people who never heard of Lucifer or its teachings are beginning to arouse themselves by sending in their subscriptions and letting the "Light Bearer" shed beams of truth on the cobwebs of superstition that Grundy has fastened onto their brains. That is what advertising in local papers will do. There are many readers of Lucifer, who for good reasons cannot make a personal canvas for subs who will find this an excellent alternative —and a better one. Because, while, they are explaining the merits of Lucifer to one person the newspaper containing Lucifer's advertisement will tell it to hundreds. As we know, Lucifer has no sustaining fund or organized bands of supporters as other papers have, and this method of advertising in home papers will give it financial assistance and at the same time help its work along. Every friend of Lucifer should do his or her share—it won't cost you much—and it will be a great benefit to the paper. We cannot afford to have Lucifer go under and a little advertising in local papers will cause more people to subscribe for Lucifer and thereby enlighten people who are now in the dark.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New.

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Va., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spensie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an Allegory, H. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

He who sows the ground with care and diligence acquires a greater stock of religious merit than he could gain by the repetition of ten thousand prayers.—Zendavesta.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
The Darwins. A domestic radical romance. Elmina D. Slenker, 25c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.
Seven Financial Conspiracies, which have enslaved the American people. Mrs. S. E. V. Emery. 5c.
Teapot Philosophy. With supplementary thoughts and suggestions. Walter L. Sinton. 10c.
Ten Men of Money Island. S. P. Norton. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin. 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword, G. W. Foote. 5c.
Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
The Ballad of Reading Gaol. C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde.) 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick, 25c.
Occult Stories. Chas. W. Close. Boards, 10c.
Vashti; Old and new. A romance of the Wheel. 140 pages, 15c
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 190 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 5c.
Holy Smoke in the Holy Land. D. K. Tenney. 5c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
Swept Away. A sermon on the sins of our lawmakers who hide behind a refuge of lies. Moses Hull, 5c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Secularist. 5c.
Vital Force, Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1895. Among the Contents: The Old and the New Ingersoll; What the Church has not done for Woman. Matilda Joslyn Gage; What are Women Here for? Helen H. Gardener, and much other interesting matter. 10c.
Twelve Essays. Frederick W. Burry, 10c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c
Truth Seeker Annual 1889. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, R. B. Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers, Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
The Woodworker's Conspiracy Case. Clarence S. Darrow. 5c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 371 pages, 15c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship, J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 193 pages. 20c.
The Grant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner, 10c.
The Life of the Harp in the Hand of the Harper. Illustrated. Francis Schlatter, 20c
The Gods of Mirrors. A tale of Gods and of Men. 318 pages. 25c.
The Godhood of Man. His religious, political and economic development and the sources of social inequality. Nikolai Mikailowitch. 15c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.
Vaccination a Curse. C. W. Amerige, M. D. 5c.
Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 318 pages. 20c.
The Proletarian Revolt. A history of the Paris Commune, 215 pages 10c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes, 5c.
The Teachings of Jesus not Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. Geo. W. Brown, M. D. 5c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls, 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian. In the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
The Legal Revolution of 1903. By a law-abiding Revolutionist. 334 pages. 20c.
The Sideboard and Other Stories. Theophile Gautier et. al. 250 pages. 10c
From Pandemonium to Elysium, James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 2c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socieland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lea. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
v.5, no. 32
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 29 CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUG. 24, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 879

LIBERTY.

Let Liberty run onward with the years,
And circle with the seasons; let her break
The tyrant's harshness, the oppressor's spears;
Bring ripened recompenses that shall make
Supreme amends for sorrow's long arrears;
Drop holy benison on hearts that ache;
Put clearer radiance into human eyes,
And set the glad earth singing to the skies.

Let her voice thunder at the doors of kings,
And lighten in black dungeons. Let her breath
Stir the dry bones of peoples till there springs
Life's fruitful vigor out of barren death,
And, roused, vast millions clap triumphant wings
O'er the mean devils which have hindered faith;
And men's tall growths of excellence express
Invincible, puissant nobleness.

And ye, O sovran people of the land,
Crowned with her benedictions, lifted up
From chaos and low tracts of shifting sand,
And owlish places wherein ye did grope,
To the delectable mountains which command
Far visions of your sanctuaries of hope—
Be ye to Mercy and to Love as true
As Love and Mercy have been unto you.

Behold! the things as possible to these
Which are not possible to wrath; they bear
The secret of the laden mysteries
Piled like packed doom in the thick-boding air;
At their fair girdles hang the mystic keys
Which unlock inmost meanings; their brows wear
The sole serenities that consecrate
The masters of the subtle sphinx of Fate.

Clean natures coin pure statutes. Let us cleanse
The hearts that beat within us; let us mow
Clear to the roots our falseness and pretense,
Tread down our rank ambitions, overthrow
Our braggart moods of puffed self-consequence,
Plow up our hideous thistles which do grow
Faster than maize in May-time, and strike dead
The base infections our low greeds have bred.

—Richard Realf.

The Social Question and Individualism.

BY A. F. TINDALL.

To pass from the religious to the social sphere, we find that here Governmental interferences are rampant. One of the great events of the present time is the progress of woman. In the savage state, where force alone ruled, she was a mere slave, but as savageism receded before the civilizations of Egypt, Greece, and Rome, she began to take a much higher position. This was, however, checked by early Christianity. The Fathers and the monkish spirit of the dark ages caused woman to be looked upon in a most degraded light; her beauty but as a means to lure to everlasting ruin, and her nature as decidedly inferior to man. This ascetic spirit still lingers in modern puritanism, though since freethought broke the power of the priests, woman has risen to a position such as she never attained before. Let us look at social questions squarely in the face, and they all cluster round the great woman question. We will discuss them as freely as we dare, for, to our shame be it spoken, in free England we dare not discuss such questions fully. This restriction alone bears more weight than a hundred articles or speeches on this question. We see a hypocritical assent to established social customs, an assent which all must give or be ostracised. Also a servile press which ever, parrot-like, repeats the old stale moral axioms, however effete, and has a set of sermons ready to blast the fame of anyone who gets outside the pale. This false morality and apparent virtue exists on the one hand, mixed with a fearful amount of sorrow and female degradation on the other. Our puritans are ever preaching against this latter side of life. They call for fresh state enactments; they form their spy societies; they stir up the smug followers of Mrs. Grundy to goad on magistrates and police to ever fresh tyranny; they are full of devices to make vice difficult. So they drive the disease inwards, and make it more loathsome. They preach from their pulpits sermons to young men, though they neither understand human nature, nor if they do, dare speak the truth about it. And what is the result? Espionage, disease, misery, and people of any means being the sport of blackmailers. For though society is rotten to its core, none dare be thought anything but immaculate, so deception becomes deeper, and the blackmailers and spies have a happy hunting ground. Without discussing for a moment the question of our rights, does the method succeed? No! And men of the world can only sum up the failure of our puritans by saying, this has always been and it always will be, and there is an end of the matter.

Shall then a large number of the fairest of creation always be thus degraded? Is there no remedy? Why does the social evil appear hopeless? Because the efforts to remove it are wrong. They are based upon the false notion of human nature, taught by religious asceticism, and on the idea that Governmental law can regulate the most powerful of human passions. The first step is to allow free discussion, both in speech and writing, on this question. The next is to lay it clearly down that the State has no right to intermeddle with the relations of the sexes, except to see that money contracts entered into of their own free will are carried out, and that the children of their unions are provided for till they attain maturity. Just as we have arrived

Per
GL937
3rd ser.
v.5
Gerlach
Dec 30

at a stage in which it is admitted that the State has no right to dictate to a man his religious or political opinions, so it has no right to prescribe for him the form of his sexual relations. In Greece and other ancient countries, though marriage was honorable, the hetairai were not considered the social outcasts which puritans consider them to be. In this they do not follow their Master. How beautiful is the story when the erring woman is brought to Jesus that He may pronounce her doom. He said, "Let him without sin among you cast the first stone;" and legend further has it that he wrote upon the ground the particular sin of each one of the self-righteous standing round. Would that this could be re-enacted in our law courts or churches now.

As a partisan of individual liberty I am not offering an opinion whether marriage as at present enforced is right or not, whether it should be more free, whether divorce should be easier or not; but, as an individualist, what I am striving for is that those who do not believe in marriage should have the same liberty as those who do. The State and its police have no right to treat them as social pariahs, to hamper and watch them, to spy into their actions and trip them up if possible. It has no more right to do this than the State in Turkey to keep women prisoners in harems. Let us remember that many may sincerely dissent from the received views. They may have studied physiological science; they may even have read the forbidden literature of Malthusianism; they may have seen that heaven does not always follow marriage; that to separate many of these life-long partners would be to the advantage of both; that two young people are not always right in their choice of each other, and that to give them no opportunity of reversing their mistake is a cruel tyranny. It may be just possible that people there are who have such opinions as these. These people may be filled with the purest motives if they write or speak these opinions, and if they translate them into acts are they to be held up to social ostracism by the double-faced press, and treated as suspects by the police? Social freedom has yet to be conquered. How many scapegoats do you want, oh, society? How many must you imprison, oh, socialistic state, before it will be won? As the force age departs woman will rise to be equal with man, having her vote, her property, and earning her own livelihood. The unions she will contract with man must then be on an equal basis; as she advances we can dimly see her salvation from her present state of bondage in marriage or infamy in vice. Her unions will then be the result of affection, not for money or to be kept. Such is the true marriage, but to obtain this salvation we must renounce the methods of puritans, and struggle for social and sexual freedom.—From "Liberty: Political, Religious, Social, and Sexual."

"Why Should Love Die?"

BY CARRIE A.

It may be late in the day to offer further comment on the question, "Why Should Love Die?" but I only just opened June 8 Lucifer and finding therein an article by J. Wm. Lloyd that in no sense pleases me I feel inclined to state the case as it appeals to me.

There would seem to be many minor reasons why love, or the thing so named, might die, but I think the one primary reason is that Nature never intended our lesser attractions to be permanent. Evolution cannot allow permanence or completeness to a love (so-called) that falls short of meeting its highest demand, which demand is for a soul love. Man being triune in his nature attracts from three planes of being the physical, the mental, and the spiritual. If the coming together of a man and woman has a physical basis their union falls short of the ideal. If it is a mental attraction it still falls short, but if it is a spiritual attraction the demand of the ideal is satisfied and the union is permanent. These latter are the marriages made in heaven; they are the God-joined which no man can put asunder. A marriage ceremony cannot make them more permanent or the lack of a ceremony result in their dissolution. These are the unions that bring joy to the heart, illumination to the mind, and health to the body.

However, I think such marriages are greatly in the minority and that the great majority of unions result from an inferior cause, such cause existing from one reason only, namely, a lack of unfoldment of the higher nature of individuals. One cannot attract from the spiritual plane—that department in man's nature where all ennobling and uplifting ideals are born—unless this part of his nature is awakened and active, and that this nature is dormant in the average individual seems amply proved by the present condition of the race. Man is not highly evolved, he lives mostly from the physical, selfish, animal plane of life, and consequently his sexual attractions are mostly of a physical nature. The masculine sex are especially subject to physical attraction because more than woman they live in the physical nature. Woman, unless her nature is perverted through abnormal hereditary influences, naturally touches the ideal. She is Love objectified. Physical passion predominating in her is only a sign that she has stolen the outer garment of man, which theft robs her of her redeeming power. For woman is man's redeemer.

The physical predominating in man is natural up to a certain point in his unfoldment, when evolution calls him to something higher, bids him become acquainted with his true and higher selfhood and invites him to a seat in the kingdom of spiritual love. And not until he takes this seat will he be capable of a permanent attachment—that is, an unforced permanency.

If man could find permanency and satisfaction while occupying the first floor or even the second floor of his three story mansion he would never ask entrance to the third apartment—the highest, and consequently he would fail to reach his highest attainment, and evolution would fail in making a man. Nature is wise, she withholds her best gifts until her children have earned them. When man has earned a true, complete love he will find permanency as natural a condition as impermanency is natural to the less developed man. And when he has earned the wisdom that comes through a higher unfoldment he will know that Nature never evolved a man (one-half) without evolving a woman (the other half) to complement him, and this wisdom will also teach him that it only takes two halves to make a whole and not three, four, or six halves.

If J. W. L., gets there and his own peculiar individualities are molded to complement a rose he will find a rose ready to complement him, if it is designed to complement a lily he will find the lily, but if he tries to harmonize his rose or, mayhap, his lily individuality with that of a carnation or a tulip he will find they do not dove-tail one with the other. Or, should he attempt to fit his rose (we will call him a rose) individuality to that of a variety of lovely flowers, should he pluck a petal of this, that, and the other species thinking thereby to complete his rose self he would meet with as dire a failure. He would still be a half-rose waiting for the severed other half to come along and cuddle lovingly down in the niche from which Nature in some primitive day and for its own wise reason removed her. He would still be awaiting his own And she will come to him when he is ready for her.

The prevalent attempt to make whole cloth out of crazy patch work I presume is excusable in the present man, but the more enlightened man will have put away childish things.

Declared.

"Papa thinks," she said shyly, "that it is about time you were declaring your intentions."

"Tell the old gentleman," he replied, "that I love you too much to marry you."

The Gardener and His Flowers.

BY STELLA STARBRIGHT.

Mr. Lloyd has given some excellent advice in No. 868, but it seems to me he is mixing up the idea of promiscuity and variety in a manner somewhat misleading. What he says of varietists is doubtless true of that extreme class which the more conservative and select varietist might call "promiscuitists" if he might be permitted to coin a noun not known to Webster. And this select varietist advocates the same plan of "gardening" with some modifications, as that suggested by Mr. Lloyd. In fact, it must be admitted that any deviation from monogamy is variety, therefore Mr. Lloyd's definition of the varietist is too sweeping, and applies only to those who practice promiscuity.

Another point. The "central love" idea is good no doubt in many cases. But there may be cases where the gardener cannot choose between the rose and the lily! The sweetness and fragrance, the dewy freshness of the rose appeal to one part of his nature, while the stately grace and purity of the lily appeals as strongly to another part. And perhaps the wise little faces of the modest pansies have equal charms for him! And why not? When we outgrow selfishness, jealousy, there will be no question in such cases, as to which is loved best, any more than there now is among brothers and sisters.

We pity the paltry jealousy that causes one in a family to feel hurt at the display of love for another member, and we censure the parent who "shows partiality" toward one to the neglect of another. And I ask Mr. Lloyd why it is not possible and desirable in this select circle of lovers to feel no favoritism? Why may not the affections so broaden out as to include the rose, the lily and the pansy in an equal love?

No Going Backward.

BY MRS. H. C. GARNER.

The questions "Freedom of the Affections," "Marriage," "Why Does Love Die?" show us the trend of human thought and the evolution toward a broader creed and more liberty. I have read with interest various articles which have appeared in Lucifer on these subjects, and the only solution and cure from my view point was given by C. S. Wood, M. D., "Co-operative homes."

For the past forty years I have advocated the same. The false state of society demands it. Our best interest calls for this as the only solution of true freedom of the sexes; and the growth of the affections. It is time women awoke to the importance of helping on this work of making co-operative homes.

The isolated home is a great breeder of selfishness, and how can it be otherwise? The mine and thine theory finds rich soil therein. Free unions, legal unions, in the isolated home are treading in the same rut. The feeling of ownership in each other thrives on such conditions.

The struggle to keep this home, to gather around them the things that make for comfort and wealth, become a binding force that often holds people together after love has ceased and in many cases a life of deceit and misery is lived for years, all because of property and before they realize what they are doing the dictatorial and governing spirit creeps into their every-day lives,

Why are men and women so prone to dictate to each other? Free, as well as legal unions find themselves floundering in the bonds of slavery. Men and women think they are brave, they sing of liberty for human beings, but to love outside the rule of the two tyrannical powers, ecclesiastic and civil, stirs the soul to a pitch of frenzy. They little knew how closely they were enmeshed in the old civil and religious codes, until like a clap of thunder they find their air castles tumbling all about them, "Oh I am undone, my home and life is blighted;" "My loved one loves another, I am no longer the only beloved."

Perhaps all the time they were professing to a broad and liberty-loving principle, and did not perceive they were subject to the binding forces of custom, and tyrannical laws made by priests and bigots. "He that would save his love shall lose it."

The isolated home, the mine and thine theory which it fosters are dead weights, rivets, chains with which men in their blindness and ignorance crush out and lose the love they so much desire to save. Alas for a man's liberty-loving theory; he is adrift on the boundless ocean of life without rudder, compass or ballast. He did not reckon with the invisible host of love, and in his sorrow is ready to cry, "O let me cling to the old way, the feeling that I own my wife, my house, my children my everything. My house is made desolate. I thought we were safe. See what free love does!"

"O vain man, thy fond pursuit forbear." Is there no breaking of homes or hearts otherwise than this? Learn to build homes that are enduring. As homes are today they are more likely to end in tragedy—death, desertion, widows, orphans. With true industrial communal homes, disasters such as occur in isolated homes would be unknown.

There is a great law in the moral universe that shall explode all fancies and override all erroneous dogmas, however cherished in theology or old-time customs; a law primeval with the nature of man; the law of association, of assimilation to the objects beloved. Under this law there will be a commingling of kindred spirits, liberty-loving men and women. No marriage ties then, but of the heart; no mere conventional arrangements; no husband or wife bound by statutes; no child linked to parental hearts simply by the law of consanguinity or blood.

There will be a brotherhood of kindred hearts, a commonwealth and a spiritual, true democracy not in outward lying profession but founded in justice and mutual sympathy and good will. How beautiful, how sublime the vision!

We would rescue the honor of manhood and womanhood—and plant faith in the brotherhood of man on the rock of everlasting principle. And many men and women cherish these principles and objects, as their heart's free love, and the soul's chief good.

Why Does Love Die?

BY LUCETTA J. CURTIS.

First, we must look to see why love lives. Love is the spirit communion of the whole of two bodies. The love fluid when kept in the body and allowed to circulate through the flesh gives the thrills which we call love and the one who calls up the highest action of this love fluid is the one we love best. When marriage steps in and says we need not keep the love fluid confined but are hereby given sanction to waste it, as the negative nature may suggest, you believe and act in accordance with what the marriage ceremony tells you and love begins to die. To use the love fluid with no thought of creating, is the death knell to love, either in marriage or out, but outside of marriage there is not the same likelihood of the waste going on in such haste. The love fluid kept confined as we confine steam that it may pull loads, and used only with thought and understanding, would prevent the death of love, and give everlasting peace and happiness to those who vibrate together. Love dies because we open the valve by which the fluid, which is the love producer, is let flow to waste. If a man had an engine to run he would hold the steam in the steam chest and not open an escape whereby it would only be wasted but instead would turn it where it would do the desired work. If we want love to live we must be as wise in taking care of the love builder as the engineer is in holding and using the steam which runs his engine. The love fluid held with knowledge will permeate the body and flow from every pore in a refined essence which will, when it comes in contact with the opposite essence, give hope, gladness, joy and peace. This is the spiritual sex communion. When this love fluid has been wasted, the essence which should flow from the whole body is made weak and joy cannot abide there. Then love is dead.

"Think you if Laura had been Petrarch's wife
He would have written sonnets all his life?"—Byron.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

Published every week at 600 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.
Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Entered at the Chicago Post Office as Second-class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d st., N. Y.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called rom its brightness—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

879

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

WHEN LUCIFER fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

After a bilious attack, and a ten days' fast, the editor is physically decidedly weak, but gaining strength, and will probably soon be as well as usual.

The questions, "Why Does Love Die?" and the failure of so-called free unions are still receiving the attention of our correspondents. We have quite a number of contributions on these subjects on hand, and some are in type. They will be published as soon as we can find room for them. Important as these questions are, there are others which also require attention.

Our Anniversary Number.

The leading feature of the "coming-of-age" number of Lucifer will be a sketch of its twenty-one years of life. This will be written by Moses Harman if he is sufficiently recovered from his present illness. Otherwise it will be written by his daughter Lillian.

E. C. Walker, who has been an active worker for Lucifer for eighteen years, and who for five years was co-editor, will contribute one of his stirring articles.

Lucy N. Colman, that grand old woman, pioneer in the anti-slavery, woman suffrage, and many other reforms, will contribute a reminiscence of one of her experiences in Boston. She will tell how the congregation of the Old South Church greeted the spectacle of an Abolitionist woman walking beside a man "whose color would not wash off." Lucy Colman is one of the few who have mastered the secret of growing old gracefully and beautifully. Her active interest in life and in the welfare of the race has not been lessened by the crown of her eighty three years.

W. G. Markland will give a "bird's-eye-view" of the stirring events in the struggle for freedom for the past thirty years, and his conclusions for the future. Mr. Markland is the author of the "Markland Letter," which was the technical basis of the eight years' prosecution and persecution of Lucifer.

"A Mud-Colored Conception" is the title of a brief contribution by C. L. James. This refers to a common misconception of the probable conduct of the father in freedom. In a recent essay Ada Bertoni said that were it not for the marriage tie, "while the females were pregnant, and with a brood of little ones around them, the males would be elsewhere, following the Bible advice, 'Increase and multiply.'" Mr. James dissents from Mrs. Bertoni's conclusion, and gives his reasons why.

C. L. Swartz translates from the French a story by Myriam Harry. Even those who disapprove the publication of stories in Lucifer will, I think, find this worth the space it occupies.

Recently a steamer load of teachers was sent to the Philippines, by our government. A Nebraska woman applied for a position and was accepted. Her husband tried to prevent the escape of his wife. The story is told by Robert Moorsholm in the Anniversary number.

Contributions are promised by Jonathan Mayo Crane and the Rev. Sidney Holmes, but we are unable to announce the subjects at present.

Other contributions will appear, and altogether we expect this number of Lucifer to be one which its friends will be proud to circulate.

L. H.

Notes on New Publications.

From the "Scientific Publishing Co.," 96 5th Ave., Chicago, we have received a copy of "Modern Researches," by Bayer, U. S., author of "Maternal Impressions," "Studies of Life," and "Hints for Child Study." From the publisher's announcement we quote:

"This superb work represents years of mature thought and exhaustive research upon some of the most vital phases of human life and character.

"It is not to be classed with the ordinary theoretical book, for its statements, in almost every instance, are substantiated not alone by logic and reason, but by the experience and testimony of reputable physicians, whose names are given. Neither is it a technical work, but is easily comprehended by the person unacquainted with medical terms.

"Some of the views expressed are new and startling and yet generally they will be found in harmony with the latest and best medical authority, being taken at the points where scientific laboratory deductions coincide with the everyday experience of the physician."

The author points out the evils which he believes will result to the child from attempts of the mother to adopt the theories of Dr. Schenck and others in the effort to control the sex of her child.

The cause and prevention of hereditary defects, perversions, etc.; the deleterious effects of certain drugs upon the embryo, when taken by the mother, are dealt with at length.

Many of the author's statements are surprising; notably his explanation of "the mystery of the cause of vernix caseasa," and I will add, I think in this instance his conclusions are mistaken. I have found time for but a hasty reading of the book, but I think it would repay careful reading and consideration.

Like many physiologists, the author believes that with a modification of the marriage laws requiring applicants to "answer satisfactorily" questions concerning effects of mental states, drugs, the environment, and abnormal sexual relations, of the mother, a great improvement in the race would be brought about. 284 pp., bound in vellum de luxe, $3.

* * *

The address of E. C. Walker at the Congress of the American Secular Union held in Boston, 1899, has been printed in tract form by the "Truth Seeker Co."

The title is "The Future of Secularism. When will the cause of Justice Triumph?" It is in Mr. Walker's well-known forceful, succinct style.

A fairly clear idea may be formed from the subject-titles: "The enemy's forces underestimated; A serious tactical error; Secularism defined; Causes of progress; Causes of stagnation and decay; The battle yet to be fought; Some gains and losses called to mind; An ill-founded hope; Is equal liberty secured by the Constitution? Jefferson's prophecy; Source of the liberty we enjoy; The work ever before us."

This will be found a useful aid by the worker in the Secular cause. Price, five cents.

* * *

"Why do you use the date, 301?" "Why should you date from the burning of Bruno?" are questions of frequent recurrence. All those to whom the story of Bruno is not familiar should read "Giordano Bruno, His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom," a tract recently issued by the "Truth Seeker Co." The principal incidents of Bruno's life are herein given, and the story of his work and martyrdom told in fascinating style. Price, five cents.

* * *

"Sexual Love: What It Is and What It Isn't," by Allan Laidlaw, comes to us from "The Truth Seeker Co.," Bradford, England.

The chapter titles are: "Fallacies; Somatic Dreams; Perversions; Sensual Necessaries; The Idealisation of Love; Female Emancipation; Real Altruism; Equality of the Sexes in Love; Purity." Price, twenty-five cents.

* * *

A new edition of "Karezza," by Dr. Alice B. Stockham, is just from the press. There are about fifteen pages of matter added, consisting principally of letters corroborating the teachings of "Karezza."

Speaking of "Karezza," reminds me of a little incident in connection therewith.

A dear relative, a Methodist woman, who had been as a mother to me in my motherless childhood, was visiting us. Though she loves us from Father down to Virna, very dearly, our religious and social opinions are painful to her, as is quite natural they should be. As I do not believe in obtruding my views on any one, however, our differences were ignored and we had a very pleasant visit together.

One day she told me of her granddaughter, who was expecting her second child sixteen months after the birth of her first. My relative was sorry for this granddaughter, and asked me if I had anything that would advise her how to avoid such frequent pregnancies. I recommended "Karezza," and read several passages to her.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "that is all very well; but no husband would consent to live in that way."

"A husband might not," I answered; "but a lover would, and does. Mary's sweetheart was glad to visit her, and to be near her, and no doubt it made him happy to be permitted even to hold her hand. But when he changed from lover to husband, everything else changed, and no matter what the cost to Mary, in health and happiness, he had to have all the rights of the husband.

"And that," I concluded, "is just the ground of our opposition to legal marriage and the spirit of marriage. If Mary should decide that she would rather risk frequent child-bearing than to accept the teachings of 'Karezza,' she has the right to her choice and the consequences of that choice. But her husband cannot bear the consequences so he has no right to choose for her. Her lover would not dare to attempt it. If he should, the offense would be rape. There is no rape in marriage."

So "Karezza" was not sent to Mary. For the father of her children was her husband, and in that family "Karezza" was powerless.

But all husbands do not exercise their power, as Mary's did, and to some of them "Karezza" has been a blessing.

* * *

Any of the foregoing books sent from this office on receipt of price.

L. H.

Evolution.

Evolution with its dynamics left out would be an empty echo in a dead hulk. The rebel is evolution's dynamic. What may a man do in the presence of affairs? Do nothing. Evolution is to do it all. But if you say evolution "does" you say rebellion. The instant you predict activities you have your rebels born full armed. Let evolution do everything. So I shall. But I do not see how that evolution can get along without me. I cannot see it in fruit save from my roots. I play my part both as clamorer and devotee. But I am to be quiet. I am to do nothing. Did Jesus step aside for evolution before he wandered into the temple? Did Savonarola impeach evolution when he consented to die for his faith? Was evolution sent to the scaffold with John Brown? Why should I not let evolution pay my grocer? Why should I not let evolution keep my promises? Why should I make any promises?

If evolution acts through me it acts through the turbulence as well as through the inertia of my temperament. But if you tell me that I should not talk out my mind when I have a little plot with the universe to have it shift its cards you in effect advise me to surrender the one function I am appointed by evolution to subserve.

Why should not evolution make my living for me? Why should not evolution sail our ships? Is the sailingmaster a superfluous officer? Why should we sail ships at all? Why not stay flat on our backs breathing and gestating life out of nothing?

Every bird of the air is an agitator. Every fish in the sea swims against the current of evolution. Else why should they too not be asked to be still? You see how evolution becomes ridiculous the instant you separate it from its elements. You see how much evolution fires up with the reformer. What evolutional energies culminated in magna chartas, declarations like those of the French convention, our own pronunciamentos for independence and emancipation? The helpless evolution of my critics would make martyrdoms impotent. Jesus would burst into a laugh, shake the nails out of his hands and feet, and step down from the cross. All magnificence becomes melodrama. Galileo would swear ten times four to anything you asked. For evolution would do its work with Galileo left out.

Why should some fool sail into the northern seas for the Pole? Why should Livingstone brave equatorial perils? Why should we have laboratories for men of science? Who should be curious about the heavens? If my outcry is heresy then is evolution disproved. Evolution must either acknowledge or resign. The evolution which does not arch the social ideal invests poorly for its own estate. Evolution is bankrupt if the heart can find in it no recourse for justice.

Evolution is readjustment. The rebel is the readjuster. To skin him would make a farce of the whole process.—Horace L. Traubel, in "Conservator."

The Sins of The Fathers.

Midas lived in a palace, but his daughter caught a disease that grew up in one of the slums, out of which Midas "got his living."

The doctor said that it was the scarlet fever, and when it looked like measles he said "measles had intervened."

So he gave her medicine till the digestion got hopelessly out of order; then he told the nurse to rouse the patient three times a night to give her sleeping draughts. He was a very wise doctor and knew that he must do something for his patient—and for his fee.

Later he "found" that Midas' daughter had developed pneumonia; and Midas believed it all, so the doctor administered stimulants and called another doctor in consultation, who said that her death was due to heart failure. So it was.

The board of health disinfected Midas' house—the slums took care of themselves.

The clergyman said that the girl had "faded like a leaf" and that "it was the will of God."

So it was; for "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."—Bolton Hall, in "Life."

Annabel's Mistress.

"And what did thy mistress say after she had caught me kissing thee behind the door?"

"She said: 'Annabel, thou must be mighty fond of me to remain in my service at the risk of being kissed by such an old wretch as thy master.'"—Pick Me Up.

Do you want extra copies of the Anniversary number? Sent to twelve of your friends for twenty cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Geo. B. Wheeler, 1443 E. George St., Chicago, Ill.:—Your last number of Lucifer was excellent. I hope you may be spared to continue the fight many years. Here is a great field for its usefulness. I shall do what I can to help spread its sentiments and truths.

Dr. B. L. Hjermstad, Cincinnati, Ohio:—I see the time of my subscription is up. So I hasten to send you the dollar. Do not want to miss a number of the dear old Lucifer. It has become a spiritual necessity with me. Would like to have Ibsen's "Nora." I am proud of Ibsen. He is a Norwegian, (like myself) and a grand man, but little understood in his own country.

Eliza B. Burnz, Walters Park, Pa.:—Please send me two copies of Lucifer, which contains an article entitled "A Common Disease—Routine." It is, I think, an admirable statement of the cause of ill health and the death of many women. Will you not put it in four leaf tract? I will subscribe a dollar towards the expense of publishing it. My copy of Lucifer containing the article, I have sent to an orthodox clergyman whose wife is completely prostrated by continued child bearing. With a babe three months old she is craving death, fearing that she may yet have another. Oh, it is pitiful, to see the ignorance and selfishness of men who, except in the matter of sexual indulgence, are intelligent and moral. A tract, in which their meanness is set forth as plainly as in "A Common Disease," may shame some of these sinners into a decent regard for the health and wishes of their wives.

[We will publish this tract, as suggested, but it will not be ready until after the Anniversary number is off our hands. In the meantime we shall be glad to receive orders for the tract Price, ten cents a dozen. L. H.]

Mrs. M. Beckwith, New York:—I am greatly interested in the subject of Institutional Marriage, and think it the most important one of the time, as it has such powerful bearing upon every other subject pertaining to the welfare and happiness of individuals, separately and collectively. From deep study upon this matter I have become convinced that no great increase of peace, health or happiness, or diminution of crime, will exist until marriage as an institution is totally abolished, or at least until it has released its hold upon the majority. It is unnatural, unscientific, illogical and unreasonable, not to say unjust. I believe fully in total freedom between the sexes. I think I am the most radical of all radicals because I don't believe in people living together as a rule, even for six months. I think it the death of love and of romance, the end of courtship, the destruction of illusions and of the spice and mystery that lends so great a charm to life.

If one marries and takes certain vows, one should keep to them; therefore I don't believe in any such vows and promises being taken. An institution which compels slavery and obedience to customs which many have outgrown, is self-doomed in the future. I think one of the chief causes, if not the chief cause, of the misery on earth today is Institutional Marriage. Let every one do as they please in sex matters, as is eating and drinking, and if they go to excess they reap the consequences and no one but themselves to blame. Half the world suffers from sexual starvation, while the other half suffers from excess. Extremes are bad, and nothing but experience, or the superior wisdom that can foresee results, will profit anything.

At any rate no legislation has any right to control and direct the sexual instinct more than the gustatory. All the legislators have a right to enforce is the protection of the weak and innocent. Rape should be restrained by law, but it is my belief that if sexual liberty were allowed, rape would be a rarity, as well as murder, drunkenness and suicide.

If children are born, what of it? There should be a premium on fine offspring! And no disgrace attached, and what if the child doesn't know its own father or the world doesn't; the mother does, I fancy, and if the child gets a prize you may depend the father would make himself known and be proud of it! And what could be the wrong in taking pride and delight in being the mother and the father of a splendid specimen of humanity.

I say let it be considered an honor for a girl or woman to bear a child whenever and by whom she chooses, and the state would be the gainer ev ery time.

How I wish I could hasten the time when public opinion will no longer frown upon the loves between the sexes, putting no barrier in the way, and when to bear a child will be considered pure and virtuous under any and all circumstances.

Josie Witte, Freedom Colony, Fulton, Kansas:—Now you have indeed roused my curiosity. Please send me a copy of "The Strike of the Strassburg Geese." If those supposedly well-fed geese can be induced to strike, maybe there's some hope of arousing some of their kindred to whom nature has denied feathers of any kind, but upon whom Dame Fashion not only bestows some of the finest, but also silks, laces, diamonds, houses, lands, etc., as a reward for their docility in obeying her decrees. Lucifer is always welcome. I was especially interested in "Sexual Starvation" by Dr. Foote, in No. 869. His quotation from the "New York Tribune" of years ago applies to present conditions as well. As one who has traveled and observed much from the Atlantic to the Pacific, I can testify to the truth of his statements. Everywhere we are hedged in by an invisible barrier of conventionality. Those exuberant spirits who will heed no restraint, often have cause to grieve, for, once outside, they too often become the prey of the vicious, while those who remain within, having implicit faith in the editor of "The Ladies Home Journal" and similar wise (?) men and women, whether they realize it or not, are robbed of much of the joys of life and have no opportunity for proper growth in any direction.

Growth requires freedom. The question has been asked whether there is freedom here. We have the name, certainly. "Freedom" being the name of the township in which we located. So far the augury seems correct. We have representatives of various nationalities, coming from many different states of the union; coming together as strangers, but full of courage and brotherly love, all animated by the hope that here, at last, we shall have freedom indeed,—freedom from the oppressive yoke of the money lords; freedom from all that dwarfs and distorts and blights the lives of men, women and children in the great world about us, freedom even to follow the dictates of our own consciences, to worship God or not to worship, to work on Sunday or not to work, (Sunday or any other day), to marry and be in fashion or not to marry, etc.

The Labor Exchange has as its sole object the betterment of material conditions, but by producing a more desirable physical environment the way is paved for mental and spiritual development.

While we are now leading a rather "strenuous life" a la Teddy, the lion-tamer, this life has its compensations. We are proving the practicability of our principles: viz., "Voluntary Industrial Co-operation," "Mind your own business," "Don't do to others what you would not have them do to you" and "Equal rights and principles for all." See Colony Circular No. 4.

We enjoy pure air, out-door exercise, have plenty of good food, and more clothing than we need these warm summer days; have cool nights to rest in and good prospects in general.

Our social gatherings are characterized by a delightful absence of formality. No chokers, literally or figuratively.

We have the nucleus of a good liberal library; contributions always welcome. We were interested in a series of lectures on Spiritualism, by Mr. W. E. Bonney, of Lincoln, Neb., and would like to hear Emma Goldman or yourself, as well as others. We want to learn and grow.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New,

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 220 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winse). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Marie's Intention (Marietta Holley), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.50.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Don't fail to order our 16-page Anniversary number early. Sent to any address; 20 cents a dozen.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
The Darwins. A domestic radical romance. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.
Seven Financial Conspiracies, which have enslaved the American people. Mrs. S. E. V. Emery. 5c.
Ten Men of Money Island. S. F. Norton. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin. 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution William Denton 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whitlick. 20c.
Occult Stories. Chas. W. Close. Boards, 10c.
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 100 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 55 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 5c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
Swept Away. A sermon on the sins of our lawmakers who hide behind a refuge of lies. Moses Hull. 5c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Socialist. 5c.
Twelve Essays. Frederick W. Burry. 10c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c
Truth Seeker Annual 1899. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B. Foote, H. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers. Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 371 pages. 15c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship. J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 198 pages. 25c.
The Giant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner. 10c.
The Life of the Harp in the Hand of the Harper. Illustrated. Francis Schlatter. 20c
The Gods of Mirulu. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.
Vaccination a Curse. C. W. Amerige, M. D. 5c.
Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 310 pages. 20c.
The Proletarian Revolt. A history of the Paris Commune, 225 pages 10c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 5c.
The Teachings of Jesus not Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. Geo W. Brown, M. D. 5c.
The Infidelity of Eco estasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian. In the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
The Legal Revolution of 1902. By a law-abiding Revolutionist, 324 pages. 20c
The Signboard and Other Stories. Theophile Gautier et. al. 250 pages. 10c
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 39 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
V.5, no.33
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 33. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, AUG. 31, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 880

SPEAK THY THOUGHT!

Speak thy thought out bold and bravely,
Fear not old opinion's saws;
What thy soul in clearer vision
Sees revealed in higher laws
Speak out loudly, now and ever,
Though all men should hate thy cause.

Speak thy thought out loud and clearly,
If they're words of honest worth,
Though all hell excite men's passions,
They will footing find on earth;
If they are but words of folly,
'Tis as if they had not birth.

What we are has root in thinking,
Thought e'er flies in freedom's van,
Shackle, bind, restrain from action,
Despots cry since time began,
While from martyrs' scaffolds gory
Thought's fruition comes to man.

Stake and fagot, rack and dungeon,
Have no terror for the brave;
Though the scaffold glooms before thee,
Words of truth are what we crave,
For the truth lives on forever,
Aye! when power is in its grave.

Heed no strumpet clothed in ermine,
Speaking for the state its word
As against mankind's progression;
Tell the boastful, purse-proud lord
That a vital thought once spoken
Hath a life beyond its sword.

If the church puts gyves on thinking,
Damn the church and break its spell;
If the state contracts thy being,
Damn the state and ring its knell;
Speak thy thought out bold and bravely
Spite of both these twins of hell.

—Dyer D. Lum.

Two Decades and a Year.

BY E. C. WALKER.

Lucifer has survived the struggles and persecutions of twenty-one years. An instant only in the life of the earth, a moment in the life of the race, one-sixth of the life of the United States, one half of the life of a generation of men, many times the average life of reform papers. It has not been a large life, measured by the extent of its circulation, the attention it has received from the thinkers of the world, the direct influence it has had on the masses of the people, the evil customs and laws it has overthrown. It has been a strong and effective life, measured by sincerity of conviction, by intensity and persistence of purpose, by the assaults it has received and sustained, by the affection and loyalty it has drawn to itself, by the steady if slow progress it has made toward financial independence, by the seeds of its sowing which have germinated and are growing in the brains of thousands of men and women.

Federal censorship of the mails was seven years old when Lucifer, then the Valley Falls Liberal, came into being. The fight for liberty of investigation on the part of the paper and for the suppression of unpopular facts on the part of the censorship has been a long and bitter one. Lucifer's editor and fellow workers have seen dark days, when it was uncertain what the immediate outcome was to be. Other publishers and editors and dealers have also been attacked, and some have gone down at the first onset; some have maintained a vigorous defense and made good their right to live, so far. Most of the victories won for light and candor have been won on technical points of the law, and it is probable that the coming quarter of a century will not see any change in this regard. The censorship, beaten back at times and in places, nevertheless has steadily pushed forward its columns. It now includes inter-state express business in the purview of its supervision, and is reaching out for the telegraph and freight business of the country. At first it did not assail, directly, the sentiments of a reformer; it was content to prosecute him on the ground of obscenity of expression, waging war on words rather than on ideas. But that day of comparative immunity passed long ago, as clear-thinking radicals saw from the first that it would in due time. Now the censorship openly assails the arguments of an author, and wins hands down on the issue, if he deals honestly with the tabooed sex problem. Indications are not wanting to show that the next step is to be legal inquiry into the probable or possible tendency of a publication, outside of its specific arguments for radical changes, and that the next step after is to be the attempted suppression of distinctively Freethought publications. This was the goal of the censorship from the beginning, as some of its adherents incautiously admitted and as the logic of their position made inevitable.

The position of the church and the position of the censors of morals are analogous. Both forces are constantly gaining strength in the statutes and the courts and losing strength in the thoughts and aspirations of inquiring men and women. We live in the years of preparation for a mighty struggle between the powers of reaction and of progress. Everywhere the new thought, in one form or another, is finding its way into the camps and courts and conferences of orthodoxy. You will discover it in newspapers, magazines, reviews; in sermons, reports, and special publications; in poetry, fiction, ethical essays, and history.

Per GL937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.33

Only yesterday, I read Mrs. E. L. Voynich's "Jack Raymond"; neither in this book, nor elsewhere, so far as I know, does the authoress make any claim that she is writing to advance any special idea, and yet this work is a charge of moral dynamite under the temple of popular religion and sex ethics. And it is only one of many of like nature; three, including "Jack Raymond," were fiercely denounced in one letter by William L. Alden, the London correspondent of the New York "Times." On the one hand the thoughts of men and women are broadening, deepening, and strengthening; on the other, the backward-gazing beneficiaries of outworn institutions are whispering into the ears of legislators and judges, threatening them with the vengeance of the voters they claim to control and demanding as the price of continued office the enactment and enforcement of more and more repressive statutes. They get many of the statutes for which they ask, but when it comes to enforcement of these statutes the results are not always satisfactory to them, for it is not so very easy to hold inoperative the law of supply and demand.

Every free journal like Lucifer has much work to do; the pity is that it is not larger and does not have hundreds of thousands of readers. But such circulations are only for the trashy sheets that have no ambition except to fill the coffers of their owners by catering to the passions and prejudices of the unthinking multitudes. Every friend of liberty must realize that until we are free to investigate all the relations of men and women, until we are free to tell what we see and what we think and what we hope for, it is useless to expect any permanent change for the better in society. There must be freedom for men to work, for women to work, undisturbed by those who do not choose to work; there must be freedom for all men and for all women to seek their own temporal salvation unawed by unjust laws and unmenaced by mobs. Partisanship must not blind us to the fundamental truth that liberty and equity are to be sought and found only through liberty and equity.

Past and Future.

BY W. G. MARKLAND.

I have recently been looking backward over the thirty years of my acquaintance with the struggles for freedom, and it seems to me that final victory is not far distant.

First came Asmodeus-Woodhull, who compelled a nation's press to applaud her flight, though it groaned at the exposure. Next came in prominence the Miller-Strickland fight, in which I had the happy position of provider; the trial judge privately concealing their victory a year after. Then Walker-Harman, had a serious battle, gaining victory while in prison by compelling a supreme court to stultify itself. Heywood and Bennett fell sword in hand, leaving monuments of slain errors. Then came your eight years' battle, with alternate victory and defeat, but at no moment did the Light-Bearing flag cease to lighten the gloom, and it is still a beacon. The Hag made a clutch at Lois, and though thrown from her foundation for a moment, she yet lives in her "Home" Clothed with the Sun, hurling javelins of light. A clutch was made at Elmina, but the venomous talons closed on air. When Ingersoll fell all stood aghast; even the Hag groaned.

This vile Church-Wife of King Capital had a season of rejoicing when her spouse erected the Chicago harp of four strings, but it was rather brief, for the twang of those cruel cords awoke Socialism, and today they both stand trembling at their approaching doom.

The recent Herron-Rand affair may be the last in which the consumptive madam will interefere, as her spouse does not offer his courtly arm so freely as of yore; his new concubines being more attractive.

Thus it seems that winter is breaking, for the New York probationary marriage law is a mighty rift in the ice, susceptible of indefinite extension.

Somebody is advancing; somebody is retreating The day of bread and butter in abundance, and stalwart children to eat it, rapidly approaches. Threescore and ten may not see that day, but the certainty of it gilds oblivion with happy features to be embraced with a smile.

An Anti-Slavery Reminiscence.

DEAR LILLIAN:—So you would like something for your "Anniversary Number," from my pen?

I am not quite in my usual health, broken down with my home coming from New Hampshire, but I will give you a little reminiscence which comes to mind; now, perhaps, because we have just passed the "First of August," a day made memorable by the use we put it to—for many, many years—a special meeting for work in the Anti-Slavery cause.

I do not remember the year, but I remember I was given in charge the gifts of The Rochester Ladies' "Anti Slavery Society" to the Boston fair; and having disposed of them to whom they were sent, I was making my way, in company with Mr. Charley Lenox Remond, to my temporary home. I was something of a reformer in those days, and wore what was known as "the short dress," a dress falling a little below the knee, and pantalets made of the same material. That dress was considered very immodest. My escort, Mr. Remond, was a man who had a color which he could not remove, however he might wish to do so, even at the command of the Boston mob. Our way was through Washington St., directly past the "Old South Church," and the worshippers were just coming from the church onto the street. The shouts these holy people gave at the sight of a "bloomer dress" and a colored gentleman were as though the "fabled pandemonium" had broken loose.

Now, my dear Lillian, I have never been to prison for conscience sake, but I have great love and sympathy for those who have, and though I have never felt for the cause you and your father advocate as I have felt for the slave, I love and respect you and him and am always willing to add my mite to help you when I can.

There is so much for the reformer to do, so many wrongs to be abolished, so much that is wrong in ourselves that we need to overcome or destroy, that I am often disheartened and think I may as well stop doing; but 'tis my nature to try to do, even though the result is so small.

With love to you both, and good hopes for the future, I am always yours,

LUCY N. COLMAN.

412 Gifford St., Syracuse, New York.

A Mud-Colored Conception.

BY C. L. JAMES.

It is a pity an article containing so much good sense as Ada Bertoni's "Pink Rose Conception" should comprise a paragraph so conspiciously in want thereof, as that which attempts to show that "the marriage tie" is "a good thing." If it were not for the marriage tie, she thinks, that "while the females were pregnant, with a brood of young ones around them, the males would be elsewhere, following the Bible advice 'increase and multiply.'"

Why does she think so so? The reason, given by herself, is that she has seen "numerous household animals" act so. But did she ever see an animal, household or otherwise, act so unless such were the law of his species? I am quite sure she never did. "Natural selection," of which she appears to think lightly, has imposed on every race the necessity of conforming to those habits which best secure its perpetuation. If it be, for man, one of these that the male shall assist to take care of the brood, he will doubtless continue to do so as he generally has done, marriage or no marriage. Otherwise he needn't.

It is, indeed, true that species sometimes become extinct in consequence of lacking instincts adapted to new conditions; and such may possibly, though it seems a bugaboo, be some day the destiny of ours. But there is grave reason to doubt if the practices made legal by ignorant barbarians whose wives were captives, are likely to avert whatever danger may exist. Surely Ada is not so innocent as to think "the marriage tie" has any practical effect in preventing married men from having amours? Its purpose was to prevent women from doing that. It was framed on the principle of making detection and punishment easy in the case of the woman, but impossible in that of the man. It degrades the woman into a breeder and domestic servant. It lowers her in the esteem of man so much, that for other purposes he commonly prefers even a mercenary prostitute to a wife. Between a wife and a free love woman there is simply no comparison. Relaxation of the obligation to be chaste, is, in all ages and countries, the measure of women's elevation. This was the moral I meant to point by examples, in those biographies of unchaste women of which I wrote so many for Lucifer a year or two ago. I did not write more, as I had intended, because the last one was not published.

A Fugitive Wife.

BY ROBERT MOORSHOLM.

"Washington, Aug. 13.—The division of insular affairs, War Department, has had considerable correspondence relating to the appointment of Mrs. Fannie Wadsworth of Mellwood, Neb., as a teacher in the Philippines. She applied for the position as 'Miss' Wadsworth, and was selected. Then a dispatch was received saying she could not go because she had young children to look after. This was signed by George Wadsworth, her husband.

"Questioned by the Department about the matter, she replied by wire that the children were her husband's by a former wife, and she wished her appointment to stand. She went to a small town in Kansas, telegraphed for transportation, which was sent her, and she sailed with other teachers for Manila.

"Letters were received from George Wadsworth, asking that transportation be refused her, but upon investigation it was decided to send her transportation and let her decide the matter for herself."—Press Dispatch.

This is a notable occurrence and shows a terrible state of tyranny and slavery, not an isolated instance, but a regular thing in the marital relation. She had made up her mind to earn her living and be independent. He sought to cut her off from an opportunity to support herself. How generous, how chivalrous he was to write that she could not go because she had young children to look after! And yet they were not her own. And of course this he could not tell. She had to go to another town, and prudently did so, to get transportation. Still the generous husband pursued her, asking that transportation be refused her.

What was his state of mind? Did he want her only as an unpaid help to care for his orphans? Did he want to hold her to his bed and board by the logic of starvation? Is society interested or indifferent in having women starved into staying as wives to raise families against their will? Are such the sort of citizens for the future whom the citizens of the present desire?

One bird has got out of her cage and you may be sure that she will not return to her jailor. If he has a spark of his mother's wit in him he will see in the action of the Washington authority a fortunate result for himself, for if he had succeeded in his opposition to her going, he would have had a terrible problem on his hands. Only fools need to have it explained to them what that problem would be. It is assumed that a man wants his sons to be men and knows that they will be something less than men if their mothers are something less than women. It is assumed that a man wants children who are his. Unless he is insane he does not want to light the fires of deviltry in a woman's heart by extreme oppression.

The knowledge that a man can use is the only real knowledge which has life and growth in it and converts itself into practical power. The rest hangs like dust about his brain, or dries off like rain drops in the sun.—Froude.

"Why Should Love Die?"

BY ASHAEL LARSON.

Love should not die, and I doubt that it ever does. Love flies. Why? Because in our small souledness we take such narrow views that whatever stands in the foreground covers the whole diminutive picture, the insignificant seems all important, the theoretic seems axiomatic, the narrower the views the more of them, and the more of the occasions for clashing with our beloved associate whom we soon find is everlastingly in our way. Disgust creeps in; Love flies out.

Alas for the present! But Socrates was a great philosopher who knew more than any body else. He knew that he knew nothing—other people did not know even that. When we have learned how little we really know, and what we once knew we no longer know, we may concede that others may be honest though they differ from us.

Yes, alas for the present! But progress is the law of the universe. Broad minds were once narrow, narrow minds will grow broad. We are all of us finite now and can take only finite, and therefore erroneous pictures of the universe, which is infinite. But our capacities are infinite, we have but to unfold; climb, and the higher we attain, the more cheerful the out-look, and the more readily will our compassion flow toward our fellow travelers who are gaining experience as we have gained it.

How far along are we? Not at the top, no. We are just learning what it is to be free. And some of us, but not all, have discovered that there is, and can be, no absolute freedom for social beings. If we are to have other free people with us, we must all conduct ourselves according to certain rules or there will be a very unhappy state of affairs indeed. For instance when it is proposed to get something new, we should never insist on getting it unless a majority are in favor of it; and when there is a tie vote, as often happens between two persons who are living on very intimate terms, the vote is always in favor of the one who votes "no," no matter what style of clothes he or she wears.

Then again, every person should be willing to carry his own burden. It is very magnanimous to bear another's burden, but it is rather impolite to insist that somebody else shall carry yours. And then it would be well if we could all of us always remember that every one should hold him or herself responsible for his or her own deeds and agreements.

It seems that we have not all of us gotten up to this height yet for it has almost become a proverb that it is a woman's prerogative to change her mind. And it is contended that a woman is not liable for a breach of promise to marry, but man is. Then it seems our editor wants a woman to have the right to repudiate her marriage contract whenever she feels unsatisfied with it.

We once heard a lady say that a woman had a right to break any contract she had made if it was for her interest to do so. Perhaps the lady was rather hard pressed for something to say just then. The idea seems to have got out some way that woman is an irresponsible being. This must be a gross slander on womankind. If it were said of men they would resent it as an insult. Woman is not so undeveloped as that.

No, the abolition of the marriage rite will not solve the problem. Only right conduct can do that. Of course most of us try to do right, but we can not hope to succeed while we have such narrow views of life. We need not follow the philosopher up the mountain side; we can select some of the necessary rules of procedure of civilized society and practice them. If these are constantly violated by us our dearest associates will soon be forced to resist, in self-defense, which we in our narrowness mistake for meanness, and then all our love flies.

Narrow minds will in time grow broad. "All things come to him who waits;" not always in this life, but this life should occupy but a small space in our picture. If a loved one has forsaken thee, wait. "Love never dies."

Friday Harbor, Wash.

In Extremis.

(Myriam Harry, in "La Fronde." Translated from the French by C. L. Swartz.)

For several days Lucienne had lain unconscious in a fever. Edmond, her husband, stricken at the height of his happiness, in the fullness of his love, followed the phases of her illness with an overwhelming consternation.

Incapable of collecting his thoughts apart from her, he wandered idly about the apartment, now rendered immense by the silence and the anxiety, but always returning to the room where Lucienne, pale and emaciated, her head wreathed in her tangled blonde hair, almost angelic in her sweetness and purity, lay ensconsed among the pillows. He pressed his lips piously upon the little hand with the bluish veins; then he stole away on tiptoes, intimidated by the nurse, uneasy and awkward, his large body tossing like an abandoned ship; and his vigorous arms, with nothing to be held in them, dangled in distress.

That night Edmond insisted upon sitting up with his wife.

Leaning back in an armchair, he gazed amorously at Lucienne's fine features, spiritualized by the indistinct glimmer of the lamp and so childish that he asked himself if that little girl, lost in that large bed, was really his wife.

And he recalled her as he saw her for the first time, frail, thin, pale, with the deep gaze of her large, candidly astonished eyes. Smitten with her moral beauty, which he divined behind her physical fragility, he married her, sure in advance of finding through her all attainable happiness.

During these six years of married life, he had never failed to realize his every hope. Believing her frank, loyal, loving, he had persuaded himself that she had given herself to him for life,—to him alone.

In his necessity for illusion, he had made of her the living dream of his life of dreams, without ever wondering if she really were she of whom he sang in his sonnets and in his passionate poems. Lucienne, proud of these poems, had never consented to profane them by publication; she jealously hid them away, calling them her "titles of nobility," read them from time to time to "invest herself with their powers," as she said.

And now Edmond, sitting opposite the sick one, thought melancholily of his verses. He conceived the idea of re-reading them. He took the keys of the little desk in which they were kept and went into the adjoining room. He opened the desk, and, unlocking Lucienne's secret drawer, he withdrew a package carefully bound round with a ribbon. He untied the knot. A bunch of letters fell, scattering themselves over the table.

Edmond looked twice. He was mistaken, for they were not his verses, and still he knew that Lucienne always put them there. He didn't recoguize these letters addressed to his wife, and their writing inspired in him instinctively a bitter animosity.

Would Lucienne, so good, have received and hidden in her desk the correspondence of a guilty friend? No; for she would have spoken to him about it; and yet he could imagine nothing else. But what pained Edmond more than the mere hiding of the letters was the fact that she had reserved for these doubtless unimportant things the little sanctuary from which his verses were now banished. He meant to replace the package, promising himself to ask her about these later; but, pushed by that incertitude, which would prolong itself perhaps, and in order to acquit her (something in him but which was not him had already accused her), he unfolded with feverish haste the sheets which frequent reading had crumpled.

The letters were certainly intended for his wife.

A painful lassitude overcame him; an intense pain in his head almost prevented him from reading. It seemed to him that a part of his brain was torn out with each line and that a drop of blood fell from his heart on each word. Mechanically he wiped the paper with his handkerchief, when he saw that he was mistaken,—that merely his tears had run down his cheeks without his noticing them.

He sank into a chair, wishing to die; and unconsciously he sobbed: "Lucienne, Lucienne!"

Little by little his wife's image came back to him; her sweetly limpid glance responded to the appeal of his eyes; he saw her lips, slightly disdainful, blossom into a luminous smile, and her young form, gracious and chaste, shuddered for him. And he groaned:

"No; it's impossible! Every other one, yes; but she, no,—she could not deceive me!"

However, the letters irrefutably showed her guilt. Then the other presented himself to his mind. An atrocious jealousy burned into his very heart, for he knew now that she had given herself to the "other" as she had given herself to him, with the modesty of her amorous flesh and the infinite tenderness of her dreamy soul. And he thought that, while he confined himself in an absolute but ridiculous fidelity, she had opened the door of her heart to a stranger and the intruder had walked side by side with him in the love of this woman—his wife.

"The thief!"

With violent gesture he scattered the letters which covered the carpet, like petals fallen from a great flower. He laughed painfully.

"There's how my illusions fall to pieces—all at once."

A stiffness of all his muscles had followed his dejection. He was shaken with a furious anger, and he fumed with savage hatred because he could not kill the "other." He had never suspected his existence and did not even know his name.

But wasn't she the real guilty one? No penalty could adequately punish her crime.

He wanted to strangle her with his hands, call her the names that are applied to women of the street, contradict the seeming purity of her eyes, fix her forever in her lie. Edmond rushed toward Lucienne's room. But a look toward the bed—their bed—made him tremble like a reed; his legs shook; and, feeling that he was going to fall in a heap before the bed, he turned brusquely around to go out.

His anger had already abated somewhat. The desire to go away from her, to leave that house forever, became imperious. On the other hand, to leave her like that was to kill her. And he thought with a bitter satisfaction that she would awake presently and that, with the name of the "other" upon her lips, she would call her husband with the perfidious sweetness of her voice. The silence alone would respond to her supplications and she would know the frightfulness of being abandoned.

With his hand on the door knob Edmond murmured:

"And then let her call 'him' and she will see whether he will come to her aid!"

A long, imploring, suffering, frightened cry sounded through the night.

"Henri!"

Edmond started, awed. That name—he had read it at the bottom of the letters. It pierced his heart like an arrow and held him at the door.

Motionless, haggard, he listened to this name, escaping from his wife's lips and echoing among the walls, daily witnesses of her adoration. How well he recognized that persuasive, tender, caressing voice! Finally, exhausted, she struggled, stifled, cried:

"Henri! Henri! Henri!"

The last cry rattled in her throat.

Edmond still listened.

Silence again enveloped the house.

Edmond felt as if he had just submitted to a terrible operation, the shock of which he still could sense.

He placed his hand on his heart,—he looked at the clock. He heard the incessant tick-tock, but he was not certain that it did not come from the pulsations of his heart. Hen-ri, Hen-ri—was it his heart or really the clock that thus hammered out the seconds?

A plaintive moan recalled him to the reality. He threw down his hat and flew to Lucienne.

"You are suffering, my darling!"

She ceased moaning, and, lifting herself up feebly, she stretched her arms toward him, while her eyes fixed on him a look of infinite sweetness, but also full of vague reproaches.

He sat down on the bed. She, trembling, pressed herself against him, seeking his heart in order to rest her burning head upon it. And seeing that poor little body, which seemed to shun itself and to take refuge near another strong and protecting one, Edmond felt a profound pity awakening in him; and, putting his arms around her, he rocked her gently on his bosom.

Lucienne, silent but instinctively happy, pressed her body more closely against him. Edmond, with sad irony but without rancor, asked himself:

"Is it I or he whom she embraces?"

Then seeking excuses for her weakness, he thought:

"She finds herself held by an inexorable fatality; she has been held in a spell by the mysterious laws of love, and her frail body has not known how to resist her heart, too strong and too fecund in tenderness. I ought, like a brother, to have kept temptations away from her; but I contented myself with being her lover and her clerk. I have preferred my illusion to her; in order to flatter my pride and shirk my responsibility I have dreamed her perfect. No, she is not guilty; my presumptuous confidence is alone at fault."

And following his work of exculpation he mused:

"I have accused her of lies and treachery. She has perhaps been frank and sincere in her two affections. Her soul belongs to a different world from mine and its conditions of love are different from mine. She has dreamed of the infinite; she has not wished to wall up her heart in a single and selfish happiness.

"No, she is not a thief; she has stolen nothing from me; she has given me the part of love which a man can secure in life, and I am still a chosen one. If she has not the 'honesty' of the 'virtuous" woman, she has the loyalty of the real lover,—the loyalty not to make those suffer whom she loves. Most niggardly is the happiness of possessing a faithful wife who, under the pretext of belonging only to her husband, stifles a part of her nature.

"Ah! little Lucienne, how sweet you are!"

(Edmond felt her slender fingers passing through his hair.)

"Little Lucienne, how adorable you are with your tigress caresses, with your dreamy eyes, and with your enigmatic love!"

And he felt that in the nobility of her soul she had tried thus to cover up and blot out all the shame of treachery and all the terrors of lying, while she had saved him all the pains of suspicion and the humiliations of jealousy.

Lucienne was asleep. Her breathing was regular,—her fever had abated.

Edmond laid her back among the pillows, and, while thinking of all the suffering that was in store for that being of strange sensibility, he sighed sadly:

"She will live, perhaps."

Then, thinking also of the happiness which she would still bring to him, he said, almost with joy:

"She will surely live!"

He went out into the next room. Slowly, very slowly, he gathered up, one by one, the scattered letters and the dry flowers, which had fallen from the envelopes.

And, having tied them up with the pink ribbon, he put them back with resignation into the secret drawer.

"Is It Any Wonder" Yes!

BY FRANK REED.

It is a wonder, and a most mystifying one too, how such men and such ideas have managed to live during the past hundred years of light. The Rev. A. R. Adams (see Lucifer No. 872) thinking he sees a happy state for himself and a few close friends in the endless future, would rather see the rest of mankind roasting in eternal torment, than to relinquish his supposed legal claim to eternal joy. It would be better that God and all His works, go to pieces, than that any being suffer everlasting torment.

But this idea is too high for the Rev. Adams; he is made of the same stuff as the one from whom I shall now quote. The celebrated Jonathan Edwards, when preaching upon the subject of torment years ago in New England, was asked if the sufferings of the lost would not mar the bliss of God's people in glory? Here is the substance of his answer—take particular notice of it!

"No; you will be so changed that such matters will not affect you; you will look over the battlements of heaven and see in torment your neighbors and friends, yea, your own parents and children, brothers and sisters, and turning round will praise God the louder because his justice is made manifest."

The simple power to enforce obedience to commands, neither makes it right to obey nor proper to command. Let us be forever done with the thought, "the king can do no wrong." We may, with reason, believe that the God of nature will do no wrong, but if he should do what some of our religious brethren imagine him threatening to do, it would be a million times greater crime than any man could commit! It will be well for the Rev. Adams and those of his stamp of mind, to consider a few fundamental facts and truths.

The man who turns from an evil course, is forgiven that instant, for man stands condemned or approved before his own conscience. The idea that an outside judgment is to be passed on man's soul, that some one not himself, is to condemn him, regardless of what the man's own conscience has to say about the matter, is the idea of foolish children. Man must be led to see his crime as such, his own conscience must condemn the act before he can be sentenced, and the moment he casts from him the thought and desire to commit crime or do wrong, that moment he is forgiven. Man is like a piece of gold; no matter how much dirt and filth he has passed through, he is pure gold the moment he turns from his evil ways. This is why the Bible tells man that there is forgivness and repentance up to the eleventh hour. So long as there is reason left to appeal to, there is a chance to repent, and when one repents, he has not to wait for some arbitrary power to forgive him. No man's acts are finally judged and decided by a higher judge than that of his own conscience and reason, and the Bible does not point to any.

Our over-zealous brothers and sisters, imagine they see great gulfs of fire and spike-tailed devils, eagerly waiting the coming of the wicked, who do not read carefully enough to find out that the fire they read of was nothing more nor less than fires that were kept burning in the garbage dumps of the city of Jerusalem. Some of these animal remains would hang in the rocks above, as they fell from the long shoot through which they were shot; on these carcasses the worms never died, while in the valley below, the fires were never quenched. Whether a man repent yesterday or today, makes no difference, so far as forgiveness goes; he will simply require more time to get free from his scars and wounds, the longer he remains at war with nature, that is all. The rewards are nature's price for obedience to all her laws, while the sins or evil acts, are punished with penalties of suffering and loss of joy. Who does not know that there is more joy in living strictly in obedience to one's conscience, than in trying to put it down or kill it in acts of pure selfishness?

The second death is the dissolution of the soul, and how a mind could exist, when the body through which it now expresses itself, is dissolved, none but idiots and foolish people can answer. Nature promises eternal conscious existence to the righteous, or to those who are fully developed, while she threatens to annihilate that which falls short of perfection. This is reasonable; only that which is perfect could possibly hold together for an eternity, and the imperfect must suffer dissolution. The God without can only appeal to the God or good within; if the Christ principle is not in man, there is no sense in appealing to him. It will be well to remember this fact—"The Shakespeare" without can only speak to the Shakespeare within.

A Plaint from Patchogue.

Mrs. B.—What do you think? My husband says I must wear a modest bathing suit or none at all this summer!

Mrs. G.—The horrid thing! What will you do about it.

Mrs B.—Wear none at all.

Some Worse Than Useless Fruits of Scientific Torture.

Have our readers heard of the terrible serum disaster at Milan? Twenty diphtheria patients, treated with serum, developed tetanus and died, victims of the "latest scientific discovery."

A great pother has been made over this occurrence. Another case of locking the stable door after the horse is stolen. The Milan institute has been closed, the use of the serum prohibited throughout Italy, all in the market called in, and all in the course of preparation destroyed. But these precautions will not call the dead to life.

The antitoxin manufacturers apparently did not know what they were furnishing the public. They say that the diphtheritic serum may have contained tetanus germs, or that they may have got mixed up and furnished anti-tetanus serum. These excuses do not excuse. The incident is characteristic of what may happen at any time when physicians use decaying filth as a remedial agent. In all probability, the serum had developed a poisonous ptomaine, which caused the attacks of tetanus. But Ephraim is so joined to his idols that doubtless some far-fetched excuse will be found upon which to saddle responsibility for these murders of a charlatan science, and its exponents will go on experimenting on the people.

It has never yet been demonstrated that horse serum is of the slightest utility in diphtheria. Unless the serum could be taken from the artificially infected horse and transferred direct into the waiting patient's system, without the addition of any drug whatsoever; unless this experiment be many times multiplied, with prompt and favorable results in all cases, the antitoxin has had no real trial. To add carbolic acid, a remedy of known therapeutic worth in diphtheria and throat troubles, then give the serum indiscriminately with a prepossession in its favor, is no test at all.

As for laboratory experiments on rabbits and mice, they are not worth the paper they are written on. The merit of any medicine must always be determined by its clinical record, and its effects must be watched by keen, critical, conscientious eyes. The laboratory juggling of men seeking to substantiate theories is not worth a rap to practitioners who must cure their patients to get reputation and make a living. Antitoxin is like a gun. It may or may not be loaded. The doctor who uses it takes deadly chances. A few disasters like that at Milan would make an American town too hot to hold the doctor who turned such a pestilence loose on a community. We have not the continental faculty for dressing up facts and deceiving ourselves. It savors of malpractice to employ a dangerous and deadly substance, of which we know nothing except a fanciful and elaborate hypothesis, in the treatment of sick people.

Let the deadly serum alone. You can get all the benefit from pure solutions of carbolic acids (one-eighth of one per cent.), and you will not run the risk of killing somebody, as you must do every time you inject antitoxin.—Dr. Lawrence, editor "Medical Brief."

Perhaps Mr. James has at hand "scientific" statistics showing just how many thousands or hundreds of thousands of harmless animals have been tortured to death in order to give publicity to "a fanciful and elaborate hypothesis" of a "charlatan science."

A Baltimore Belle.

Kitty—Charley Jones proposed to me last night, and when I accepted him he wanted to kiss me.

Janet—Well, did you kiss him?

Kitty—Why, no, indeed, I can't go around kissing every man I meet.—Baltimore World.

Changed Circumstances.

She—Oh, Jack! You didn't shoot that poor little bird, did you?

He—Why, yes, dear; I thought you'd like it to trim a hat.

She—Oh, how good of you! It's perfectly lovely!—Philadelphia Record.

A Word About "Free Unions."

BY CHARLES J. LEWIS, M. D.

Love is a tender regard for another of the opposite sex, according to poets, and it is expected to exist between couples while either shall live. "Free" as well as "bonded" unions hold to this love-endurance. Each member of free unions, however, pretends to allow to the other partner full privilege to choose companionship, while the bonded union refuses such liberty. Emma Goldman said that "free unions fall short of their ideals and fail."

In fact, unions are formed for the promotion and maintenance of happiness. When the basis of happiness is too idealistic for the lovers to practice, there will be discontent, cooling of the affections, murmurings, bickerings and the climax of separation. Disappointment and failure is sure to come to one united to a "faultless" partner.

All unions formed in love in consonance with the views of physiology, having for their aim the consummation of acts which, though accompanied with the acme, yet momentary, thrills, tend to perpetuate the species, and are entered into for these purposes only. Such unions are true unions. True, in that they do not depend upon the poet's definition of love, nor his characterization of lovers. Tis the poet's love that tires by time; the physiologic, never. For, during the functioning age, it is ever aglow. It does not fret in sickness nor worry in distress; nor does either become surly upon seeing the other without a smile on the face.

Upon paying close attention to the momentous question of sex unions, we will doubtless arrive at the conclusion that a life of misery, forebodings of evil, and "broils" will be the lot of more than half of the unions formed in accordance with views and expectations so false and theories so absurd as are reflected in the poet's description of love. For the poet's definition of the word love which is too hazy for comprehension, and too self-sacrificing for human pairs to realize in their daily grind of bait and "bouts," let us substitute one that will overlook such a temptation, for instance, as the chance meeting of a person who at once captivates, entices, and mayhap, gets the tender feelings inextricably entangled.

When each person to the "union" is free to express physiologic love without restraint, then, and then only, will it be rare for entanglement of the affections—on the side—to become serious, affection withdrawn, and kind acts withheld. Such unions will be real, physiologic, natural; will not be failures.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New.

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

Speak what you think now, in hard words, and tomorrow speak what tomorrow thinks in hard words again, though it contradict everything you said today. A man should never be ashamed to own he has been wrong, which is but saying that he is wiser today than he was yesterday.—Emerson.

Sayings—No. 3.

BY FRANCIS BARRY.

Our main business in this world is, not to love, but to work. All the love we deserve is just enough to keep us in good working order.

The reason so many have found so-called love, in so-called freedom, unsatisfying, is because they have sought happiness when they should have been seeking their tasks, leaving happiness to come in its own time and way.

All things should make us happy—the rustling leaf, the robin's twitter, that sweetest of all earthly things, the touch of a lover's hand, all things Walt Whitman could name; but the highest, largest, deepest, noblest happiness is that which comes from delight in work, for self growth, and the upliftment of the race.

The honorable and manly man, worthy the society of women, will never use language to which a sensible woman may not listen. But the worker for human elevation, (and there is no other honorable or manly man) will not get up on stilts to do his work; but when he would help his brothers in the mire, while he does not the least bit of wallowing with them, will not essay to preach, or seem to be a saint, but will adroitly direct attention to what is clean, and interesting, and of practical use.

Promiscuity, of every sort, is detestable, and among the meanest of the sorts, is promiscuous jealousy. A clean and manly man cannot love a woman whose sphere does not keep at a distance all such as harbor in their souls or bodies any selfishness or uncleanness, but the genuine lover, he whose love is not a pretense, he who is not fooling himself, and trying to fool others, that he knows what love is, will be made happy by everything that is to his lover a happiness and a blessing.

If I really love a woman I will recognize her as the regulator of her own conduct, and if she loves, in any degree, another man, confessedly as clean, and sweet, and generous, and reliable, and lovable as I, it will add to my happiness as well as hers.

This is not saying one word in favor of non-exclusive love, but it is saying a very strong word, and a very truthful word, in favor of woman being the arbiter of her own destiny. If she is really blest (and she is to judge) and made happy by any course in life, and I am not made happy by her course, it only proves that we do not belong together to any great extent, and if we have made large investments in each other, a terrible mistake has been made, and we must suffer and grow wiser, as other sinners and fools have to do.

From "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam."

As under cover of departing Day
Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazan away,
  Once more within the Potter's house alone
I stood, surrounded by the Shapes of Clay.

Shapes of all Sorts and Sizes, great and small,
That stood upon the floor and by the wall;
  And some loquacious Vessels were; and some Listen'd perhaps, but never talk'd at all.

Said one among them—"Surely not in vain
"My substance of the common Earth was ta'en
  "And to this Figure molded, to be broke,
"Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again."

"Then said a Second—"Ne'er a peevish Boy
"Would break the Bowl from which he drank in joy;
  "And He that with his hand the Vessel made
"Will surely not in after Wrath destroy."

After a momentary silence spake
Some Vessel of a more ungainly Make;
  "They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
"What! did the Hand then of the Potter shake?"

Whereat some one of the loquacious Lot—
I think a Sufi pipkin—waxing hot—
  "All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
"Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?"

"Why," said another, "Some there are who tell
"Of one who threatens he will toss to Hell
  "The luckless Pots he marr'd in making—Pish!
"He's a Good Fellow, and 'twill all be well."

Notes From the Book Department.

"If you see it in the Sun it's so," was not written of the series of pamphlets under the name of "The Sun," published by C. T. Fowler, in Kansas City, in '85-'86. Yet this assertion is more nearly true of Mr. Fowler's publications than of the New York "Sun" at whose head it stands. These pamphlets have been out of print for several years; but recently in re-arranging the contents of a store-room I found a few copies. The titles are:

"Co-operation, It's Laws and Principles." With portrait of Herbert Spencer. "Co-operation is as much in advance of civilization as civilization is in advance of barbarism." Price twenty cents.

"Prohibition; or the relation of Government to Temperance." Price, ten cents.

"The Reorganization of Business." With portrait of R. W. Emerson. As keynotes these sentences of Emerson are given: "Of all debts, men are least willing to pay their taxes. . . . . Everywhere they think they get their money's worth except for these. . . . Every actual State is corrupt. Good men must not obey the laws too well. . . . Want of liberty, by strengthening law and decorum, stupefies conscience. . . . From neither party while in power has the world any benefit to expect. . . . The appearance of character makes the State unnecessary. . . . Roads can be built, letters carried, and the fruits of labor secured when the government of force is at an end." Price, twenty cents.

"Co-operative Homes." With portrait of Louise Michel. Twenty cents.

"Corporations." With portrait of Wendell Phillips. This little work is of especial value just now, when questions relating to the trusts, great strikes, etc., are forcing themselves on the attention of every one. Price, twenty cents.

"Land Tenure." With portrait of Robert Owen. General delusion that land values benefit society; City values and rents; Futility of legislation; Colonization schemes; Authority for holding land; Administering this land tenure. Price, 20 cents.

Mr. Fowler's works are altogether too valuable to be lost to the world merely because the first editions are practically exhausted. His own life was cut short soon after the publication of his pamphlets; but his work should live. We hope to republish them, some day.

* * *

We still have in stock a few volumes of Lucifer, well bound in cloth, for the year '99. While they last we will send a copy to any address for $1.50.

* * *

Dr. J. H. Greer has recently issued a new edition of his "Talks on Nature," advertised elsewhere in this paper. Until further notice we will send the new edition, cloth bound, for twenty-five cents to all who enclose six cents extra for postage.

* * *

The first five numbers of the Light-Bearer Library, with the exception of "Marriage and Morality" (of which the stock is low) are out of print. We can still fill orders for the remainder —"Motherhood in Freedom," "The Coming Woman," "Plain Words on the Woman Question," "The Evolution of Modesty," "Marriage," "A Tale of the Strassburg Geese," and "Institutional Marriage," at five cents a copy.

* * *

"Marriage, Maternity, Health and Hygiene" is the title of a work by Dr. J. H. Greer which has recently come to us. The chapter titles are: "Home and Family; Heredity; Pre-natal Influences; Marriage; Child Culture; Long Life; Respiration; Sleep and the Bath; Dress; Mental and Physical Culture; Don't's in Sickness; What to Do in Sickness; Care of the Eyes and Ears; Care of the Extremities; Don't Worry. The final chapter consists of eighty pages of "Simple Treatment for Common Diseases." 204 pages; bound in cloth $1. A great deal of valuable information in compact form. L. H.

Variety's the source of joy below.
From which still fresh revolving pleasures flow;
In books and love, the mind we ever pursue,
And only change the expiring flames renew.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

879

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Lucifer's Coming of Age.

BY M. HARMAN.

About two thousand years ago Julius Cæsar wrote his comments on the Gallic war, in which he himself was by far the chief figure. To avert ill-natured criticism, perhaps, he avoided the use of the first person singular, and spoke as a disinterested spectator or contemporary observer might do, instead of as an active participant in the events described by him.

Some years after the time of the first Cæsar, another Roman author, Virgil, wrote one of the most famous of all epics, the Æneid, in which he makes his hero to begin the story with the words, "I am pious Æneas, known in fame even to the stars," and, speaking of the events of his narration he adds. "All of which I saw, and a great part of which I was."

Here we have conspicuous examples of the two opposite methods or styles of telling a story. Æneas was frankly egotistic, proud if not vain of his achievements and fame, desirous of impressing his hearers, at the outset, with a sense of his own personal importance in the events he was about to narrate. Cæsar, on the other hand, though probably no less personally conscious and vain of his own importance as chief actor in the drama he is to describe, no less desirous of name and fame, artfully seeks to conceal his own personality as historian, hoping doubtless to dull the shafts of cotemporary criticism thereby.

Obviously each of these methods has its advantages; Cæsar's is the more dispassionate, the more dignified, the more philosophic, while that of Æneas is the more dramatic, the more realistic, and impresses the hearer or reader, usually, with a greater assurance that he is getting the exact facts, and also the motives that lie behind the facts; and when the egoistic element is not made offensively prominent, as in the case of Æneas, personal narration possesses a charm for most readers that is not found in the non-personal, the purely historic variety.

It is this personal element that makes autobiography so universally popular; witness Franklin's memoirs, Selkirk's Robinson Crusoe, etc.

In reciting the story of Lucifer's birth and adolescence while I cannot say with Æneas, "All of which I saw" I can truly say, "a great part of which I WAS." The history of the little journal of which this is the Twenty-First Anniversary Number is so closely identified with my own, that it is quite impossible to separate the two. So completely has the editorial and business management of the publication absorbed and monopolized my time and energy all these years that to leave Lucifer out would seem to leave these years—the prime of my manhood—a comparative blank. For this if for no other reason I shall make free use of the pronoun "I" in this brief historical sketch, instead of the circumlocutions that would otherwise be necessary to clear statement.

But while postulating, or claiming, as I do, that the history of no other person is so completely identified with our "Morning Star" as is my own, I would by no means forget that I have had many helpers, many able and devoted assistants, both in the business department and in the editorial. In a recent issue of Lucifer it was mentioned that it had been published twenty-one years "under the same editorial management," or words to that effect. This statement is true only as regards general principles, policies, objects and methods of publication. As its first editor; as the writer of the series of articles in the local papers that paved the way for its birth; as senior editor always when not its sole editor, I have claimed and exercised chief control, editorially and in business management.

Having taken so much of my limited space in preliminaries I hasten and also condense:

In March 1880, Gregorian calendar, having then lately removed from Missouri to Kansas, I became involved in a newspaper controversy with the Christians of Valley Falls, a pretty little city, midway between Topeka and Atchison on the Santa Fe Railway. It had then two weekly papers, five or six churches, several flourishing manufacturing establishments, good schools, as schools go, and was and is a very good sample of cities of second or third class in the young commonwealth of Kansas, a name ever memorable for the bloody dramas enacted on its soil during the five or six years immediately preceding the great American Civil war of 1861.

Among the social and intellectual institutions of this little city I found a club calling itself the "Valley Falls Liberal League" holding a charter from the "National Liberal League," an organization whose chief motto was the "Complete Separation of Church and State." This local league or club was the successor of an older club that for many years had held weekly meetings at the office of S. R. Shepherd, now of Leavenworth, Kansas, which meetings were conducted on the plan of equal rights for all, regardless of race, color, party or creed. Mr. Shepherd had been the founder and chief promoter of this club, and to him, to this pioneer abolitionist, newspaper man, freethinker of the agnostic type, also social reformer on all lines, belongs the credit of starting and fostering the movement that made the birth of Lucifer possible at the time and place aforesaid. But I am running ahead of my story.

The newspaper discussion already referred to was called out in this way: A course of public lectures by O. A. Phelps—a Freethought lecturer of considerable celebrity, whose name is doubtless remembered by many of our readers, had been delivered at Valley Falls in February 1880, during which course frequent challenges were made by the speaker to the resident clergy, to jointly discuss the issues dividing the current and popular theologies from the deductions of modern science as taught by leading Freethinkers and Agnostics of England and America. To these challenges no response was heard till after the departure of Mr. Phelps when, over the signature of "Sylvester," some criticisms of the lectures appeared in the "Valley Falls New Era," to which I, as a member of the Liberal League, replied over the pseudonym "Rustic." This name was taken partly in reference to my lack of experience as a writer for the press. While the identity of "Sylvester" was not hard to find it is mere conjecture as to who wrote the series of letters over his signature that appeared in the "New Era" during the months that followed the Phelps lectures but the preponderance of evidence is that they were written, or at least mainly inspired, by the "Congregational" minister of the city, a man of very considerable learning and skill in debate, named Wilson, and who had often participated in the debates of the "Philomatic Society"—the name of the Freethought club founded by S. R. Shepherd.

As the discussion proceeded it became more and more voluminous until the editor said he could not spare so much of his space. Then our club proposed that the discussion be printed on a separate sheet, as a supplement to the "New Era," the expense to be paid by us. This offer was accepted and adopted, until having received many complaints from his Christian patrons the editor of the "New Era" declined, peremptorily, to have anything further to do with the controversy, in connection with his paper.

The next step in the evolution of Lucifer was natural and logical. Having reached the limit of the embryonic stage of growth a birth, or abortion, became inevitable. Our club decided to make it a BIRTH—by giving to the heretofore "Supplement to the New Era" the name "Valley Falls Liberal," and changing its form to that of a four page sixteen column monthly, price fifty cents per year; the initial number of which, as already stated, was issued sometime in August 1880, under the management of M. Harman and A. J. Searl.

Mr. Searl was then secretary of the local League, and had been for many years one of the best known and most active, clear-headed and logical of the Valley Falls Freethinkers, and as such had rendered efficient aid, with pen and purse, in preparing the way for the successful birth of a Freethought journal. About this time, too, he held the position of Secretary and later of President of the Kansas State Liberal League. Although his official connection with the Liberal was of brief duration—one year—Brother Searl deserves honorable mention for timely services in labor and money, in putting the infant journal in shape to fight the battles that were in store for it. Having decided to take a course of study at the University of Kansas he removed his young family about this time to the historic city of Lawrence, and, devoting his energies to literary and scientific pursuits gradually dropped out of the public agitation of thought along radical lines.

Prominent among those whose names should receive honorable mention at this place for what they did in giving life and sustenance to the young journal is that of Susan Reicherter, who, for the first year or two did more than any one else to obtain subscribers and donations for the new enterprise, also that of her husband John, who nobly seconded her efforts; also the name of Noah H. Harman, one of the most substantial farmers of Eastern Kansas, and who afterward became still better known as the editor and publisher of the "Farmer's Vindicator" at Valley Falls; also that of John Ernst, of Arrington, Kansas, and, notably, that of Charles Robinson of Lawrence—first governor of Kansas, the "War Governor," as he is often called, and whose history of the war in Kansas and the events that preceded it, is doubtless the most reliable of all the accounts yet written of that memorable period, supplemented as it is by the previously published work of Mrs. S. T. D. Robinson, his faithful companion and helper through all those stormy and perilous times; also that of C. B. Hoffman of Enterprise, Kansas, who has since achieved national reputation by his record as a reformer in politics, also by his connection with the Kansas Agricultural College at Manhattan. All of these persons were constant and faithful friends of Lucifer during all its years of conflict with the enemies of Free Speech, Free Press and Free Mails. Many other names should receive at least a passing notice, but space limitations forbid.

KANSAS LIBERAL.

At the end of the first year the name was changed to Kansas Liberal, and instead of monthly it was now to be issued fortnightly. Having as yet no outfit of our own the work was done in the office of the "New Era," G. D. Ingersoll editor and publisher. The growth of the young journal, though slow, was steady from the first, until April 1882 when, accepting the offer of the Kansas Liberal Union, of which C. B. Hoffman was then president, and Annie L. Diggs secretary, the paper became the organ of the state organization. The office of publication was removed to Lawrence, and the change made from a fortnightly to a weekly issue; myself remaining editor in chief, with Annie L. Diggs as assistant. This change brought a very considerable increase to the subscription list together with some important donations from such generous Liberals as ex-governor Robinson, C. B. Hoffman and others. Everything seemed now propitious for the young journal, but soon clouds began to appear in the horizon. Kansas had lately become what is called a "prohibition" state, and Mrs. Diggs was very prominent as an advocate of constitutional and statutory prohibition of the liquor traffic. On the other hand, while I at first favored the "Amendment" as a compromise, I soon saw that as a political measure it must prove a failure and be disastrous rather than beneficial to the cause of true temperance, and began to express myself accordingly in the paper. This naturally brought on a conflict of opinion with my assistant editor which prevented effective work together. A temporary arrangement was made by which the paper would continue the organ of the Liberal Union until after the annual convention of that organization in August of that year, after which by amicable agreement, I resumed entire charge of the paper, and brought it back to my home at Valley Falls.

This was one of the most critical periods in the life of our little journal. My old helpers at Valley Falls had not been pleased with the removal to Lawrence, believing that the original founders could not work successfully with the then officers of the Kansas Liberal Union; hence some were disposed to say, "Didn't I tell you so!" and were not now so enthusiastic in its support as at first. On the other hand, many of the new subscribers who joined us because of the fact that the paper was to be the organ of the Liberal Union now gradually withdrew their support. A faithful few remained, however, who gave me assurance that the paper should not die.

E. C. WALKER.

About this time, too, we were fortunate enough to receive a proposition from Edwin C. Walker, then secretary of the Iowa Liberal League, and by far its most active and efficient worker. Mr. Walker offered to come to Kansas and join forces with the Kansas Liberal, proposing an equal partnership therein. This offer was accepted; Mr. Walker entered the field as canvasser and editorial correspondent, while I did the office work, assisted by my son George, aged fifteen, and daughter Lillian, aged thirteen, who had already learned to set type. We lived on a little fruit farm one mile from the printery at which the type setting and press work were done. Editorial work was mainly done at home, in the early morning hours and late at night, while much of the day was spent by all three at work on the farm, raising fruits and vegetables, from the sale of which we supplied our own daily wants, besides helping to defray the expenses of publication; the folding and wrapping of the paper being done at night by the entire family, including wife Isabella, whom I had married since our removal to Kansas—my children having been left motherless by the hand of death, in Missouri, June 1877.

Mr. Walker proved himself a very efficient and successful canvasser for subscribers and for the sale of radical literature, and believing our prospects sufficiently encouraging to justify the venture, we bought type and other apparatus, including a Prouty power press, capable of printing one thousand impressions per hour. To enable us to do this we accepted the loan of several hundred dollars without interest from friends interested in our radical work.

In the summer of 1883 we held a decidedly successful campmeeting at Valley Falls, in the interest largely of our weekly and pamphlet publications, at which meeting Governor Robinson was chairman and one of our leading speakers; also, Mrs. H. S. Lake, Prof. W. F. Peck, O. A. Phelps, and other well known lecturers then in the Freethought field. About this time, too, the name of our weekly was changed to

LUCIFER THE LIGHT-BEARER.

The reasons for this change were mainly these:

1. The name "Liberal" had already been appropriated by five or six Freethought journals in various parts of the world, and by at least one political party—in England.

2. Lucifer, the ancient name of the Morning Star, now called Venus, seemed to us unsurpassed as a cognomen for a journal whose mission is to bring light to the dwellers in darkness—the darkness of superstition and ignorance, and as yet we knew of no journal called by that name.

CHANGE IN CHRONOLOGY.

The current and legal method of reckoning time in countries called Christian is based on two alleged supernatural events—the birth of Jesus, a Jewish socialistic reformer, and the formation of Adam, the supposed first man, out of the dust of the earth. Both of these alleged events are now wholly discredited by men of science and learning, whether churchmen or not, which is equivalent to saying that our present chronology has NO SCIENTIFIC basis. Conspicuous among reformers who have yielded up their lives in defense of human freedom and progress is the name of Giordano Bruno, an Italian Freethinker and philosopher who was burned at the stake at Rome, as a "heretic" or rebel against the authority of the Roman church, 301 years ago the 17th of last February, according to authentic records now extant.

Believing that a scientific age requires a scientific chronology, instead of that which is based on the myths and fables of superstitious theology, we adopted as such scientific basis, the burning of the martyred Bruno, and for convenience we make it run parallel with the current and unscientific calendar by dating our years backward forty-eight days, making the year begin near the winter solstice instead of nearly two months later, as it would do if we should date from the anniversary of Bruno's death.

Individualized by these changes—with a new, distinctive and very characteristic name; with a new chronology—the Brunonian and scientific instead of the Galilean and mythologic—equipped with a new outfit of type, also a new and good "cylinder" press; with a subscription list steadily, if slowly, increasing by additions from all parts of the English speaking world; aided by the income of a little fruit farm worked by ourselves, our little journal seemed at length established on reasonably sure foundations. For the next three years Mr. Walker spent most of his time in the canvassing and lecture field, except the summer of '85 which was devoted by him to manual labor on a "claim" in Southern Kansas, preparing a home for his two children and wife Laura, from whom he was then separated by a mutually satisfactory arrangement. Everything was moving along hopefully and with but little of the friction that so often defeats enterprises of similar aim and purpose.

But now again dark clouds began to gather in the journalistic sky, threatening to obscure if not to extinguish entirely the light of our "Son of the Morning," "Herald of the Dawn," as Lucifer was called by ancient poets. In June 286 E. M. (Era of Man) was published in our columns a communication that created quite a commotion among the conventional moralists of Valley Falls—the historic

MARKLAND LETTER.

This letter gave, in plain English, a brief account of what may rightly be called a worse than brutal outrage committed by a husband upon the person of his sick and suffering wife who had lately been operated upon by a surgeon at the time of childbirth, the woman being a mere child herself with neither physical force nor mental courage to defend herself against marital assault. The words used by Mr. Markland, though plain and somewhat unconventional, were such as are used in medical books, and found in all dictionaries.

Immediate steps were taken by the local guardians of "morality" to secure the arrest of the editors and publishers and for the suppression of the offending journal. Complaints were sent to headquarters at Washington, D. C., but for some weeks without visible results.

THE AUTONOMISTIC MARRIAGE.

In September of '86, soon after the publication of the "Markland Letter," occurred another event important in the history of Lucifer. This was the "Autonomistic Marriage" of E. C. Walker and Lillian Harman. This marriage consisted of an agreement, in the presence of relatives and friends, concerning the provisions of a "love and labor union" into which they proposed to enter. There were no obstacles to a legal union, Mrs. Walker having obtained a divorce from Mr. Walker a year previous to this date, and Mr. Walker having settled on her, for their children, all the property he possessed. But a legal union was not desired by either Lillian or Mr. Walker. She, however, felt that for the sake of her friends she preferred something in the way of a public acknowledgement of her choice, and this, a compromise, so to speak, between civil marriage and perfect freedom, was the result.

As space can be found for only the outlines of the history of our work, a description of the agreement between Lillian and Mr. Walker will not be given; but it can be found in "Autonomistic Marriage," a small pamphlet sold by us.

This affair, coming as it did when the prejudices of the community were already aroused, had the effect of inflaming the mob spirit to fever heat. Summary vengeance was threatened, and we were told that a mob was actually formed; but was persuaded by a "law-abiding citizen" to disband on promise that he would bring legal proceedings. In accordance with this promise, a warrant was sworn out charging Mr. Walker and Lillian with "living together without being married," "against the peace and dignity of the state of Kansas." Bonds were fixed at $1,000; but threats were openly made that any one going on the bond would find his houses, barns, etc., burnt in revenge by the mob.

The trial court found defendants guilty of living together without getting married, and sentenced Mr. Walker to seventy-five days and Lillian to forty-five days in jail, assessing costs against them. David Overmeyer and G. C. Clemens, both of Topeka and staunch friends of Lucifer, carried the case to the Supreme Court of Kansas, which eventually decided that defendants WERE married in common law, but were properly punished for not GETTING married. The Kansas statutes, by the way, while stating that a marriage license shall be taken out by those intending matrimony, provides no penalty for those who refuse to take out such license. Consequently, the defendants in this case were arrested for living together without BEING married and unlawfully "punished" for not "getting" married. That, however, while an important matter from the legal viewpoint was comparatively unimportant from ours; for neither Mr. Walker nor Lillian had any intention of recognizing the marriage as legal, though all the courts, civil and ecclesiastical, should pronounce it such. And though they have lived together for years in several states, Lillian has always retained her own name and neither has claimed any of the rights nor demanded any of the duties enforced by legal marriage.

Before the expiration of Lillian's forty-five days in jail she announced her intention of refusing to allow costs to be paid for her, and to this decision Mr. Walker also held at the expiration of his sentence. So instead of leaving the prison they remained for more than six months therein. By the way, it may be mentioned here, that the anniversary of Lillian's birth, Dec. 23, occurred after her sentence had expired, so that she presented the rather unusual spectacle of a young girl completing her seventeenth years voluntary prisoner.

It seemed now that the residence in jail was to be prolonged indefinitely. On hearing of the arrest of George Harman and myself, however, Mr. Walker and Lillian immediately decided to pay costs and leave the jail, she to return to work on Lucifer, he to whatever fate the United States Courts had in store for him; each with determination unshaken by the trials of the past or possibilities of the future.

While the persecution against Lillian Harman and E. C. Walker for alleged violations of the Kansas marriage laws were the real beginning of the attempts to suppress Lucifer by legal process—so-called, the orders for the arrest of the editors and publishers, as such, were not served till some months later. As night was closing down upon the workers in Lucifer's office, Feb. 16, 287, and we were about to start for home, a mile away, in walked City Constable Boles who introduced Mr. Thompson of Topeka.

"Glad to see you, Mr. Thompson," said I, with the customary form of salutation.

"Perhaps when you know my business you will not say that"—was the reply.

"Well, what is your business?"

For answer he read his warrant for the arrest of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and George Harman, by order of U. S. Commissioner Wilson, of Topeka, Kansas.

"When do you want us"? I then asked.

"Now."

"You will let us go home for a change of clothing?"

"No; you can send for your clothes, but you will stay where you now are till the train starts for Topeka, at ten o'clock tonight."

Accompanied by our kinsman N. H. Harman, who came in from his farm, three miles away, to go as bondsman for us, Son George and myself went with the Marshall to Topeka and gave bond in the sum of five hundred dollars each for our appearance at the ensuing session of the U. S. Court to be held in April following.

After many vexatious and expensive delays, appearances and re-appearances with our bondsmen at court, at Topeka and at Leavenworth, our cases were finally brought to trial in April 290, more than three years after the arrest. Mr. Walker and George were acquitted while I was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in penitentiary and to pay a fine of three hundred dollars.

Space failing I must bring my story to a close, by adding that from the time of the first arrest by Marshall Thompson till my final release from the Federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, April 4, 296, a period of more than nine years, I was never for one moment free from the "shadow of the jail"—that is, I was either securely locked within prison walls or was under bonds outside of those walls, with the threat of imprisonment, like the sword of Damocles, constantly hanging over my head.

Meantime Lucifer, the real object of the prosecutors, did not die; Lucifer did not suspend; Lucifer did not retract; Lucifer, "Son of the Morning," did not cease to shine on friend and foe alike. On the contrary it republished, more than once the articles on which the prosecutions were originally based.

After ten years of publication at Valley Falls the plant was removed to Topeka, whence, in April 296, it came to Chicago, where it is probable Lucifer will continue to shine till its mission of mental and moral enlightenment is ended.

Those of our readers who may care to read a more detailed account of the more than nine years prosecution of Lucifer, its editors and publishers, under the United States Censorship laws, are respectfully referred to the Autobiography of Moses Harman, now in course of preparation.

Special Notice.

Through an error in the mailing department our subscribers will receive their papers this week in two sections. We set the type in our own office; but the press work and mailing are done in a large establishment down town. In the press room it was understood that this was to be a double number; but the mailing department got the papers and sent them out. It is very vexatious, and the only thing to be done now is to put the two parts together when received by our subscribers.

Orders for extra copies will be filled with papers bound together properly.

ERRATA: This week's Lucifer is whole number 880 not 879, as stated on editorial page.

In article "Past and Future," page 258, line eight, for "concealing," read conceding, and, two lines below, "stullify," read stultify.

Paragraphs.

BY THE REV. SIDNEY HOLMES.

Vice is pernicious, but advice frequently is infamous.

Gratitude is the cruel landlord that turns Love out of the home.

Liberty of thought is a mockery if liberty of speech and of action is denied.

Experience teaches a dear school and she never fails to collect the tuition fee.

What you do for a person's "own good" almost invariably fails of its purpose.

Friendship is Love's twin brother. It is not always easy to tell one from t'other.

He to whom Vice offers no allurements deserves no praise for his pretence of Virtue.

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast," but the springs grow rusty as we grow older.

Love is an independent little fellow. Try to help him and you have your labor for your pains.

Even the most miserable derive a sort of grim happiness in the belief that no one else is as miserable as they.

As a man Jesus Christ is one of the most interesting characters in fiction. As a god he was a lamentable failure.

The womb of time is pregnant with the seed of higher criticism and must soon give birth to the science of the psychology of religion.

When we call woman an angel it is a confession that we have to draw on the imagination for something worthy of comparison with her.

The "wickedest" man personally is often the best man socially because infraction of moral laws, so-called, arouses thought as to the justice and the efficacy of those laws.

In almost every battle men on each side are sure theirs is the right side. This is not because men's ideas of justice and right are so radically different, but because their viewpoints are different.

The reason the churches are making so little progress is because the ideals of even the publicans and sinners nowadays are higher than those of the obsolete Yahveh of the Hebrew scriptures.

Occultism is the lethal anodyne that lulls the inquiring soul to sleep with phantasms and fairy tales. Give us rather the epiphany that holds the glass to earth and sky and makes clear the mysteries.

I have some very dear friends who are firm believers in what they call occultism. I have also some friends who are happier when they are asleep than when they are awake. For them the lullaby; for me the reveille.

A preacher in the east married the organist of his church a couple of weeks ago without letting the good old ladies in the congregation know beforehand of his intention. Gossip scarified the reputation of his wife and wounded his sensitive heart. He hanged himself in the church belfry. Now the young widow threatens to kill herself. Yet we talk of indicting railroad officials when a brakeman is killed.

Lucifer a Moral Antiseptic.

BY JONATHAN MAYO CRANE.

To young fellows, such as C. L. James and myself, twenty-one years is a long time. It seems almost incredible that I have been a reader of Lucifer during one-third of its lifetime. Pretty nearly that; I began nearly seven years ago.

I began because there was something in its defiance of custom, in its strenuous demand for better conditions, in its sturdy championship of personal liberty and the right of private judgment regarding what are commonly called ethical principles, that interested me.

No other paper had ever appealed so strongly to my innate sense of justice. The one that came the nearest to it, perhaps, was "The Twentieth Century" when Hugh O. Pentecost was at his best as its editor.

I felt that it was a terrible personal loss for me when Pentecost abandoned "The Twentieth Century," just as I and all the other readers of Lucifer would feel it a personal and almost irretrievable loss if Lucifer were to lose the wise and forceful pilot which has directed this little journalistic craft through fair and foul weather for more than a fifth of a century.

Such men are the salt of the earth, the moral antiseptic which arrests the decay of society and gives dear old Mother Nature a chance to make humanity purer, cleaner, sweeter, or, as Omar says, "remold it nearer to the heart's desire."

I have no wish in this Anniversary Number to enter into any controversy with either the editor or any of the contributors to Lucifer. I simply wish to give my testimony, as I used to do in Methodist class meeting; and to tell all of the Light Bearer's flock that I am glad to be one of them. Or, if a testimonial more in the nature of those given to efficacious medicine is preferable I would willingly write:

"Chicago, Ill., August 23, 1901. Editor of Lucifer: Dear Sir: Several years before reading your valuable paper I contracted a serious case of matrimony. I began to read your paper regularly and I have never married since. Please put me down for another year's subscription, for I have lately experienced some pronounced symptoms of a relapse."

The Autobiography.

In answer to many inquiries I wish to say, briefly, that the Autobiography promised and begun more than two years ago, is still unfinished, with much yet to do before it can go to press. Also that I think it unwise to make any more promises as to when it will appear, except perhaps to say, in a general way, that if my health should continue to improve, as I have good reason to hope it will do with the approach of cooler weather, and if no unforeseen accident should occur to prevent, the volume will be ready for delivery to subscribers on or before the first of January next. If this is not satisfactory to subscribers who have paid money for the book, this money will be returned, on application, or will be applied to subscription to Lucifer, or the amount in other literature advertised by us, will be sent instead.

M. HARMAN.

A Definition.

BY ROBERT C. ADAMS.

A free lover is one who believes in the right of private judgment in sex morals. He thinks that continence, marriage, variety or prostitution are matters that concern the individual and that any restriction or dictation on the part of church or state as to private conduct in the exercise of sexual functions is a trespass upon freedom.

It is not correct to refer to a free lover as a varietist any more than it is accurate to call a freethinker an atheist. A freethinker is one who claims the right of private judgment in religion. He rejects the claim that there is any revealed, authoritative standard of religious belief. He may be a theist, deist, agnostic or atheist but he demands liberty of thought and speech on religious topics. To be consistent he should demand it on all topics, but there are some persons who should be styled freethinkers limited, for they restrict liberty of thought to the realm of religion and are intolerant to anarchy, socialism, free trade, free rum and free love.

Some free lovers are continent and many are faithful to the marriage bond. They only agree in asserting the right for each person to determine how he or she shall live their sexual lives. Some advocate one theory and some another and few will venture to declare that any one system of life is adapted to all people and places.

Before the present era of higher criticism and scientific research the enemies of rationalism always classed freethinkers with blasphemers and blackguards, just as now the enemies of sex freedom allude to free lovers as rakes and debauchees. But as free thought was stood up to by its adherents in spite of religious abuse so free love must be championed against the assaults of prudery.—Republished by Request.

"I like Lucifer; but I can't agree with everything I see in it," is a comment frequently heard. Neither do I agree with every opinion which appears in Lucifer—one would have to be a very lively mental acrobat to be able to do so. It has always been the policy of the editor to give all sides a hearing, so far as practicable. Each writer, alone, should be held responsible for opinions expressed under his name. L. H.

Woman's Life in China.

Of the position of women in China, a correspondent of the New York "Sun" writes:

The two dreaded ordeals to which Chinese girls look forward with more or less apprehension, are foot binding and marriage. Foot binding is not so universal as is generally supposed; nor is it confined to the daughters of the higher classes. The Manchus, to which race the Empress Dowager and the Court officials and the military classes belong, have never observed the senseless custom.

Poets and novelists have praised the stunted feet, comparing them to "golden lilies," and the hobbling gait which follows the crippling to "the swaying of lilies upon their stems." It is extremely difficult for Chinese of the higher classes to find husbands for their daughters whose feet have attained the natural size. It is thought that women who desire unmaimed feet are actuated by no honorable motive; the crippling making it difficult for them to go about and keeping them more closely at home than would be the case if they had full use of the stunted members.

At the same time, bound-foot women may be seen toiling in the fields, carrying heavy burdens—poor oppressed drudges, who frequently end their lives by opium, or leaping into the wells.

Marriage is wholly problematical, being arranged by the omnipresent go-between. The husband and wife do not see each other until the veil is raised, when the bride alights from her closed sedan chair and is conducted to her chamber in the bride-groom's house. From childhood she is confronted with the possibility of life-long unhappiness as a wife, should she fail to have a son. The life is essentially patriarchal. Daughters are expected to leave their parents' house, to return only for rare and brief visits. They cease, after marriage, to belong to their parents' family, not even returning to take part in the funeral ceremonies.

Sons bring their wives home, but are assigned to separate apartments within the common court. Over the households of daughters-in-law the mother-in-law rules with a rod of iron, the daughters-in-law are practically her servants; they are not permitted to sit or talk in her presence and must perform whatever tasks she assigns them. Love between husband and wife as it exists among Christian people is unknown in China, and it is a subject that it is not considered decorous to discuss.

A Chinese lady once asked an American "why she married her husband." She replied simply: "Because I loved him," and the explanation was followed by dead silence and profound embarrassment among the Chinese matrons present.

There are no grounds upon which a woman may divorce her husband, but there are many—too much talking, gadding, ill-temper, indolence and countless others—for which he may send her back to her parents.

Suicide is common among women of all classes, and aside from grief after bereavement, unhappiness in marriage is the most common cause of such tragedies. Hundreds of wives, it is estimated, end their lives every year in Pekin alone.

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 5.

BY A. C. ARMSTRONG.

Aug. 5. "Traveler" prints a good letter from A. Roscoe on "Man's Nature," contradicting Prof. Morris' assertion that it is religious. "Bulletin" (Phil.) J. M. Gilbert, "Spirits and Witches." Chas. A. Osborn "Individual Dominion."

Aug 6. "Traveler," Aurin F. Hill gives an interesting account of some "Ye old time Witches" and W. C. Knowlton has a round with George William Gilbert in defense of Bro. Grob. The "Bulletin" prints Edward Stern on "A Disgusted People"—that is, with political spellbinders; and A. C. Armstrong on "Spirits or Demons, Which?"

Aug. 7. "Traveler"—Edward Stern "Socialism;" "Paine Hall" Wm. Duffney writes on "Infidel Associates" in answer to Christian objections to the mention of Lincoln and Washington in the same sentence with Paine and Ingersoll. "Bulletin"—Bernard W. Gidney, "Aims of Socialism."

Aug. 8. "Traveler" prints a fine letter from J. T. Small on "Scientific Anarchism." "Weekly Enquirer" (Cincinnati), J. F. Ferris contributes a good article to the Symposium on "Marriage and Divorce."

Aug. 9. "Traveler," A. C. Armstrong, "Are There Any Miracles?" "Bulletin," "Spirits or Demons Which?" by the writer "State Journal" (Columbus, Ohio) prints a splendid half column letter from J. M. Byler on the question of opening the State Fair on Sunday. The "Republican Watchman" (Monticello, N. Y.) George B. Wheeler, "Injustice to Col. Ingersoll." "The Sullivan Co. Republican" of the same place prints the same letter and devotes half a column to comment upon it.

Aug. 10. "Dorchester, (Mass.) Beacon" prints a good letter from Chas. A. Osborn "Against Vaccination." "Traveler," (Boston) William E. Bonney on "Spiritualism;" The Easton (Md.) "Star-Democrat" prints Francis B. Livesey on "Public Schools Bringing Ruin." "Pioneer Press," Martinsburg, W. Va., Francis B. Livesey replies to Editor Macdonald of the "Truth Seeker;" D. Webster Grob defends Livesey's sincerity; W. C. Knowlton reminds "Old Side Methodist" that Daniel Webster was never known for his piety in Massachusetts; James B. Elliott writes of the good work done by Stephen Girard, and J. A. Powers of the "Smart Set." "Banner of Light" (Boston) reprints the writer from (Phila.) "Bulletin" on "Spiritualism or Demonism." "World-Herald" (Omaha Neb.) William E. Bonney on the Bombardment of Cloud Land, and for Walter Breen "The Chinese Mothers' Song," from "Life," New York. "Bulletin" (Phil.) Chas. A. Osborn "Vaccination;" Bernard W. Gidney, "Freedom of Socialism."

NEW MEMBERS.

b. Brigham, Dr. O. P., Springvale, Me.
d. Walker, Henry, 1144 N. 6th. St., Springfield, Ill.
b. Williams, J. C. Box 362, Joplin, Mo.

CORRECTIONS.

d. Frazier, W. F. 9 Church St., Place, Somerville, Mass.
c. O'Brine, Edward P. 9 Appleton St., Boston, Mass.
d. Underhill, E. H. 99 Moreland St., Somerville, Mass. Dorchester, Mass.

Love is a comedy in seven acts. You see her, you love her, you swear it, you prove it, you quarrel with her, you hate her and you leave her. Sometimes you marry her, then it is a tragedy.—Max O'Rell.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Arthur Wastall, Poste Restante, Lourdes, France.—I admire more and more your liberal views, and manner of conducting Lucifer. Hearty hand grasp to you both.

Albert Strout, Davenport, Wash.:—Please send me Lucifer No. 877as I did not receive it. Lucifer is too important a paper for me to miss an issue that I am entitled to.

L. A Ueland, Edgeley, N. Dakota:—We are in need of a good lady teacher with some experience. Wages $45 for first grade; $35 for second. Term seven and a half months A free thinker preferred. Her application must get here soon.

Virajananda, Editor "Pra-Buddha Bharata," Mayavata, via Almora, Kumaon, Himalayas, India:—With thanks I beg to acknowledge receipt of the issues of your valuable paper. But I am sorry to inform you that the issues of May 11 and 18 last have not reached us. May I ask you to order their early dispatch.

Mrs. M. C., Tenn.—Will you please send me a copy of Lucifer? I was a Lucifer subscriber a short time in 1897 and was pleased with it; but my parents and friends advised me to give it up. I bound the copies I had, however, and have read and reread them with interest. Since that time have had no access to literature on this line. I am deeply interested in this reform. If it is better than our marriage institution we want to know it. It is not agitated here and would be considered an outrage on society were a person to give voice to such sentiments.

M. Florence Johnson, New York City:—Congratulations on your twenty-first anniversary. Now that you have passed from the age of minority to that of manhood, the right to choose and vote, and have signed yourself Lucifer, we shall all be relieved the responsibility of deciding what name is best for you, and if it is ever changed you can quietly do it yourself. As a near relative and a close sympathetic friend this has been a great burden on me when asked to help solve it, and after it was decided, to have it discussed again was very, very tiresome. So, Lucifer, go on with your work. If what you shall accomplish as a man is as great comparatively as what you have done as an infant, child and youth there need be no regrets on the part of yourself or friends that you were born, and to thousands of persons one of the best names in the world will be Lucifer.

Ed. W. Chamberlain, 111 West 42 St., N. Y.:—Just arriving home from an extended tour in the west I find your (L. H.'s) letter awaiting me with request that I write something for Anniversary Number of Lucifer. At this moment I do not think of anything to say appropriately and fitly, and I am under such a pressure of business accumulated during my absence that should I attempt to say anything it would not be with that deliberate care and forethought which is due from a writer to the readers of your noble paper. If I might venture a suggestion upon the subject it would be that in such a number as you plan to issue, nothing would be more fit and nothing more profitable than your father's reminiscences of the struggle he made for free press. I believe that today the value of freedom is better appreciated and the wickedness of suppression more generally understood than in the days when your father was attacked and it is largely to his heroic resistance that this gain in liberal thought has been made. Let us hear from him.

J. L. Hicks, Abilene, Texas:—Enclosed find one dollar to apply on my subscription to Lucifer. I have been reading your paper about seven years, and it has given me broader views, and greater charity, and a softer heart toward everybody and everything that is capable of experiencing happiness or suffering pain. I used to think that the Methodist way was the only right way; that all other ways were wrong, and all other people in imminent peril. My vision was very much restricted, and I was very zealous, and had but little patience with those who held other views. I was honest, however, and you doubtless know just where I stood, and how I felt, and what I needed. Mr. Harman, while your logic is always invincible, and your position impregnable, yet it is your charity—your great, broad-gauged, warm-hearted charity—that has drawn me into line with your way of thinking. In all of your writing there is no vitriol, no bayonet stab, no wormwood and gall for anybody; but a real, earnest, sincere desire that everybody may be better and happier. That is the spirit—and the only spirit—that ever accomplishes real good in the long run.

W. W. Miller, New Haven, Conn.:—Sometimes I see things in Lucifer that just exactly voice my sentiments, and I feel as though I wanted to say to you at once, "Them's my sentiments exactly." One of those instances is upon me now, while I read the letter of Mary M. Clark. I am cutting the letter out, and sending it back to you, pasted onto this letter and marked so as to show you at just what points I endorse Miss or Mrs. (it doesn't matter a bit which) Clark's letter. Lots of times I feel like writing you a word of encouragement, or rather a word of appreciation as I don't really believe you need any encouragement. I think you have courage enough and business and horse sense likewise; else you never could have kept the little paper going all these years with so many difficulties to surmount.

The paper is all right in size; in form; in name; in matter; I don't yearn for any change whatever. But if you want to make any change yourself, or the majority of those friends who have your welfare at heart desire any change, I will accept whatever change is made and be satisfied. I think it would be wholly superfluous for me to offer any advice and in its stead I offer only my best wishes for your welfare and my profoundest admiration for the great energy and pluck that you have so long displayed.

A. M. M., Datil, N. M.:—I happened to discover a small piece of paper marked five, and I enclose same to you for subscription and literature. Had I listened to the voice of prudence I would not do this; but I am simply getting desperate on the subject of woman's liberation. By the way, why do you not issue Olive Schreiner's masterly essay on "The Woman Problem" first appearing in "Cosmopolitan" of Dec. '99, as a leaflet? It is very fine, and every woman ought to have it in her home. The more I think upon your work for woman's freedom the more I feel called to aid you as all women ought and would after one hour's earnest thought. Women must free themselves and aid those like yourself who are unselfishly doing a vast work to accomplish our emancipation on all lines.

What a glorious article in Aug., 3 issue by Dr. Suddick! It was that communication that decided me not to hesitate longer but to act as Helen Wilmans always advises—on the fact that opulence is universal no matter whether you have a dollar income or not; so here goes my mite to you I am anxious to get your autobiography. When will it appear?

Your labors are bearing fruit, good man, for hark the tone of the Social bell as Prof. Herron struck the hour of liberty by his late words and conduct. From the very first I was intensely drawn to his position by bonds of sympathy for the high plane he is calling all humanity to reach; and dumb, blind and ignorant as the race has been and is, there is light ahead and this century will witness the emancipation of human beings, both men and women, politically, economically and sexually. The new thought and sex reform papers everywhere are signs of the good times just a little ahead. There may be a cataclysm before peace, but peace awaits the race when woman comes to her own. I wish you the success that "immortality in the flesh" could bring you.

When writing for a missing copy of Lucifer, please give the date or number. "Last week's paper" is too indefinite, and involves too much guessing.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnyville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide in the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 320 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 320 pages, cloth bound; illustrated. 25c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telepathy (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wilson). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Bertha Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (excluding special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, (32 in colors), 700 recipes. Price. Cloth bound, $3, mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 100 Fulton St. Chicago.

The New Hedonism.

By Grant Allen. "The Old Asceticism said: 'Be Virtuous and You Will Be Happy.' The New Hedonism says: 'Be Happy and You Will Be Virtuous.' This is the key note of Grant Allen's Masterpiece. 80 large pages, five cents

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
The Darwins. A domestic radical romance. Elmina D. Slenker, 25c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull, 5c.
Seven Financial Conspiracies, which have enslaved the American people. Mrs. S. E. V. Emery. 5c.
Ten Men of Money Island. S. F. Norton. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin, 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 10.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington, 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice, 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick, 25c.
Occult Stories. Chas. W. Close. Boards, 10c.
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 190 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 20.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c
Swept Away. A sermon on the sins of our lawmakers who hide behind a refuge of lies. Moses Hull, 5c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Secularist. 5c.
Twelve Essays. Frederick W. Burry. 10c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Boozer. 10c.
Truth Seeker Annual 1899. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B. Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers. Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. H. Kelso. 40c
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 37 pages, 10c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship. J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 198 pages. 20c.
The Giant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner, 10c
The Life of the Harp in the Hand of the Harper. Illustrated. Francis Schlatter. 20
The Gods of Mirrors. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.
Vaccination a Curse. C. W. Amerige, M. D. 5c.
Practical Co-operation. R. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 310 pages. 20c.
The Proletarian Revolt. A history of the Paris Commune. 125 pages. 15c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 5c.
The Teachings of Jesus not Adapted to Modern Civilization. With the true character of Mary Magdalene. Geo. W. Brown, M. D. 5c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
The Legal Revolution of 1852. By a law-abiding Revolutionist, 334 pages. 25c.
The Signboard and Other Stories. Theophile Gautier et. al. 250 pages. 10c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 15c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
v-5no-34
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 34. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 7, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 881

FAIR PLAY.

I do not talk religion to you, ye men of the world.
I say nothing of love or pity or Christianity.
I speak your own language and conjure you in the name of fair play.

You who spurn the man that takes an unfair advantage of his competitors in sport or at the card-table, you are at the same time playing the game of life with loaded dice.

You are forever insisting on any handicap of wealth and rank, however excessive, that you may be able to command, and yet you hold up your heads as if you were honorable.

You force men to pit their broken-down nags against your thoroughbreds,—their leaky scows against your steam-yachts,—and are proud of the show you make!

By your own code you should be expelled from every respectable club, cut by every self-respecting man, and sent for good and all to Coventry.

You have yet to learn that life is a game no whit inferior in its demands on your honor to whist or tennis or the turf, and that you must extend your code to it or be justly ruled off the course.

—Ernest Crosby in "Socialist Review."

The Rights of Children.

BY R. B. KERR.

The rights of children are two. 1. The right to be born as well as possible. 2. The right to be brought up as well as possible.

These rights are simply inferences from the theory of morals now accepted by all persons competent to form an opinion. It is admitted that the end of life is happiness. When one individual takes upon himself to act upon the life of another, it must be his care to do so in such a way as to give that other person pleasure, and to save him from pain. It follows that a person who takes upon himself to commit the greatest of all interferences with the being of another, viz., to cause him to exist, is only justified in doing so if he is virtually certain that the result will be pleasure and absence of pain to the person so caused to exist. Whether there can ever be such certainty as to justify such an invasion is, of course, a question. Believers in the philosophy of Schopenhauer and Von Hartmann would without hesitation answer no. Most people, however, believe that in favorable circumstances of heredity and environment life has a reasonable chance of containing a preponderance of pleasure over pain. If such be the case, it is probably justifiable to cause a human being to exist, provided every conceivable precaution is taken to insure a balance of pleasure in his life.

The right to be born as well as possible involves the following propositions.

A. No woman has the right to cause human beings to exist, unless she is perfectly sound in mind, body and pedigree.

B. No woman has a right to cause human beings to exist, except with the aid of the best man perfectly sound in mind, body and pedigree, who can be found willing to undertake the office.

C. No persons have the right to bring others into the world, unless they can be sure that the children will have such advantages of environment that they will be reasonably certain of a balance of pleasure over pain.

The first of these propositions is now so generally admitted that it is needless to enlarge upon it to persons accustomed to advanced thought.

The second proposition, on the other hand, will be offensive to many, for, although it is a truism, yet many would rather repudiate reason as a guide in human affairs, than accept a doctrine so destructive to a cherished privilege. For there is scarcely any man, however deformed, syphilitic, pock-marked, drunken and imbecile, who doubts that he has a divine right to the exclusive ownership of one woman's person and to use her as a means of flooding the world with other deformed, syphillitic, pock-marked, drunken and imbecile persons. That he should have to forego this right for the welfare of the race is to such a person a very intolerable and incendiary doctrine.

Moreover, the doctrine that a woman should have her children only by the best man available involves the absolute sexual freedom of the woman, that is to say, the destruction of the last remaining form of chattel slavery. It means that the world shall no longer be filled with prisoners, chained together in pairs, but only by unlabelled and unfettered human beings.

Yet such absolute sexual freedom, hateful as it is to the servile mind, is not only the one means of doing justice to children, but the chief means of elevating the human race. All authorities are agreed that heredity is infinitely the most important factor in determining the career of the individual. It is also agreed that all progress worth mentioning in the past has been brought about by natural selection, resulting from age to age in the survival of the fittest. Moreover, it is now almost an accepted scientific truth that, without the constant survival of the fittest and elimination of the unfittest, the race would not only cease to advance, but would actually begin to decline, and move steadily backwards in a constant progress of degeneration. But the elimination of the unfit by natural selection is a cruel process, and the sympathetic spirit of our time is busy devis-

~~Lo~~
~~1937~~
~~2nd ser.~~
~~v.5~~
~~1901/02~~
~~no.34~~

ing means of helping the unfit to survive as long as possible, and to bring into life other unfit persons to take their places when they are gone.

To most observers it appears that the human race is in a dilemma. Either natural selection must go on unimpeded, cutting down the weak, and passing by the strong, or else we must look forward to the degeneration of the race as the price to be paid for humanity and civilization.

There is one loophole, however, which social philosophers fail to see. Instead of survival of the fittest, with all its horrors, we can have birth of the fittest. It is clear that the result will be the same. If, in each generation, only the fittest leave offspring while the unfit do not multiply, the standard of each generation will be higher than that of the one before. Indeed by the birth of the fittest, the improvement of the race can be hastened indefinitely, and made infinitely more rapid than any changes which can be wrought by Nature's deliberate methods.

It is clear, however, that the birth of the fittest can only be brought about by leaving both sexes absolute freedom to choose their mates for propagative purposes. Moreover, instead of being kept in the most debasing ignorance of all that pertains to the noblest of human functions, every boy and girl must, from childhood on, be taught all that science can teach about the fitting choice of sexual partners. While affection, similarity of tastes, and compatibility of temper, may determine sex partnerships in domestic and social life, and even in sexual acts which do not involve the next generation, soundness of person and of pedigree must be the only title to the privileges of fatherhood and motherhood.

The third proposition enunciated above is also one which must offend many. To say that people have no right to children unless they are sure that their means will enable them to feed and train these children well and give them a good start in life, sounds like an insult added to the injuries of the poor. But it is an insult which an honest thinker cannot refuse to administer and to stand by. No person, however unjustly miserable and undeservedly poor, has a right to hand that misery and poverty on to another being who is innocent of causing it.

After saying so much about the right to be born well, it is needless to add much about the right to be brought up well. While the former right is generally denied, the latter is generally admitted in principle, although not so generally conceded in practice. Let it suffice to say that, where a conflict arises between the interests of the parents and of the children, the first consideration ought usually to be given to those who are there only by virtue of the will of the parents, and not to the parents who willfully brought them there. Children have greater rights against their parents than against other persons, because the parents are responsible for their existence, and others are not responsible. On the other hand parents have fewer rights as against their children than members of the public have; for those who rashly inflict a miserable life on another are under an unceasing obligation to repair the wrong, and may be invaded without limit to make good the injury which has been so wantonly inflicted.—From "The Rights of Children," in "Our New Humanity."

A Hint to Correspondents.

The old Romans had a maxim that is no less wise and timely today than it was two thousand years ago: Suaviter in modo, fortiter in re — mild in manner, strong in matter. To call those who differ from us "fools and idiots," as did a correspondent in last issue, weakens instead of strengthens one's argument.

The Runaway.

In hastily looking over a lot of old clippings before consigning them to the waste basket, I found the following sketch, which I believe will interest many of Lucifer's readers. The name of the paper is not given; neither is that of the author. To those who wish to read philosophical essays only the sketch may have no value; but to others a picture often contains the suggestion of a deeper lesson than many a weighty essay. And that this description of Ellen's disillusionment is a true picture of the experience of many another young girl who dreamed that in marriage she would find a new world of romance and beauty, only to awaken to the realization that she is "a cook"—and but a cook—thousands of hopeless, toil-worn women could testify.

As to whether Ellen improved her condition by her flight would probably be "another story." L. H.

She looked across a shimmering waste of barren sand and withered buffalo grass, from which the heat-waves radiated until the distance was hazy with them. A few distorted cactus plants reared their weird forms in the heat, and here and there a dried and parched mesquite bush helped break the monotony of the scenery.

About the door of the shanty there had been a few feeble morning glory vines—she planted them, but the heat had killed them, too. Always sand—nothing but sand and heat. Afar off, to the southwest, the tops of the mountains in old Mexico could be seen faintly, miles and miles away. She liked to speculate on how pleasant it was to be beneath the trees on their slopes—where the cool waters flowed, the wild flowers blossomed and the birds sang.

The sizzling of water on the stove called her to her senses—the pot was boiling over. She turned from the contemplation of the heated desert without, to her duties within the inferno of a shanty, reeking with the fumes of boiling cabbage and meat. A red-hot stove, and the temperature outside at 103!

She was tired and utterly weary of the whole business. Four long years she had lived here—she married John Hawkins back in the States and came out to the El Dorado ranch, where he was going to make his fortune raising cattle. He was only foreman, and she was cook for the cowboys. The worst of it was, she was regarded by him as scarcely more than a cook. He would come home late at night, gulp down an enormous supper, tumble into bed and snore like a grampus until daylight, when he would bolt his breakfast and start out on the range again. Not a word of sympathy, of fellowship; not a bit of tenderness, no sentiment, only work, work—left to herself, her lonely thoughts, and the gloomy contemplation of the dreary waste without.

Sometimes he was away at night,—and she had heard him joking with some of the cowboys about "Rita,"—and then he would watch her covertly out of the corners of his eyes to see if she heard, or understood. But she did not betray herself and they began talking of fandangoes, where the music and pulque and women drove men mad. That was where Rita stayed. Rita was, perhaps, pretty and dainty. Well, maybe Rita did not have to cook—cook, all the time for a lot of men, and wash dishes and sweep up and prepare for another meal when one was finished. That would take the good looks away from anybody—and it was a notorious fact that she, Ellen, was known to be the prettiest girl in Greene county, away back at her home in the States. But that was before she had to cook all the time.

And when John had talked of coming west, she had dreamed of cool adobe houses and plashing fountains in the patio—of orange and lemon trees in blossom—of great scarlet geranium trees and vines and flowers—an indolent, easy "manana" sort of existence. But this, instead! She looked about the rough plank house in utter disgust and weariness.

What was the use of it all? What did it amount to? What was there to look forward to, except a continuation of the drudgery? And day by day her youth, her good looks, were slipping away from her, ground into nothingness by toil of an unremitting sort. What was there left for her, now that she had found the base clay of her John—now that love was dead? She remembered a little verse she had read somewhere, in her more impressionable days, and there was a refrain running through it at the end of each stanza,

"And the light of the whole life dies,
When love is done."

It kept ringing in her ears, just that much of it. She could not recall the rest of the lines.

* * *

"Senora."

She turned about from the pile of dirty, greasy dishes, and wiped the perspiration from her red face and frowsy brow.

"Oh, it's you, Rafael? Sit down."

"Yas, Senora, it me. Senor 'Awkins, 'e tell me to tell yo' he goner Fronteras on er beesiness—he not come back for day or so."

"All right, Rafael. Make yourself comfortable as you can; Lord knows it's mighty hot in here." She liked the Mexican. He was always the quintessence of politeness to her—anticipating her every wish, and treating her with the deference of a princess. For three years he had kept her supplied with rare cactus flowers and curious bits of pottery, and flint and jade arrow-heads he had found, and odd Indian trinkets.

He was the the only one of all the men who seemed to remember that she was a woman, and was hungry for sympathy and attention—that she was more than a cook. Something impelled her to turn her head and look at him. He was fanning himself with his sombrero and looking at her with a glance that was unmistakable. He sprang to his feet and took one of her hands, wet with the greasy dish-water.

"Senora Helen—I lofe yo—dam my soul, but I lofe yo', ah, so much. Yo' so good, en so kind, en sweet, en so hard worked, en yo Senor 'Awkins he doan' lofe yo' no mo'—he lofe dat fandango senorita down at Fronteras."

"Rafael—, stop; you mustn't talk that way." Her head spun a little; it was the heat.

"Senora, I lofe yo, I lofe yo t'ree year. I not make yo cook, en cook—dam de cookin', come en go—vamos wi' me, I'll mek de peons do de cookin'. I got big 'dobe-house way down in Durango, cool, nice 'dobe-house wiz what yo call him—squirt water up in the patio on de ferns. En de orange, en de feeg, en de rose trees all 'bout de house—it so cool, en shady. I got land, heap land, en cattle. I only stay 'round hyar cause I lofe yo. Yo come, en I get de padre to marry us—de padre 'way down in Durango—he know no deeference if Senor 'Awkins be 'live. Ef yo say so, I go keel Senor 'Awkins?" He had his arm about her now, and with the other hand he smoothed the damp hair back from her forehead tenderly.

"No—no, Rafael, that would never do. But are you sure that you would love me always, and not make me cook—and not be mean to me, and not make me stay at home all the time and work—and you would not love any fandango girls?"

"No—no—I hope de good Gawd sen' me to hell w'en I do not lofe yo. I lofe yo always—always, an' I treat yo as bes' I kin. Come on—I catch a pony for yo en we get 'way, 'way down in Durango to my home, en 'Awkins he never find us. We get dere in week. Come Helen—come les' go now, now; down dere de mountains are so cool—en I lofe you so!"

She listened to him. As he spoke, she thought of the purple mountains in the distance—of the shimmering blue Pacific waters—of a lifetime's dreams unattained. She was not old—and when she had a rest and some new clothes she would be better-looking. In Rafael she had found what her husband had always lacked—appreciation, delicacy of feeling and chivalrous love. She might not be able to hold Rafael's love always, but at any rate there would be a few years of happiness—then let chaos come. Insensibly she knew that her heart had already turned during the toil-marked months to this "Greaser"—this Mexican gentleman. At last she bowed her head. She thought of all she had lacked, and from the withered wastes of a heart from which love had faded, there blossomed anew the flower of hope.

"I will go with you, Rafael," she said, simply.

As the sun went down that evening its ruddy rays gilded a man and a woman on horseback loping steadily, swiftly, toward the mountains in the purple distance. There was a light on each one's face brighter than that of the sun—the light of a great love.

And far across the waste of sand and grass and cactus, the same rays of the sun fell through an open door swinging idly on its hinges, and fell upon a great pile of greasy, unwashed dishes.

* * *

"Well, I reckon she's vamosed for the States. It was pretty tough on a gal ter keep her out here in this derned shack, cookin' all the time. Oh, well, she can have her fling, and some of these days I'll go back after her, and dress her up fine, and be nice to her to make up for it all. Then she'll forget all about her troubles.

"Come on, you fellers, we've got ter go ter Fronteras ter git some supper—besides, my little Greaser-gal is anxious ter see me. I'll set up the drinks first—I'm dry as this damned sand. Where's the old woman? Oh, damfino. Gone back to the States, I reckon. Come on."

Queen Victoria's Eldest Daughter.

BY W. H. BURR.

The mother of Emperor William of Germany is dead and all nations mourn. Was she the daughter of Queen Victoria? She had no facial features of the Queen. But another woman died just one month earlier in a New York hospital whose features bore a striking resemblance to those of Queen Victoria. Her name was Sophia Adelaide. She was born November 21, 1841, and died July 4, 1901. Victoria Adelaide, Empress Dowager of Germany, was born November 8, 1841, and died August 5, 1901.

Prince Albert, consort of England's Queen, had another wife in France, known as the Countess de Reuss, to whom was born a female child thirteen days after Queen Victoria's first child was born. The Prince's French wife exacted terms from him; she consented to a divorce, followed by a marriage to Count de Lundi, but compelled the Prince to substitute her babe for that of the Queen. Three months later the mother died, and three years later de Lundi was assassinated. Little Sophia Adelaide had no affection for her reputed father de Lundi, but ardently loved Prince Albert. He told her he would henceforth be her father, but she must call him uncle. He provided bountifully for her; the funds came at first directly from him, then through an English clergyman who had no means of his own, and lastly from John Brown, the Queen's faithful attendant. But after the death of John Brown the remittances ceased. In 1887 Sophia Adelaide published a book setting forth her claim. It was suppressed in England and Germany.

She was an accomplished woman and could converse in five languages. Bereft of her support, she came to America, traveling under the care of Lady Anna Campbell and George, the second Count of Lundi. He was seized by cholera at Dayton, Ohio, and on his death bed she was married to him, believing that thereby she would have more chance of recognition as the Countess de Lundi. But she died in utter poverty and her body would have been taken from the morgue and buried in the Potter's Field but for the kindness of her friend, Dr. J. H. Gunzer. The immediate cause of her death was want of food and heat. She was buried in Calvary Cemetery.

"Those Chinese still insist on calling us foreign devils," said one European soldier. "I am sorry for that," answered the other. "I'm afraid we'll have to burn another town and destroy some more libraries before we get them to realize how civilized we are."—Washington Star.

Few men think, but all have opinions.—Berkley.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 300 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

881.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

The Crimina

Speaking of new books Max O'Rell says:

Havelock Ellis' book, "The Criminal," has had a large sale. It was first published ten years ago. A fresh edition is now to be issued, which practically will be a new work. On account of the activity with which the study of the criminal has been pursued during recent years Ellis found it necessary to enlarge and in some cases rewrite nearly every chapter. The volume will contain fifty new illustrations.

Yes, it is doubtless very true that "during recent years the study of the criminal has been pursued" with a diligence scarce ever known before, and it is sincerely to be hoped that among the results of this unwonted "activity" in this department of human research, will be a more humane and rational treatment of the unfortunates who fall under the general designation, "the criminal class," or classes.

One of the ways in which this unusual activity has been shown is in the use of the "Bertillon" system of measurement, by which means a record is kept, not only of the cranial development but also of every noticeable physical characteristic, such as height, chest measurement, length of arm, size and shape of hand and foot, color of hair and eyes, etc., etc., of the man or woman whom arbitrary and very fallible human legislators and equally arbitrary and fallible administrators of their enactments designate as criminals.

I have more than once seen the Bertillon measurements applied to men whom I had good reason to believe were no worse than the officials who subjected them to this indignity, and have often wondered since, and am disposed now again to ask—on seeing the notice of the new edition of a famous work on the "criminal"—I am led by this to ask whether any scientific investigator into the physical characteristics of criminals has bethought him to apply the Bertillon measurements to the HIGH CLASS criminals, such for instance as "my lord Kitchener"—the wholesale murderer of many thousands of better men than himself, judged by average human standards of goodness and badness; or to Joseph Chamberlain, the man chiefly responsible for bringing on and keeping up the South African war, or to the lump of human obesity that requires its subjects to speak of it as "His Majesty Edward the VII; King of England, Scotland and Ireland, and Emperor of India," upon whose shoulder s if it be really England's ruler, must rest at least part of the guilt of keeping up one of the most inexcusable of all war s of invasion known to human history, by a great and power ful nation upon a very small and weak one.

But why go to foreign lands for high class criminals to illustrate the merits of the Bertillon system as an aid in bringing criminology up to the standard of a reliable science? Why not apply these measurements to the men who are carrying on a war of conquest, of murder and plunder in the Philippines on the opposite side of the globe? Why not apply them to the men who enact laws by which the poor are robbed of their birthright to a share of the earth and its opportunities? Also to the men who take advantage of these laws to make enormous fortunes for themselves out of the unpaid labor, or the less than half paid labor of those who do all the hard work that produces the wealth thus monopolized by the cunning and avaricious few?

To be a little more specific: Why be so very careful to take the Bertillon measurements of men and women, boys and girls, for petty offenses, such as stealing a ham of bacon or a sack of flour, when hard pressed by hunger, or when caught in the act of taking a few bushels of coal from a rich corporation to keep the little ones at home from freezing, and at the same time take no cognizance of the shape of the heads and bodies of the men who, by combination, and by cornering the supply of the necessaries of life, drive the poor to crime, or to death from lack of proper food, clothing or shelter?

* * *

When will our men of science, such as Havelock Ellis, Dr. Lombroso, and other specialists, learn to be impartially, that is really, scientific in their investigations concerning crime and criminals?

THE REMEDY.

In his "Table Talk" Wendell Holmes said: "I hate the sight of such people. Now, for mercy sake, don't think for a single moment that I hate THEM!"

So say I, when speaking as I do of Kitchener, Chamberlain and Edward Guelph, and also of the American rulers and of American robber barons, the manipulators of the "trusts," do not think, please, for a single moment that I hate the MEN, the persons, alluded to or named. I simply hate the "sight" of them—the mental images called up when their names are mentioned, for the men themselves I have only pity.

It is not a human being, a man of kindred flesh, that I see when Kitchener is named, but a red-handed, red-coated warrior drunk with the blood of men against whom he could have no possible grudge. Chamberlain is a tool, a cog in a soulless machine; Edward is a stupid, bloated vampire or parasite, consuming yearly the blood and sweat and tears of millions of workers in the human hive—fit image of a system made by his barbaric ancestors, and clung to with a death grip by its ignorant and superstitious victims.

The same remarks apply in a slightly modified sense to our own rulers and to the robber barons who rule our rulers—victims all of the barbaric institutions of our ignorant and brutish ancestry.

What is the remedy for evils such as these? I unhesitatingly answer:

First. A change of ideals.

Second. Abolition of the old barbaric systems or institutions. How that is to be done will be the subject of later articles in Lucifer's columns. M. H.

Press Writers and Their Work.

There seems a wide divergence of opinion among Lucifer's readers in regard to the propriety of devoting a part of our limited space to "Press Writers' Notes." As some view the matter the Press Writers' Association is a mutual admiration society whose main purpose is to get their own names and deeds blazoned before the public eye.

As I see it, this opinion is without foundation in truth. The Press Writers' Association was formed for the purpose of enlarging the work now being done by the comparatively small and weak radical papers, by enlisting or utilizing the columns of such of the popular daily and weekly papers as will admit "letters from the people," on subjects that are usually barred from such papers.

For many years this kind of work has been done by a comparative few—without knowing or seeming to care as to what was being done by others in the same or similar lines—the good effects of which sporadic and independent work has doubtless been very great. But now it is thought by many of these widely scattered workers that a little concert of action would be a good thing, and hence the call for names of those who are cultivating this field; also for lists of papers whose editors are liberal and progressive enough to admit free discussions by radical thinkers.

Concert of action requires a medium of communication. This has been secured in part by means of "ring letters" and printed circulars. This method is good as far as it goes, but something else is needed. Either a paper of their own or a small department in papers already established seems called for, in order that members of the association may know each other, and know how and where each is getting in his or her work.

Several weekly Freethought papers, besides Lucifer are now giving condensed reports of the doings of the Press Writers. Meager as these reports are they are interesting and encouraging to many, showing as they do the growing interest in subjects hitherto considered dangerous, or at least unfit for general discussion. M. H.

From the Piney Woods.

DEAR MOSES HARMAN:—Your letter has come belated to me on my summer travels and here in piney woods, seated on balsam fir boughs, looking off on sea and mountain I wait for an inspiration to say an appropriate word of good wishes for Lucifer's twenty-first birthday. I had a good thought, but decided to take a nap, after a long bicycle ride, before recording it, thinking it would improve in quality when I was refreshed. But alas it has flown and I must ask you to believe that it was something very wise and brilliant.

What is there to say when "there has been so much said and so well said" in Lucifer. I can only record praises and good wishes. Long may it wave! May its shadow never be less. May it live a thousand years. May its name never change. Here I am reminded of the negro enthusiast, who, when the collection plate was passed after a missionary sermon, grandly waved his hand over the plate, closed his eyes and shouted, "Fly abroad, thou mighty gospel!" "That's all right," said the deacon, as he lingered with the plate, "but give something to help it fly!" So I add to my grandiloquent "Long may it wave!" a little gift to help it wave and say Linger, Longer Luci—fer the need is great of the light you bear to shine upon the darkness of sex superstition.

On my travels I find progress among the women. Mother Grundy and the priest are losing their hold. Christian Science with its exaggeration of truth into a new superstition is emancipating the mind from the horror of orthodox religion, bringing also some revulsion against marriage, and the bicycle is teaching them to go it alone or even sometimes with a male comrade.

To Moses the Pioneer, and Lillian,—Her who stays up his hands,—I give my respectful and earnest salutations.

Mt. Desert, Me. Aug. 29. ROBT. C. ADAMS.

If You Would Live Long, Keep These Commandments.

BY HARRY CLINTON GOODRICH.

Sleep eight hours, but never with another person in the same room. Sleep on your right side.

Keep the room windows open all night, summer and winter.

Place several rugs on the floor about the bed.

Place the bedstead at least three feet from every wall. All walls are cold and cause a cold draft downwards. The center of a room is safe.

Before you sleep, lie on your back without a pillow and breathe deep fifteen or more times.

Through the day repeat deep breathing five minutes, five times or more.

Deep breathing saves Doctor's bills.

Avoid all intoxicants, and drink no tea or coffee, and little or no fluids when eating.

Drink an abundance of water two hours after eating and a glass of water one hour before.

Never use tobacco in any form whatever.

Pet animals carry disease germs.

Live in the country if possible, make it possible.

Take frequent short holidays.

Limit your ambition a little. Keep your temper. Never worry or borrow trouble.

Eat the flesh of no animal, such food is full of uric acid, the cause of rheumatism. Uric acid is also in coffee.

Live only on cereals, fruits and nuts, and a small share of vegetables.

Never wear woolen garments next to the skin.

Always wear linen mesh goods as linen absorbs and carries away moisture four times as fast as woolen.

In winter wear wool over the linen.

In summer change linen three times a week.

The next best fabric to wear next the skin is cotton, then silk, and lastly, wool.

Put hair insoles inside your shoes all the year round, and change them every day for a pair that has been dried out. Don't leave the insoles in the shoes over night. Change your light stockings every day for clean or dry ones.

In winter wear wool hose twenty-eight inches long in the leg, with linen or cotton next the skin. These may be short hose.

Bathe in the morning at the temperature of the body or a little less. Bathe at night in warm water. Wash your hair at least once a week. Comb it every night with a fine comb.

If you wear corsets, throw them away. You cannot breathe as nature intended under any lacing whatever.

As you can never get something for nothing, go out and battle for good health, making it catching instead of disease.

Don't allow any virus or vaccination put into your blood. Statistics the world over prove more deaths by it than where there is no vaccination.

The Woman at the Well.

BY MABEL M'COY HAWN.

In modern times when the question "to marry or not to marry" is being seriously asked by young and old alike, the thoughts sometimes turn to the story of the woman who had had five husbands, "and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband."

In the minds of people everywhere, I think that the woman at the well is regarded as being a dissolute or lewd character. Doubtless many have wondered how it was that Jesus carried on so long and profound a conversation with such a woman; for it is commonly recognized that the teaching of the master given at the well of Jacob is perhaps the profoundest recorded in the gospels. "God is spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" contains the essence of all the "mystery of godliness" and to this day is but dimly understood. Yet this truth was told to the Samaritan woman, she who had had five husbands—made five attempts in matrimony—and had given it up and taken to herself a lover. That she caught somewhat the meaning of the words of Jesus, that she was enthusiastic and persuasive in speech, is borne witness to from the fact that it is recorded that "many of the Samaritans believed on him because of the words of the woman, who testified, 'He told me all things that I did.'"

Personally I am a profound believer in marriage—not only marriage of spirit, but marriage of letter, which is a showing forth of the spirit. I believe that some form or fitting ceremony will forever enhance the announcement to the world that the twain are to become one flesh. Not that the ceremony makes them one; not that the physical relationship alone makes or can make them one; but having discovered their oneness of mind and spirit they celebrate that discovery by consummating it in the flesh. That they should gladly and proudly and with thanksgiving make this known by some form or symbol, seems to me but natural, and the beautiful beginning of a miniature society, a new world.

But this woman at the well had tried this experiment many times, and as many times failed to find her real mate. She had had large and deep experience. It is possible she had grown discouraged with taking husbands after the fashion of her day; perhaps her soul writhed under the sense of ownership—under the shame of being her husband's chattel or toy, and she rebelled, feeling that only in freedom—freedom from the laws that so regarded her—could she find that which should satisfy her woman's soul. At any rate I find in my heart somewhat of humiliation that I should have so long regarded her as a person of very questionable life, and I hereby offer my humble apology to the "woman at the well."

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 6.

Aug. 11. "The Times" (Richmond Va.) prints a long letter from Kent E. Peery on the word "Christian" in Bill of Rights and a good one from F. B. Livesey entitled "Is this a Christian Country?" "Clothed with the Sun" for August prints F. B. Livesey on Christianity, Love, Liberty, with a lengthy reply by the editor in Omaha "Bee," Walter Breen commends an editorial on the employment of men teachers.

Aug. 12. "Traveler," D. Webster Groh takes issue with "Common Sense" again in regard to Thomas Paine. "State Register," (Springfield, Ill.) prints a short letter from the writer entitled "Does God Send the Rain?"

Aug. 13. "Chicago Post," George B. Wheeler gets a good shot at Christianity's boasted moralizing and refining influence. In Cleveland (O.) "World" J. C. Bell wants to know "Who is to Blame" for the death of a child neglected by Christian Science parents.

Aug. 14. "Traveler" prints Livesey's reply to a Socialist critic,—"Livesey, Bryan, Anarchy;" also Livesey on "Marriage and Divorce;" W. J. Hutcheson takes a shot at Prof. Moore on "Darwinism and Man." "News Item," (Winchester Va.) prints F. B. Livesey on "Marriage, Church and School."

Aug. 15. "Traveler" prints Edward Stern's "Nature's Laws;" "Fair Play" thinks Groh, Armstrong and Co. have worsted "Common Sense" and Prof. Moore in the Paine discussion. Chicago "Post,"—J. C. Bell, "Who's to Blame"

Aug. 16. "Traveler" prints Edward Stern "The Basis of Anarchy." Chicago "Post" gives short letters from Groh, Livesey and the writer, commending an editorial on "New Developments on Bigotry." "Bulletin," Bernard W. Gidney "Single Tax and Socialism." "The Examiner" (San Francisco) prints Kate Austin's "Do Women Dress for Men?"

Aug. 17. "Traveler," D. W. Groh replies to E. H. J. on "Rationalism vs. Inspiration" and the writer replies to "Common Sense's Challenge." "Pioneer Press," Martinsburg W. Va. prints a splendid letter from J. M. Gilbert in reply to "Old Side Methodist," entitled "Who Inaugurated Reform?" Livesey says he has blazed the way and now leaves his friends to work out the details of the controversy with "Old Side" and others. J. A. Powers wants to know "Which Way is Best?" D. Webster Groh takes up Old Side's Slanders of Thomas Paine, and the writer his specific falsehood about the Paine Memorial Building in Boston being sold and used for other and better purposes.

Dorchester, Mass. A. C. ARMSTRONG.

The Legal Value of Marital Contracts.

The following letter, written by Frank D. Blue to C. L. James, may be of interest to those who think that ante-nuptial contracts have any effect on the legal status of their marriage. Such contracts are all very well in their way, as showing the present intent of each party to the contract; but they have no standing in the courts.

COMRADE C. L. JAMES: In a recent issue of "Free Society" you say you think an Anarchist lawyer, if a good lawyer, might make a contract that will stand legally, without marriage. I do not recall the exact words, but think that is the substance.

This morning I find in the "Central Law Journal" of St. Louis a very lengthy opinion upon the relations of husband and wife, which has a direct bearing upon the question of agreements between men and women, and which will bear careful reading as showing the present legal status of marriage in the United States.

The Supreme Court of New Hampshire has just decided that "A contract between husband and wife, in which they agree to live separately, is void." An attempt was made at a separation by a contract mutually satisfactory to both parties, and the court held as above.

Now a review of the different decisions and statutes upon adultery and fornication will show it is the intent and purpose to prevent just such agreements, and to hold all up to "the relation fixed by law," "from which the persons cannot separate themselves by their own agreement." (Conn.) 46 Atl. Rep. 242; 49LRA142.

After looking up the whole question, it is my opinion that it will be utterly impossible, with the present state of public opinion (lack of education, if you will), for any lawyer to make a contract that will be upheld from a legal standpoint.

Though the law, statutes and decisions just at present tend towards making ceremonial contracts the only binding ones legally, as against the old common law doctrines, yet should it become necessary by reason of a disregard of these statutes to again make a new common law rule, our rulers will not hesitate to do it and thus legitimatize all children, as did the English Parliament when the Quakers ran afoul of its statutes.

The law is very flexible—when it must be—and you can always count on legal expedients keeping up to the necessities of the case.

The law bends,—when it must, consequently it is seldom broken and always so quickly recovers from any strain put upon it.

The law is expedient,—when it has to be,—and quickly realigns itself with new forces so as to guide the new forces as it has the old.

While we may be "ferninst" the law all the time, it is just as well to recognize facts as we go along.

You can in all probability borrow a copy of the Cent. Law Jl. from almost any lawyer in your city. Vol. 53, No. 8, August 23, 1901, is the number.

I shall call the attention of Harman to this case, as it is a good one for Lucifer, giving as it does a very full review of all decisions upon the point involved.

Yours as ever,
FRANK D. BLUE.

The Chicago Anarchist Club holds regular Sunday evening meetings at the Athaneum Building, 26 Van Buren St., in the hall of the Chicago Law College, second floor. Herman Knehn will speak on "State Socialism," Sunday evening, September 8. Admission free.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New,

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Obert Wetland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tinker, the Boy Doctor, and Spunde, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Virgin Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest White). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

FRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Tyrannies (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

YOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Yokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The absolute of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

We still have a supply of our Anniversary double number. Mailed to any address for two cents each, twenty cents a dozen

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin, 5c.
Hereka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote, 5c.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington, 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion Gabriel Z. Wecht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whitlick, 20c.
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 100 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Secularist, 5c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c.
Truth Seeker Annual 1900. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B. Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and a number of other representative Freethinkers. Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 371 pages, 10c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship, J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 193 pages. 25c.
The Giant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner, 10c.
The Gods of Mirtle. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.
Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 2c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 340 pages. 20c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 2c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls, 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry, 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading it also on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reform; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a genuine book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, (8 in colors), 300 recipes. Price, Cloth bound, $3 mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 350 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 473 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 336 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 231 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 20 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
v.5, no.35
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 35. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 14, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 882

THE ANGEL OF DISCONTENT.

When the world was formed and the morning stars
  Upon their paths were sent,
The loftiest-browed of the angels was made
  The Angel of Discontent.

And he dwelt with man in the caves of the hills,
  Where the crested serpents sting,
And the tiger tears and the she-wolf howls,
  And he told of better things.

And he led man forth to the towered town,
  And forth to the fields of corn;
And told of the ampler work ahead
  For which his race was born.

And he whispers to men of those hills he sees
  In the blush of the misty west;
And they look to the heights of his lifted eye—
  And they hate the name of rest.

In the light of that eye does the slave behold
  A hope that is high and brave;
And the madness of war comes into his blood—
  For he knows himself a slave.

The serfs of wrong by the light of that eye
  March with victorious songs;
For the strength of the right comes into their hearts
  When they behold their wrongs.

'Tis by the light of that lifted eye
  That Error's mists are rent;
A guide to the table lands of Truth
  Is the Angel of Discontent.

And still he looks with his lifted eye,
  And his glance is far away,
On a light that shines on the glimmering hills
  Of a diviner day.

—Sam W. Foss.

Marriage, Legal and "Free."

BY JOHN BADCOCK, JR.

Is there any magic connected with the marriage rite? In Thibet "the priests alone know whether the nativity of the bride stands in a favorable relation to that of the bridegroom, and, if not, by what ceremonies and sacrifices misfortune may be averted; they alone know the day that is most suitable for the wedding; they give the bond its consecration and its blessing by burning incense and by prayer." In Ceylon "an astrologer must examine the horoscopes of the two parties, to discover whether they correspond." In the Zend-Avesta an elaborate blessing and exhortation, beginning with the words, "In the name of God," is appointed for the nuptial ceremony.

After all, priests and astrologers must live; but are we now more enlightened and self-reliant upon this subject than our ancestors of two thousand years ago? If, as the Christian Church teaches, God sanctifies marriage, God has sanctified some very peculiar ones. The superstition still sticks to the ceremony, even though it be a ceremony before a registrar in his office. The time of the indissoluble marriage contract, of Roman Catholic dominion, has gone by; but we have not done much by replacing the Bull of the Pope by Act of Parliament. Albeit we have done something. No one dare say that all marriages are consummations of the union of the most fit. Mistakes do occur; marriages do not all turn out happy; some end in tragedy.

Having given up the absolute indissolubility and sacredness of marriage, as being too cruel, some dissolutions and re-arrangements have to be allowed. But once allow the tie to be put aside in cases of gross cruelty, and you have the difficulty of defining what amount of cruelty is gross enough. Soon sympathy will be expressed for marital miseries where the injury of husband to wife (or the other way) is of kinds not allowed for in the Acts; and, ultimately, the law has to be strained, literally, to let some captives go free. Then it becomes repugnant to our finer feelings to sanction any law that compels a man and a woman to live together when the lives of one or both are made wretched in consequence. Contemplate a case. Put yourself in the place of a wife who either dreads her husband, or looks upon him with disgust; and you see that the possibility of such a relationship being made permanent by law condemns the law.

The Clitheroe case is a sign in the right direction. Here the mere refusal of a woman to live with the man she had married, but found a dislike to, was considered by the courts sufficient ground for granting a separation. You see that, if you allow the happiness of the parties concerned to be the consideration of first importance, you relegate the legal marriage contract to a place of secondary importance. The growth of sympathy with suffering humanity abolishes the cast-iron rigidity of the law, and the list of "adequate causes" for divorce is extended. But where are you to draw the line? Once allow exceptions to the absoluteness and sacredness of the marriage tie, and there is no stopping place until every individual idiosyncrasy is satisfied, and the marriage law is dead as a door nail. Or, what is the same thing, marriage becomes a ceremony which any couple may go through or not, as it pleases their sentimentalities; and those who elect to go through can have what ceremonials they like, from jumping over a broom-stick to the most gorgeous pageant and priestliness. . . . . .

It must not be overlooked, however, that when a sense

X
Per 2L937
2nd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.35

of right and wrong is implanted in the individual, on the basis of arbitrary priestly or legal authority, the conscience so formed will have great, if not insuperable, difficulty in reconciling the claims of nature to any kinds of happiness which have been condemned by theologic or political creeds. Any giving way to natural impulse in contravention of such creeds is likely to be followed by a sense of shame and attempts at penance, unless the creeds themselves are thrown overboard from an enlightened conviction of their worthlessness. . . . . .

I have heard the view expressed that all necessary legal requirements as to marriage can be met on a free contract basis; by which is presumably meant that the parties can put in their own terms (which can be as various as the terms of trade contracts or will clauses) in the marriage contract, and the State is to enforce the carrying out of such contracts in consideration of stamp duty being paid. My objection to the legal contract idea in marriage, whether free or compulsory, arises from a repulsion to the contemplation of any mercantile or mercenary motives being intruded into a relationship which offers such high possibilities of happiness when formed on a basis of pure affection—i. e., when formed by mutual attraction of intrinsic qualities in the individuals.

Of course, it would be folly to prevent a man and a woman from binding each other to anything, so long as the binding was mutual and there was no external pressure. And if the voluntary-bound can get any Association to undertake the infliction of penalties for breach of marriage contract, I see no reason for interfering with them. I dislike uniformity. I wish all wants to be satisfied, and that is only possible under the condition of equal freedom. What I claim is, that those who desire to manage their own love affairs without consulting the State shall be allowed to do so. As it would be manifestly unjust for freelovers of all kinds to be compelled to support, by taxation, courts for the enforcement of other people's marriage contracts (in the same way that it is unjust for Nonconformists in religion to be taxed to support a State Church), the only thing left for Parliament to do in this matter is to remove marriage agreements entirely from the jurisdiction of the Courts; allowing private enterprise to supply what demand might spring up for companies that will insure against breach of marriage promises, or breach of marriage continuance promises. Then, as far as legality went, all marriage promises would be on a par with betting debts; that is, they would be converted into debts of honor.—From "When Love is Liberty and Nature Law."

A Raffle for Souls.

The Rev. Francis S. Barton, a Protestant clergyman at Pueblo, Mexico, writing to the "Christian Endeavor World," claims to have seen the following described raffle in a Roman Catholic church in that city:

"Raffle for Souls.—At the last Raffle for Souls the following numbers obtained the prize, and the lucky holders may be assured their loved ones are forever released from the flames of purgatory.

"Ticket 841—The soul of the lawyer James Vasquez is released from purgatory and ushered into heavenly joys.

"Ticket 41—The soul of Mme. Calderon is made happy forever.

"Ticket 762—The soul of the aged widow Francisca de Parras is forever released from the flames of purgatory.

"Another raffle for souls will be held at this same blessed church of the Redeemer on January 1, at which four bleeding and tortured souls will be released from purgatory to heaven, according to the four highest tickets in this most holy lottery. Tickets $1. To be had of the father in charge. Will you, for the poor sum of $1, leave your loved ones to burn in purgatory for ages?"

The Difference.

Entering the room of her mistress without knocking, Penelope announced: "A lady's down stairs to see y', ma'am." Her black face wore a look of chronic weariness, to which her half-buttoned dress testified. But Penelope was aristocratic; she moved in high society, and prided herself on her knowledge of social etiquette.

"Oh my!" groaned Mrs. Hardy from the couch; "I suppose I'll have to see her. But my poor head! Didn't she send up a card?"

"No, 'm, she didn't jus' seem to have no card."

"Well, tell her I'll be down in a minute."

Penelope sighed and turned to drag her tired feet out of the room and down the stairs to the lower regions.

Slowly, painfully Mrs. Hardy rose and dressed, and then descended with her sweetest smile in readiness, to find that her "lady" visitor was a prospective waitress as black as Penelope herself.

"I thought you told me, Penelope, that a lady wished to see me?" said Mrs. Hardy sternly when the applicant had departed.

"Yes, 'm," replied Penelope, "I says a lady."

"Well, that's just the trouble; you don't know a lady when you see one. Now, hereafter find out what people want and who they are before you come upstairs. Do you understand?"

"Yes, 'm; is that all?" Penelope was too tired to enter into social arguments; she preferred to let the question go by default.

* * *

The next afternoon Penelope again toiled slowly up the steps to announce a visitor. "A woman's down stairs to see yo', ma'am."

"Well, what's her name?"

"Don' know; said never min' the name; jus' tell yo' she was here."

"But I told you always to inquire people's business."

"Yes 'm, but she wouldn't tell me that, either; said she'd tell yo' herself."

Mrs. Hardy hesitated. Should she see this mysterious visitor who refused to give her name? It was probably some one in search of work, or else a beggar. And her head still ached! "Oh, well, tell her I'll be down directly!" she said impatiently.

In view of the importance of the visitor she simply threw a shawl over her shoulders and descended in wrapper and slippers, not even waiting to smooth her hair. What was her consternation on entering the parlor to see a fashionably dressed lady arise and come toward her.

"Oh, my dear Mrs. Hardy, I am so sorry to have disturbed you! I am Mrs. Williams. And I see you've been lying down, too. Unfortunately I didn't have a card with me. I only called on the part of the managers of a charity to be given this Summer at the Lenox to ask you to be one of the patronesses. I do hope you will excuse me for troubling you so much!"

At last the awful visit came to a close, and Mrs. Hardy summoned Penelope.

"Did yo' sen' fo' me, ma'am?"

"Yes, I certainly did send for you," said the outraged mistress. "I want to have a thorough understanding with you once and for all. Yesterday you came up and told me a 'lady' wanted to see me, and when I went down stairs I found a colored woman, and today you announce a 'woman,' and I go down in my slippers and wrapper, and find one of the most fashionable ladies of the town in the parlor. Now, hereafter when my friends come to see me I want you to understand they are ladies, and that your country people are women. Do you understand?"

"Yes, 'm," she at last replied; "I makes no doubt yo're right. 'Woman,' I s'pose, is the more nobler term."—Selected.

"Your son in the Philippines, is he? What is he doing there?" "Doing? He's fighting for his country." "What! Has he turned Filipino?"—"Saturday Night," Stockton, Cal.

Was It Honest?

BY C. L. JAMES.

According to that statement made by the editor of Lucifer himself, in No. 878, he effectually shut me out from disproving his very grave charge against the medical profession—that they encourage vice by promising to make its consequences all right. I said that, when he gave a reason for this assertion, I would disprove it; and show, per contra, that all the quacks' "progressive hygiene" was nothing but a plagiarism from the regular physicians, plus as much utter rot as they thought their patients ignorant enough to stand; but of course I cannot, without citations from a good many doctors of real fame; which, equally of course, would require about half the space Lucifer gives every month to long articles, all declamation and repetition, in abuse of doctors—let alone the squibs. It is on account of things like this, I needs must say that the "editorial tripod" deals unfairly with this important question. Proverbially, anyone, however ignorant, can throw out more sneers, sarcasms, and what he thinks are embarassing questions, in five minutes than can possibly be disposed of (as they should be), without a little deliberate investigation—especially if he have an unlimited license of saying the same thing twenty times over, while a reply, of far less length, and free from wordiness, must run such a gauntlet as mine to Walker did—and be mutilated at last. I wish to be moderate and courteous. I can understand that no one likes seeing his own idols broken; and that prejudice is misleading to the judgment, where the intentions are not insincere. But persistency in this course, after having its wrongfulness pointed out, will degrade Lucifer into an annex to Coward's Castle—exactly the place for legal, theological, Comstockian Movement in Favor of Ignorance; but, I submit, not the right place for Lucifer!

Now, just to show that I don't fear, but only scorn, the Blefuscudian arrows weekly shot at me individually, from behind the "tripod" I will send back a few—well worthy the archers, though not of the cause for war.

The "Lost Manhood" advertisers who claim to be regular physicians, lie. Does the editor mean to say he did not know they were a pack of liars?

Mrs. Lake—takes the cake. She admits she would send for a vivisector if she were like to want a death certificate; but says the cruel law compels her to. She must find another reason—not at all difficult. Quacks sign lots of death certificates, and would sign lots more if people apt to need such documents did not usually revert to vivisectors.

Are mice specimens of "harmless animals?" Without statistics, does not the editor know that a million of these interesting quadrupeds are poisoned with agonizing drugs for one which has been inoculated with a view to finding a remedy for diphtheria? Is it more cruel to inoculate even one mouse with diphtheria than to catch him alive oh! and give him to the cat? Which would you rather have—mice in the pantry or diphtheria in the nursery?

"Dr." Lawrence, "editor of Medical Brief" is a fraud. My reason for saying so is indicated by this sentence of his: "In all probability, the serum had developed a poisonous ptomaine, which caused the attacks of tetanus." If he dares defend that hypothesis, I'll prove it shows he knows less of medicine than I, who am only a layman.

Finally, I entreat the editor not to publish his experience as a quack doctor. Because, whatever makes him ridiculous is an injury to the cause of woman.

Greeting From Aunt Elmina.

DEAR FRIENDS, MOSES AND LILLIAN:—I am glad to congratulate you on the continued improvement and success of our Lucifer. I have been a close reader of its pages from its birth, and I don't know of a single paper that I have gained more valuable ideas from, than from it.

For many years I have had one-half a dozen copies a week, and have sent them far and wide, usually in letters, so as to mark and comment on the contents, and thus ensure their perusal.

I wish some one would endow it with "a mint of money," and enable it to do still more and better work.

Now a word on one of my hobbies. I see Schenk has proved his theory of determination of sex. Proved the female the superior animal. He has not failed to produce a female in a single instance where his regimen was faithfully carried out. In forty-one cases thirty-nine succeeded—two failed where the patient did not follow his instructions. The conclusion is evident that the male is arrested development, and that under proper conditions females alone would result. He can usually ensure the male sex where desired, and a proper equilibrium of the sexes will be maintained. ELMINA D. SLENKER.

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 7.

Aug. 19. "Bulletin" (Phil.), Edward Stern, Good Will to Men.

Aug. 20. "Traveler," D. W. Groh gets in a good one to E. H. J. on Infidels. "Bulletin" (Phil.) prints a good one from Chas. A. Osborn on Belief in Christ; "Baltimore World" prints one from Albert P. Lewis on the Steel Strike; "Examiner" (San Francisco, Cal.), J. C. Bell under the caption Prayer and Work gets in a hot shot at the pulpit rain makers.

Aug. 21. "Traveler" prints letters from J. C. Bell on Solving Social Problems; J. M. Boler on Religious Liberty; B. T. Quaintance advises Common Sense to procure a copy of the Age of Reason and a school history and note the years that passed between the death of Franklin and Paine's writing of the first part of that work before he again claims that Franklin criticized it; "Bulletin" (Phil.) Chas. A. Osborn on Marriage and Divorce, and another entitled Thoughts About Thinking; A. P. Lewis writes of Labor and the Trusts.

Aug. 21. "Baltimore World," Francis B. Livesey replies to Rev. Father Coleman of Frederic, Md., on Marriage.

Aug. 22. "Traveler" prints two letters from Aurin F. Hill entitled Power of Mind and Specifications for Heaven; "Weekly Enquirer," (Cincinnati, Ohio) prints a good letter from Miss Mabel Gifford on Inspiration What is It? and C. L. Swartz commends the letters of J. F. Ferris and the writer on the marriage question and pleads for the same liberty of divorce that Mr. Ferris asks for marriage; "Bulletin" (Phil.), Edward Stern Defence of Jefferson; "The Examiner" (San Francisco, Cal.), D. Webster Groh, the Crime of Credulity; A. Johnson, An Objection; Brocton, Illinois, "Review," Dr. J. C. Barnes contributes a good article onMoney; the "Mattoon (Ill.) Commercial," Dr. J. C. Barnes discusses the labor question.

Aug. 23. "Traveler," Kate Austin presents the case of Berkman the Pittsburg Anarchist, who, in a moment of great publicexcitement attempted the life of Frick of Homestead Strike fame, as presented by the "Pittsburg, Leader." This young man is being slowly tortured to death in the Western Penitentiary at Allegheny, Pa. "Bulletin" (Phil.) Chas. A. Osborn has a splendid letter on the location of Heaven Within You; "The Daily Advocate," (Bellville, Ill.).

Aug. 24. "Traveler," Edward Stern, A Question of Debate, and E. H. J. pays his respects to the Infidel Press Writers' Club; "Bulletin" (Phil.), G. L. Gullickson writes of Christianity; D. Webster Groh on Bible and Temperance; "Pioneer Press," Martinsburg, W. Va., D. Webster Groh puts Bro. Powers right on several points regarding Bro. Livesey, and the latter fills three columns with very interesting Topics of the Times; Frank Reed, Eureka, Cal., writes on Livesey and the public schools.

Dorchester, Mass. A. C. ARMSTRONG.

Read not books alone, but men, and amongst them chiefly thyself; if thou find anything questionable there, use the commentary of a severe friend rather than the gloss of a sweet-lipped flatterer; there is more profit in a distasteful truth than in deceitfulness.—Quarles.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

882.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Another National Tragedy.

"Anger is a short madness," saith the ancient proverb. Madness means INSANITY, and we all know that it is useless to reason with the insane. If we would help the insane to sanity we must seem to agree with them to gain their confidence.

At this writing the American people—the great majority of them, are insane—insane with rage and thirst for revenge; hence I regard it as time wasted to attempt to reason with the average man or woman. I am glad to know, however, that there are a few, women as well as men, who do not lose their heads when the crowd goes mad. To these, the comparative few, I would say a word or two only, as the time of going to press is near.

Some of us have lived long enough to remember more than one national tragedy, similar to the one that occurred the other day at the Pan-American Exposition. One of these was the assassination of Abraham Lincoln by Wilkes Booth. This tragedy came as the climax to, or the legitimate result of, the far greater national tragedy which had begun four years before, at the firing on Fort Sumpter.

During all these four years the American nation had been INSANE, crazy drunk, so to speak—drunk with the blood of the slain in battle and with the tears of the widows and orphans of the slain in battle or of the prisoners starved to death in military stockades; and now the killing of the nation's president served to intensify the national madness many-fold. Goaded on by fear and hate, deeds were done that must forever cause a pang of regret to the heart, if not a blush of shame to the cheek, of every one calling himself an American.

Not satisfied with the killing of the assassin himself—under the savage code of "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth a life for a life," four persons were hanged as aiders and abetters of the assassination, among these a woman—after the real danger crisis had passed and after men's passion had ample time to cool.

Twenty years after the beginning of the great national tragedy the last act of which was the spectacular killing of the nation's chief executive, came the shooting of James A. Garfield by Chas. Guiteau. Differing in some respects from the first Presidential assassination there were many points of resemblance. It was politics mainly that caused the civil war and the consequent assassination of Lincoln, and it was politics mainly that caused the killing of Garfield. The feud betweed the two opposing factions of the Republican party was intensely bitter. Believing himself divinely commissioned to save the Republican party and through it to save the nation from ruin, the half-demented Guiteau "removed" the president as the surest way to save the party and the nation, and under the law of revenge, LEX TALIONIS, was in turn executed—hanged by the neck till he was dead; his flesh scraped from his bones and his skeleton kept for exhibition to morbid curiosity-hunters.

As in the case of Lincoln the shooting of Garfield caused the greatest consternation and alarm. Men looked into each other's faces only to see terror and rage pictured there. At first the cry was, "A plot, a plot! an atheistic, communistic plot to destroy our Christian Republic." But this theory was soon abandoned when it became clearly established that Guiteau was a Republican of the Republicans, a "stalwart of the stalwarts," a Christian of the Christians—an unusually devout believer in the Bible, the whole Bible, including the lesson of Abraham offering up his son Isaac. If he had inspirers and accomplices the less said about THEM the better for the Bible and for Republicanism. And hence this poor half-crazed victim of bad heredity and of superstitious training was left, or compelled, to be the scape-goat for his Christian and Republican inspirers.

And now again, just twenty years after the slaying of Garfield the nation is shocked, crazed, from center to circumference by another spectacular attempt to assassinate its chief ruler, by another apparently half-demented victim of bad heredity and perhaps still worse training or environment. As in the cases previously cited, the leaders of public opinion, civil and religious, are moving heaven and earth to establish the fact of COMPLICITY—a plot to kill all rulers and overthrow by violence the present social and political system or systems. The would-be assassin Czolgoscz, is reported to have declared himself an "Anarchist," that he has quite lately become such, having been inspired or converted to that political (or unpolitical) belief by hearing a lecture in Cleveland, Ohio, by Emma Goldman, and that in consequence of such conversion he decided to kill President McKinley.

Having learned from long observation, the wholly unreliable character of reports by the popular press, when treating of Anarchism and Anarchists, I close for this week by saying that twelve persons, including the editor of "Free Society" and his family, were arrested in Chicago, the evening following the wounding of President McKinley, and that they are still held in close confinement, no bail being allowed, awaiting further developments as to possible complicity with Czolgoscz—except the three women mentioned elsewhere as having been released. Emma Goldman was arrested yesterday (Sept. 10.) in Chicago and is being held on a like charge of conspiracy to commit murder, which charge she strenuously denies.

Of course we need not say that the shooting of President McKinley is wholly condemned by this office, as the suicidal act of a madman.

M. H.

"Free Society" and the Outlook.

As we go to press (Wednesday,) all the men connected with "Free Society" are still in jail, held without bail. An attempt is to be made this morning by their attorneys to have them admitted to bail. If this fails, no paper will be issued this week, but if even one one is released "Free Society" will appear.

Mrs. Isaak, her daughter, and Miss Mechanic are at home at 515 Carroll Avenue, after their arrest and unwarranted imprisonment by the Chicago police. It has been an unpleasant experience; but it will set many people thinking who have never thought before. Much sympathy has already been aroused by the detention of these women in the horrible cells of a Chicago police station. But what of the thousands of women who are every year thrown into those cells—women who are victims of ignorance, of environment, and of the officers of the law; women of whom, individually, no one ever hears and for whom nobody cares? An investigation of the police blackmailing methods was under way, and every day fresh exposures were being made, when the cry of "Anarchist" was raised; that cry was a "god-send" to the police department.

I shall have more to say next week of events transpiring. Just now I will merely state that the published reports of statements I have made are positively unauthorized, with these exceptions: I have never seen the man who shot Mr. McKinley, nor had I ever heard of him before the reports of the shooting. I did not know Miss Goldman's whereabouts, though the detectives assured me they had "positive information from Buffalo" that I knew where she was. I have heard Miss Goldman's lecture on "Modern Phases of Anarchy," and in that lecture she spoke of the futility of violence, and at no time have I heard her advocate violence. I believe that all acts of violence recoil on the party which institutes them. If a society of Anarchists had caused the assassination of Mr. McKinley that act would do more harm to their cause than to the cause of governmentalism. On the other hand, the methods adopted by police and newspapers in manufacturing "evidence" and promulgating lies about their victims will in the end be an injury to their own cause.

L. H.

The Medical Doctor Question Again.

The importance, the necessity, of correct ideas in regard to hygiene, that is in regard to the care of the body in health and disease, will be readily admitted by all readers of Lucifer. It is because of this importance, this necessity, that this discussion of the medical doctor question has been allowed considerable space in our columns for some months past.

Whether any real or permanent good shall come of the discussion will depend upon the readers as well as upon the writers that take part therein. Only she or he who is willing and able to take a philosophic view of the matter in hand—only the person who can take a judicial rather than a partisan attitude towards the questions involved, will be in position to give or receive real benefit from the continuance of the controversy concerning methods of maintaining health and curing disease. The discovery of truth, not victory in argument, should be the object.

Endeavoring always to remember this basic fact or principle I have a few words to say in reply to C. L. James, whose "Was it Honest?" appears on another page of this issue. Taking his closing paragraph first, as being most important, I would say:

Yes, "whatever makes him [the editor and therefore the paper] ridiculous is an injury to the cause of woman." The editor who champions the cause of woman—which cause necessarily is the cause of man as well, since motherhood includes the race of humankind—should be very careful not to give offense to friends nor an occasion of triumph to foes, by putting himself and the cause he defends in a ridiculous light or attitude. But is it true, or probable, that giving my experience as a heretic in medicine will make me ridiculous in the eyes of reformers—such as C. L. James, for instance, is supposed to claim to be?

When I told an old friend of my youth, a physician of the orthodox or regular type, that I had thoughts of devoting my time to the study and practice of the healing art, adding that I should probably discard most of his theories in regard to medicine, his reply was,

"Well, my friend, all I have to say is, Don't disgrace yourself!"

So, likewise when I began to cast off the shackles of orthodox theology an old and faithful ministerial friend, warned me, with tears in his voice, if not in his eyes, that I was about to ruin my prospects for this life, as well as for the life to come.

So, likewise, when I became a heretic in regard to civil government, human law, etc., my friends all warned me that the path to political honors and emolument would be forever closed against me, not to speak of the danger of getting my name mixed up with the secret plotters against "law and order," and against the lives of the nation's rulers.

But all the combined terrors associated in the popular mind with the words "quack," "infidel," "socialist," "anarchist," "atheist," etc., failed to deter me from following the lead of my highest and clearest convictions of right and of truth. With what result is partly shown in the fragmentary biographic sketch printed in our Twenty-First Anniversary Number of Lucifer.

As I see it: All men have their limitations. C. L. James with all his learning and capacity for growth is no exception to the rule. Early in life he evolved out of theologic orthodoxy, and the same wave of logical reasoning that emancipated him from slavery to medieval ideas of God, the origin and destiny of man, etc., carried him also out of the ruts of authoritarianism in civil law and political government. But when that wave struck the walls of orthodox medicine it had spent its force, with the mentality of Friend James. Hence he has passed through more than the average span of human life without being able to see that orthodox theology, orthodox government and orthodox medicine are "three of a kind," all based upon man's ignorance of nature, upon his innate credulity and inherited desire to lean upon and look up to something higher, wiser and more powerful than he knows himself to be.

As I see it, the same mental limitation prevents our learned critic from seeing that the real progress made in the medical art has been mainly introduced from without the narrowness and bigotry of the regular profession—witness the abandonment of the lancet and boluses in fevers etc., by the regulars after being shown by Priessnitz, Trall, Shew and other hydropaths, that fever patients recover far more rapidly without blood-letting and without heavy doses of calomel than with them. Witness also the lessons taught these same regulars by the Thompsonians or "steam" doctors; also by the Hahnemannians; also by the electricians, the magnetic healers, the mental suggestion healers, etc., etc., from all of whom the really progressive of the self-styled regulars have profited, and whose methods they more or less quietly adopt, though they may not be willing to acknowledge their indebtedness.

As I see it, our over-zealous critic is blind to the fact that there is such a thing as learned ignorance among the professors of the healing art, also that there is such a thing as intuitive perception by a comparatively unlearned man or woman, of what is needed by the sick, and that this intuitive perception, this sympathetic at-one-ment between physician and patient, is a qualification that no medical college can bestow upon its pupils, and without which natural endowment no one ought ever to assume the role of physician.

Like the poet, the true physician is born, not made a fact wholly ignored by learned professors who annually send out thousands of medical graduates who in some other calling could and would make useful members of human society, but who as physicians can never be other than blind followers of the routine of books, else still more dangerous empirics—murderous experimenters, charlatans—rightly termed quacks.

* * *

As I see it, womanhood, motherhood, must be emancipated from the despotisms represented by the three priesthoods—theological, judicial and medical, before the human race can take any decided step onward and upward.

In regard to the insinuations, epithets, charges of unfairness etc., I have room only to say that our otherwise esteemed correspondent is his own worst accuser. It is an old and true saying that if you want to know what a man really is, just get him to talking of other people. In condemning others he simply condemns himself. Lucifer's correspondents are many—to all of them we have tried to be hospitable and kind as well as just, and of them all none has had less cause for complaint than has C. L. James; of them all none has made more frequent complaints and accusations than he has done; none have used more intolerant language. To say that these complaints and accusations are unfounded and unjust is to state what our readers already know, unless it be such statements as that his reply to Walker was mutilated. Of this I know nothing; I only know that we try very hard to follow copy, in type-setting and proof-reading. If copy was not followed in this case it is probably owing to the writer's fondness for words of "learned length and thundering sound," Latin quotations, etc., instance, "Blefuscudian," in his reply of this week.

Time and health permitting I expect in the near future to tell our readers, as already threatened, something of my experience and observations as a heretic in medicine and hygiene, and in so doing will try to answer, in a general way, the points raised by Mr. James that could not be attended to in this article; after which a fair and reasonable share of space will be given to Friend James, or to any one who cares to defend the claims made in behalf of the so-called regular medical doctors that to them is due all the credit for the progress made of late years—confessedly very great, in the art of preventing disease and of caring for the sick, the wounded—the insane in mind or body.

M. H.

VARIOUS VOICES.

C. M. Moe, Spokane, Wash.:—I hasten to send you my mite to keep the light burning. You can send me "Nora," by Ibsen, that grand countryman of mine. I am proud of Ibsen although he will be understood by this generation but little.

Mrs. A. Danzig, Kansas:—Enclosed find fifty cents for which send me "Prodigal Daughter," and Lucifer for thirteen weeks; "Institutional Marriage;" "Truth Seeker Annual 1889;" "Holy Smoke in the Holy Land." The remainder for postage. I hope next time to send for a year's subscription. I like Lucifer and can hardly get along without it.

Sarah Stone Rockhill, Alliance, Ohio:—I think Lucifer grows better all the time, and you or the principles you uphold are gaining new friends. I am glad to note, especially, when the interest takes the form of "R. C. C.'s" helpfulness. I send twenty-five cents and the enclosed list of names for the Anniversary Number. Also one dollar on Lucifer another year. Send Ibsen's book, if you please.

Dr. E. W. Moorman, Ioka, Iowa:—I enclose one dollar which please credit on my subscription. Is there a Liberal League in Iowa, and if so can you put me in communication with it?

[We know of no active Liberal League in Iowa. If there is, we hope some of its members will write to Dr. Moorman. If there is none, one should be organized, as there are many Liberals in that state. L. H.]

Mrs. L. J., N. Y.:—Please send me, the enclosed list of books, for which I send you $2. I like "Hilda's Home" very much; and the stories recently published in Lucifer have been helpful. All cannot assimilate a philopophic statement—a story is better for them. You two are so truly liberal, so kind to all, even to those who are not in harmony with you, that you seem near friends to me. I would like to answer articles I see in Lucifer, sometimes, and shall when I get free enough to write my views over my own name; but I've reached the point of being ashamed to write anonymously so there is hope for me. But it isn't all for myself, when my friends have read Lucifer awhile longer, their ideas will be more free.

R. C. C., Portland, Ore.:—Please send me for the enclosed twenty-five cents copies of your Anniversary Number. I have read of your trials and triumphs with considerable interest and I desire to distribute your Anniversary Number among my friends as I consider it a valuable number for propagandist purpose. Long may Lucifer and its noble editors survive.

[We are receiving many words of commendation of our Anniversary double number. We can still supply them at 25 cents a dozen, mailed to any address. L. H.]

Philip G. Peabody, R. 61, 15 Court Square, Boston, Mass.:—My friend Dr.——, (who first subscribed for Lucifer in consequence of my advice,) asks me to send to you one dollar, to be credited on his subscription. I also enclose one dollar for one year's subscription for myself. I wish you and Lucifer the greatest prosperity. I am reminded to subscribe, (having just returned from a visit to Europe,) by some words of abuse of my friend, B. C. Walker, for whom I have much respect, in a newspaper that fell casually into my hands.

Martin Nortvedt, Mich.:—For the enclosed twenty-five cents please send me a copy of "Sexual Love" by Allan Laidlaw. From the slip on my paper I see that I am again in arrears, but please do not stop sending it. I hope soon to be able to square my arrears and renew for another year. I should also like to get a copy of the premium book "A Doll's House" by Ibsen, when I renew. So if you can, please save me a copy. Ibsen is one of my countrymen, but as Dr. B. L. Hjermstad of Cincinnati said in No. 879, is very little understood in his own country.

E. F. R., New Dorchester, Mass.:—Much is being said and written regarding the sex rights of women and a greater part of it is at variance with the truth of the matter. I find in my work many women if they had a legitimate income they would not sell their personal rights in either married or single short-lived blessedness. Man cannot argue truthfully that education and income unfit woman for the home. Give her both and she will make a home, for she will have only love at her table.

When sex is properly understood and its meaning universally taught in home, school, pulpit and literature, we will have gods and goddesses on the earth.

Laura H. Earl, Germantown, Pa.:—I enclose $1.25 to pay for a copy of Bebel's "Woman in Past, Present and Future," and my subscription to Lucifer for one year. Your paper contains news and thoughts that I cannot find elsewhere. One of the most interesting items you have given your readers was the set of questions of "Medicus" as to the Brooklyn girl who was assaulted by the young ruffians. Was there ever any answer to them made to you? I saw none, but have not had the recent numbers of the paper. Shortly after noting this query of "Medicus" I saw the record of a similar case in New York City, where the girl had killed the child she afterward bore, and the gentle reporter spoke with horror of her "awful crime." One knows that, unless he was a fool, the man cannot have thought as he wrote. Thus attempts to manufacture false public opinion are possibly the most serious form of crime that threatens the public safety. Yours with the strongest sympathy for your efforts toward freedom.

The Effect of Lynching.

The punishment of crime by the commission of crime has been and always will be a failure wherever it is tried, and the result of the frequent lynchings has been that the people have become brutalized till lynchings are encouraged by passion and ther crime might be discouraged by a sharp punishment—"Boston Herald."

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New,

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A H C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 399 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Bonnie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 350 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Withhood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

We still have a supply of our Anniversary double number. Mailed to any address for two cents each, twenty cents a dozen

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull, 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin, 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthoxy False, Hence Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote, 5c.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington, 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice, 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Wallick, 25c.
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 190 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 5c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Secularist. 5c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c
Truth Seeker Annual 1889. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers. Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rose Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 371 pages, 15c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship. J. W. Sullivan. 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 198 pages. 20c.
The Grant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God, Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner. 10c.
The Gods of Misrule. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.
Practical Co-operation. R. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 300 pages. 20c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 5c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can profitably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date, and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All is "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers 1,000 delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, (8 in colors), 28 recipes. Price, Cloth bound, $3, mailed. Address Lucifer office, 500 Fulton S Chicago.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

PBR
E
f#808
v.5, no.36
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 36. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 21, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 883

WE REAP WHAT WE SOW.

There are loyal hearts and spirits brave,
With souls that are tried and true;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the same will come back to you.

Give love, and back to your heart will flow
The love that your heart most needs;
Show faith and trust and hearts will show
The faith in your words and deeds.

For life is a mirror in which are shown
The deeds and lives we live;
Then give of our best to every one,
And the world will as freely give.

—A. H. Hinman.

Anarchism and the Trusts.

An important "Conference on Trusts," called by the Civic Federation, was held in Central Music Hall, Chicago, just two years ago. At this conference many representative men, including governors, senators, political economists, bankers, editors and others, spoke. The speakers were representatives of varying schools of thought, among them William J. Bryan, Bourke Cockran, J. Sterling Morton, Samuel Gompers, Thomas J. Morgan, and Benj. R. Tucker. Mr. Tucker, as most of our readers are aware, is the editor of "Liberty" and a man whose deep study of sociology entitles him to be regarded as one of the foremost exponents of philosophic Anarchism. Mr. Tucker's address on "Anarchism and the Trusts" was one of the most heartily applauded speeches of the conference. Now that on all sides is heard the question, "What is Anarchism?" we think it timely to give a short selection from this address. The complete address, together with Mr. Tucker's portrait, is to be found in the officially published report, "Chicago Conference on Trusts," a book of 626 pages, which may be obtained at this office.

L. H.

The first and great fact to be noted in the case, I have already hinted at. It is the fact that the trusts owe their power to vast accumulation and concentration of wealth, unmatched, and, under present conditions, unmatchable, by any equal accumulation of wealth, and that this accumulation has been effected by the combination of separate accumulations only less vast and in themselves already gigantic, each of which owed its existence to one or more of the only means by which large fortunes can be rolled up: interest, rent, and monopolistic profit. But for interest, rent, and monopolistic profit, therefore, trusts would be impossible. Now, what causes interest, rent, and monopolistic profit? For all three there is but one cause—the denial of liberty, the suppression or restriction of competition, the legal creation of monopolies.

This single cause, however, takes various shapes.

Monopolistic profit is due to that denial of liberty which takes the shape of patent, copyright, and tariff legislation, patent and copyright laws directly forbidding competition, and tariff laws placing competition at a fatal disadvantage.

Rent is due to that denial of liberty which takes the shape of land monopoly, vesting titles to land in individuals and associations which do not use it, and thereby compelling the non-owning users to pay tribute to the non-using owners as a condition of admission to the competitive market.

Interest is due to that denial of liberty which takes the shape of money monopoly, depriving all individuals and associations, save such as hold a certain kind of property, of the right to issue promissory notes of currency, and thereby compelling all holders of property, other than the kind thus privileged, as well as all non-proprietors, to pay tribute to the holders of the privileged property for the use of a circulating medium and instrument of credit, which, in the complex stage that industry and commerce have now reached, has become the chief essential of a competitive market.

Now, Anarchism, which, as I have said, is the doctrine that in all matters there should be the greatest amount of individual liberty compatible with equality of liberty, finds that none of these denials of liberty are necessary to the maintenance of equality of liberty, but that each and every one of them, on the contrary, is destructive of equality of liberty. Therefore it declares them unnecessary, arbitrary, oppressive, and unjust, and demands their immediate cessation.

Of these four monopolies—the banking monopoly, the land monopoly, the tariff monopoly, and the patent and copyright monopoly—the injustice of all but the last-named is manifest even to a child. The right of the individual to buy and sell without being held up by a highwayman whenever he crosses an imaginary line called a frontier; the right of the individual to take possession of unoccupied land as freely as he takes possession of unoccupied water or unoccupied air; the right of the individual to give his I. O. U., in any shape whatsoever, under any guarantee whatsoever, or under no guarantee at all, to anyone willing to accept it in exchange for something else—all these rights are too clear for argument, and anyone presuming to dispute them simply declares thereby his despotic and imperialistic instincts. . . .

If, then, the four monopolies to which I have referred are unnecessary denials of liberty, and therefore unjust denials of liberty, and if they are the sustaining causes of interest, rent, and monopolistic profit, and if, in turn, this

Per
HT 937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.36

usurious trinity is the cause of all vast accumulations of wealth—for further proof of which propositions I must, because of the limitation of my time, refer you to the economic writings of the Anarchistic school—it clearly follows that the adequate solution of the problem with which the trusts confront us is to be found only in abolition of these monopolies and the consequent guarantee of perfectly free competition.

The most serious of these four monopolies is unquestionably the money monopoly, and I believe that perfect freedom in finance alone would wipe out nearly all the trusts, or at least render them harmless, and perhaps helpful. Mr. Bryan told a very important truth when he declared that the destruction of the money trust would at the same time kill all the other trusts. Unhappily, Mr. Bryan does not propose to destroy the money trust. He wishes simply to transform it from a gold trust into a gold and silver trust. The money trust cannot be destroyed by the remonetization of silver. That would be only a mitigation of the monopoly, not the abolishment of it. It can be abolished only by monetizing all wealth that has a market value—that is, by giving to all wealth the right of representation by currency, and to all currency the right to circulate wherever it can on its own merits. And this is not only a solution of the trust question, but the first step that should be taken, and the greatest single step that can be taken, in economic and social reform.

* * *

I have tried, in the few minutes allotted to me, to state concisely the attitude of Anarchism toward industrial combinations. It discountenances all direct attacks on them, all interference with them, all anti-trust legislation whatsoever. In fact, it regards industrial combinations as very useful whenever they spring into existence in response to demand created in a healthy social body. If at present they are baneful, it is because they are symptoms of a social disease originally caused and persistently aggravated by a regimen of tyranny and quackery. Anarchism wants to call off the quacks, and give liberty, nature's great cure-all, a chance to do its perfect work.

Free access to the world of matter, abolishing land monopoly; free access to the world of mind, abolishing idea monopoly; free access to an untaxed and unprivileged market, abolishing tariff monopoly and money monopoly—secure these, and all the rest shall be added unto you. For liberty is the remedy of every social evil, and to Anarchy the world must look at last for any enduring guarantee of social reform.—Benjamin R. Tucker, before the Chicago Conference on Trusts, September, 1899.

The Death of Love.

BY VOLTAIRINE DE CLEYRE.

A very miscellaneous set of reasons, those which Lucifer has received as to why love dies. May I add one more to the assortment? And may I preface that it seems to me all the answers I have read are open to the same criticism, viz: that of hunting with a telescope for reasons of all sorts of doubtful probability, while the simple thing to do is to look with a naked eye at immediate facts. Love dies just as every manifestation of life dies, and dies the quicker in proportion to its intensity.

True, there can be no universal "standard of measurement," by which it can be determined that love, if expended in such a degree of intensity, will last so and so long. We are all mixed in different proportions, and one may love long and fiercely and another but indifferently and for a brief season also. But in general the love season of life is youth, and like the other feelings of youth it lives out its time and has done. The shifting environment of life presses upon the ego, and moulds it in this shape today, tomorrow in that. And as this or that element of the physical mixture comes uppermost the desires of it, the direction of its activities change.

Truly the change is not wrought out without war in the soul. Love, as well as the mere animal playfulness of youth, is not relegated to the background without protest. And as it is always hard, nay really impossible, to see one's own true reflection in a looking-glass since the mere intent to see stiffens the play of the features, so it is impossible for the individual soul to look impartially upon itself and realize the changes wrought within it. In general I find, however, that it is your hard-headed Philistine, your soul that never felt aught but the outmost ripples of a strong sensation, your creature of the earth earthy, who is able to recognize the passing of love, much more tranquilly than our idealists, to whom, on account of the vortices of feeling within themselves, the death of love comes in "storm and stress" and bitter surrender, and who, long after the thing is dead, try to galvanize the corpse.

Useless to reason with such a one; he will go on painting conditions under which it might have been otherwise; he will rake the skies of imagination for fancies to reanimate his corpse, until the energy of his soul has exhausted itself. Fortunate if then those other energies for which the flowering time has come, and for whose sake love MUST DIE, are called into active play by outer circumstance. If not; if in their half-unfolded state they suffer blight, if nothing stirs those faculties wherein the power of growth still lies, then life dies when but half-spent, and "the dead buries the dead;" all the days of their death they go on shoveling ashes upon a grave, and planting dream-blooms whose roots can suck no life from that barren earth.

It has usually been my lot to stir up a veritable hornet buzz among the contributors of Lucifer, (old readers will remember the controversy arising over "His Confession," and other articles) and I presume my assertion that love MUST DIE will again provoke the expression of opposition. Believe me, it is from no desire to take a singular attitude, or to arouse the spirit of opposition for the sake of hearing what will come out of it, that I am writing this. For indeed it might be said, "If you have taken a seat among the Philistines, and have come to an end of your idealism, you might be satisfied to hug your ugly barren fact to your own withered breast, and not throw it among us, who will at least still maintain some hope of joy by seeking ways to prolong the echoes from the harp of love."

But, comrades, I am not a Philistine; I am more of an idealist than any one of you, ("though I say it myself, that shouldn't.") It is just because I believe in living ideals, that I protest against this senseless waste of yours. There is something better than picturing the dreamy joy of watching a man's face, or listening to the music of a woman's voice; it has its time—a time when it is graceful, when it is fit to fill a life from center to circumference; but for pity's sake, admit that "spooning" is not the business of existence for a man and woman with the sap of life receding from cheek and eyelid, and flecks from the swollen rivers of Autumn upon their heads. Something larger should dwell in the eyes of these than this petty vision of each other. This love you strain yourselves so to preserve and which sits so well on glossy brown heads, and rich red lips, but is so ridiculous on age-shrunk skin and whitening hair, is a very selfish thing compared with the immense vistas that should be opening out before you. The beauty of color and curve is going from you, but the nobility and grace of form grows hourly more beautiful if it be fed upon thoughts which broaden and lighten it up. Kisses for the cheek's rounded carmine, but an ocean-sweep of thought for the brow whose glory will remain unto the end of age; eye to eye the lovers of youth, sensuous and humid with the juices of physical life; but the eyes of the whole human race, nay all that lives, reflected in the vision of him whose soul has come upon the larger distances, the fathomless depths of even sympathy for all that moves across the panorama of the world.

You, who sit with your head bent over your plate to avoid the gaze of the eyes you once longed for, you who sit alone wondering why the hand that once sought yours seeks it no more, have you nothing larger to do with your life than mope away about yourself and your concerns? Have you nothing more in your heart than the desire to experience an old thrill? Are there no injustices for you to protest against? Are there no ideals of a better society for you to realize? Is there no cowardice in the world into which you may throw the weight of your courage? Is there no ignorance struggling its helpless way which you may do your share to lighten? Do these, and you will begin to draw deep breaths again, the languor of dying love will fall away like a garment; you will experience not the old sensation, but a new one, as life-giving in its season as the other. You will know the strength of asserted personality, made good in the social stream. The emptiness of an existence, mawking and moaning in its eddy for what Time has swept beyond its commingling, will be filled with upbearing force to carry it out once more to the mid-current, and this time with the power of being alone—strong and self-resourceful, winning the weaker to its side and imparting its strength to them in turn.

Freedom for sex, I will call with you, as I have ever done; and if there are Sapphos among us, why let them "burn down to the socket" with that driveling idea of soaking one's individuality forever in the individuality of some body or bodies. But the most of mankind are not so. Let such realize that freedom for sex does not mean one must always be worrying about his sexual existence. Let not his conviction that love should be free effervesce so much in his head that he is unable to recognize himself as part of the general processes of nature, and when he finds his free bird dying as well as the caged one, construct all manner of arrangements of dubious desirability for keeping it alive.

Love—when free—dies in its due season. It dies to make way for other activities, equally imperative in the building up of character. Don't seek to prolong the agony; let it die in peace.

Jane Addams and the Imprisoned Anarchists.

When Jane Addams, of Hull House fame, heard that the publishers of "Free Society" were arrested and held without warrant and denied communication with friends or attorneys, she visited police headquarters and asked to see Mr. Isaak, and did all that she could toward obtaining for the imprisoned men and women a fair hearing.

"This action on the part of Miss Addams," says a writer in the "Record-Herald," "has been the subject of some comment and even of adverse criticism, and it may be well to inquire why she was thus engaged at the very same hour when the ministers of the gospel all over the country were condemning the Anarchists and when a Chicago divine of some note was declaring 'that all Anarchists should be driven to hell.'

"Anyone who has listened to Miss Addams' public lectures has gained several distinct impressions which may be able to throw some light upon this action. She is inclined to the extreme doctrine of non-resistance, to a belief that evil cannot be successfully resisted, but must in the end be overcome by good. She is not even an adherent of the school of scientific Anarchy, to which the suspect Isaak and his comrades belong, according to which school all law and government are not only unnecessary, but represent the repressive and retrogade tendency in social evolution

"Disagreeing with the philosophy of the arrested men, she nevertheless knew several of them personally, having met them through that neighborly hospitality which Hull House extends to all who care to come to it, regardless of class, nationality or either social or religious creed.

"Charles Lamb says you cannot hate a man when you know him, and apparently Miss Addams has verified this in experience. During the time of the first public excitement she was able to judge these men whom she knew by her previous knowledge of their characters, and was not frightened by the fact that they were labeled Anarchists even at the moment when that word was associated with a dastardly crime. She was able to recollect that Mr. Isaak and his friends are merely members of a school, who, following the direction indicated by the orthodox Democrat, that the least government is the best government, add that the entire absence of government is better than the best government.

"They contend that the statutory and judge-made law of the past has been largely class legislation, enacted and enforced for the benefit of the few, and that the most hateful aspect of human life is continually found in connection with the army, the police and the courts. This being the Anarchist position, Miss Addams quite logically contends that, society having laid down a general rule of law that the right of counsel shall not be denied and that bail shall not be refused except in capital cases, and then only when there is some proof of the guilt of the accused it is especially unfortunate to seem to deny these rights to any class of persons on account of their published beliefs—and particularly so when such a denial of legal right illustrates the position they constantly take in regard to the system of law and order. So far from tending to suppress Anarchy or even to dissuade the Anarchist, such a course inevitably and directly strengthens him in his position. She believes that no person should override the law, be he judge, policeman or Anarchist.

"Referring again to one of Miss Addams' lectures, she maintained that there was a certain corrective power in the position of the anarchist in respect to the present-day tendency toward special legislation. She points out that it is well to have the rights of the individual proclaimed in this time of much lawmaking for the protection of favored classes and of property rights.

"Doubtless there are many persons who sympathize with this position, and, while they did not have the opportunity to express it in prompt action as Miss Addams did, they are grateful for at least this small demonstration in favor of the integrity of legal guaranties."

A Suggestion to Correspondents.

While we are always glad to receive well-written original articles for Lucifer's columns, especially from our subscribers, and while there is great advantage in having on hand a large surplus of articles from which to choose, we are often much embarrassed by this surplus, and by the fact that it is constantly growing larger.

In order to relieve in some measure this embarrassment of the editors of small journals working on lines of progressive thought, the following plan has been suggested:

Instead of sending all your written thoughts to the radical weeklies or monthlies, send part of them to your local journals, your county or state papers. If your articles are printed, other readers of these political, agricultural or "society" journals will be encouraged to do likewise, and soon a "people's forum" will be a recognized and popular feature of papers in which free discussion is now comparatively unknown.

If your home papers will not print your articles, then send your names to A. C. Armstrong, Dorchester, Mass., Secretary of the American Press Writers' Association, asking for lists of papers that admit articles on radical and progressive subjects; then send your rejected matter, changed so as to appear to have been originally written for the new and untried journal.

Membership in the Press Writers' Association costs nothing, but it would be well to send a few stamps for circulars containing suggestion and information in regard to the work now being done by this band of volunteer investigators and agitators in the field of human education and enlightenment.

By this means the radical work that is now being done by Lucifer, "Discontent," "Free Society," and other pioneers, can be multiplied many-fold, relieving the pressure for space in these small and comparatively unpopular journals, and at the same time giving the needed training to a volunteer corps of earnest writers whose united efforts to overthrow old-time superstitions would soon become well nigh if not quite irresistible.

What say our readers and correspondents to these suggestions?

M. H.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

883.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

The Lesson of the Hour.

"All the world's a stage and all men are players," is an oft quoted saying. The particular drama—rather the particular "act" in the great continuous drama of human life on this planet, that has attracted more attention, perhaps, than any other within the past few months, has just been played at Buffalo, New York, the chief "characters" in which act I need not say, are William McKinley, President of the United States of America, and Leon Czolgosz, a young man calling himself an "anarchist."

In the technical language of the stage, the "act" of which we now speak is called TRAGEDY, and while the most sensational part thereof is now numbered with the things that were, the really tragical and especially the spectacular features of the "act" that opened with the shooting of President McKinley by the man who thus, in a moment, sprang from obscurity to world-wide notoriety, not to say fame—is by no means ended.

Studying causes as well as effects—as the student of nature—including man and his institutions, must do in order to deserve the name of philosopher and scientist, let us take the principal actors in this sensational act in the great drama of human life, and briefly consider how and why it was that they were at the Pan-American Exposition on the afternoon of Friday the sixth day of the present calendar month, and how and why it was that one received a fatal wound and the other became a homicide, narrowly escaping death at the hands of the bystanders.

Speaking first of him whose term as President of the United States and whose term of life were alike cut short by the pistol in the hand of Leon Czolgosz, and speaking for myself alone, I would say that William McKinley was a man greatly favored by heredity—by a long line of ancestry trained and developed in the "storm and stress" of feudal life in Scotland and England. Nature had made him well. In this respect he was a man of ten thousand, if not one of a million. Some years ago, and before his first nomination as candidate for the chief magistracy of the American nation I stood within a few feet of this favored child of fortune while he delivered one of his characteristic political speeches. As I read him then, and as I have read him since in his pictured likenesses and in his public utterances and public acts, I saw in him a born leader of men—that is, of men who need leaders and who will have leaders regardless of cost to themselves and others. He was not a man of towering genius; not a philosopher; not a profound reasoner, but he had that which was far better as qualification for successful leadership than genius, philosophy or logic, he had PRACTICAL TALENT in pre-eminent degree. He had TACT. He had been trained in the tactics of the law, and well he knew how to use these as a political leader. There was that in his physical make-up, as well as in his voice and manner of speaking, that inspired men with confidence in his honesty, in his earnestness and sympathy with and for others.

Remembering the impressions received from listening to the address of Wm. McKinley in the state house square, Topeka Kansas, and the effect that address had upon the assembled thousands, I can easily understand how and why the still larger crowd at the Pan-American Exposition went wild with applause on "President's Day," and also how and why it was that the same crowd went wild with grief and rage when at the public reception their idol was struck down by one who played the Judas act—or rather the Joab act, as told in the second book of Samuel, twentieth chapter:

"Art thou in health my brother? And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hands, so he smote him therewith in the fifth rib. . . . and he died."

PLACE IN HISTORY.

As for the real merits of the life and work of William McKinley and the place to be assigned to his name in the history of this country or of the world, of course this article and this issue of Lucifer are neither the place nor the time for such estimate. Solon, the great Athenian law-giver and sage is reported to have said to Crœsus, King of Lydia, that it is impossible to rightly estimate a man until you know how he met his death. If this be a true criterion then the death of William McKinley stamps him a superior man, notwithstanding the seeming adhesion to superstitious theology in his last moments, when he is reported to have said, "It is God's way; we must submit." With his religious training, and remembering that his life as a politician was not favorable to the formation of logical or philosophic habits of thought, it is not strange that he would seek to give comfort to his wife in this way. His courage through it all; his expressed desire that no violence should be done to his assailant; his uniform cheerfulness and hopefulness indicate a well-balanced mind. One chief cause of regret, as I see it, is that—in his last moments—or rather before the near approach of death had clouded his mental powers, he did not enter a specific and earnest protest against the infliction of the death penalty upon Czolgosz. If he really meant what he said when telling his wife, "It is God's way," and if he could really say, with him whose example he professed to follow, "Father forgive them, they know not what they do," why did he not leave it as part of his last will and testament that his misguided and probably demented assailant should be kindly and humanely treated—kept in confinement if need be to keep him from injuring himself or others, but never to be made an example of the old barbaric law, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed"—if William McKinley had done this he would have done more to embalm his name in the grateful remembrance of coming generations, would have done more to prevent repetitions of tragedies such as the one of which he himself was the victim—than he had done by any act of his life, or any words of political wisdom now recorded of him.

GOOD INTENTIONS.

In my estimate of the character of William McKinley I mean always to give him the credit of good intentions. From the standpoint of mental philosophy, of mental and physical science, I can do no less than this. To accuse him of bad intentions would be to accuse myself, for my philosophy teaches me that under like conditions, prenatal and postnatal, I would have done PRECISELY as McKinley did.

Even when making what I conceive to be his saddest mistakes—instance, when, in conjunction with his fellow rich men—the plutocrats of the United States Senate, he took twenty millions of dollars of the people's money—money that neither he nor the senators had earned, and with that money bought the robber claim of Spain to the islands called the Philippines, and then proceeded, after the fashion of all robber rulers, to take more of the people's money to make war upon the inhabitants of those islands—with fire and sword and gatling gun to subdue those islands and hold them as conquered provinces, so that the United States could take its place among nations as a "world power," as an empire with dependent colonies, in all this, I repeat, with like heredity and like training or surroundings I would have done precisely as McKinley did.

LEON CZOLGOSZ.

Having given William McKinley the credit of good intentions—of doing the best he knew under the circumstances, with the lights before me I can do no less in the case of his assailant—his weak-minded, misguided murderer, Leon Czolgosz. Go back far enough and we shall find an efficient cause, a COMPELLING cause for the killing of the twenty-fifth President of the United States, on Friday the sixth day of September 1901, current calendar. This is not the doctrine of pessimism, nor of fatalism, it is simply the irresistible LOGIC of rationalism, of naturalism—of natural causation, of natural sequence. CŒTERIS PARIBUS—"other things being equal," as the wise old Latins used to say, McKinley would have been the murderer and Czolgosz the victim. Where, then is there rational ground for hate, for revenge—for vengeance such as is now expressed everywhere, with few exceptions, against Czolgosz, and against all who are supposed to hold similar views in regard to government, and the causes of the inequalities and the miseries that we see everywhere around us?

That Czolgosz was not a philosopher, not a reasoner—that he did not have practical talent, or what is called good "common sense" in adapting means to ends, it seems to me must be apparent to every one who thinks a moment. If his aim had been the exact opposite of what he says it was; if he had desired to defeat the purposes of Anarchism as taught by its logical thinkers and reasoners,—for instance in the extract from the speech of Benjamin R. Tucker, given on first page of this week's Lucifer—if Czolgosz had desired to strengthen the power of the Trusts, and consolidate and perpetuate the rule of the few over the many, he could have done nothing better for his purpose than to slay the President of the United States, in the way and at the time he seems deliberately to have chosen.

Saying nothing of what he must have known would be the inevitable consequences to himself, does not this view of the matter stamp Leon Czolgosz a fit subject for a lunatic asylum, or at least a man very much lacking in common sense?

EX-SENATOR PETTIGREW'S OPINION.

Having already exceeded my self-imposed limits I close for this week, by quoting the—in the main, very sensible words of Ex-senator Pettigrew of South Dakota:

Anti-anarchy legislation by congress would be futile, in the opinion of former Senator R. F. Pettigrew of South Dakota. Mr. Pettigrew, who passed through the city yesterday afternoon on his way from New York to St. Paul, said anarchy could be effectually prevented only by removing the conditions that cause it—namely, imperialism, unequal social conditions and the rule of the money power.

"There is a lot of extravagant talk these days about anarchist plots," said the ex senator. "It is my belief there was no plot. No plot of anarchists could be discovered by the European governments after the assassination of either Empress Elizabeth or King Humbert, although the greatest efforts were made to unearth some sort of conspiracy. Assassination is generally the act of some frenzied individual and anarchy is not often the cause.

"Lincoln was not killed by an anarchist; neither was Garfield nor Mayor Carter H. Harrison. The making of anti-anarchist laws or the establishment of a penal colony for 'reds,' as proposed by an Iowa congressman, would do no good. We don't need more laws, but what is required is the just enforcement of all laws and a return to the equitable conditions of the country under our forefathers. England once had laws which placed 120 different kinds of offenses under the head of capital crimes. Today, with less than a half dozen varieties punishable by death, England is much freer and has less crimes to deal with."

Yes, the falsely called Anarchism that seeks justice by killing rulers, can "only be prevented by removing the conditions that cause it."

M. H.

The Chicago Prisoners.

As we go to press—Wednesday, Sept. 18, Emma Goldman, Abraham Isaak, editor of "Free Society", his son and several others charged with complicity with Czolgosz, are still in jail, notwithstanding the confessed inability of the police to find any evidence to sustain such charge. It is reported that the prisoners prefer to remain in jail awhile longer rather than risk the danger of being mobbed by the law and order loving citizens of Chicago.

M. H.

Notes From the Circulation Department.

In ordering copies of Lucifer "by return mail" please inclose stamps for postage. If you are willing to wait till our regular mailing day (Friday), postage is unnecessary. In mailing at the general postoffice we get the advantage of pound rates, whereby we mail about twenty-two copies for one cent. In mailing at a sub-station, as we do during the week, we must pay a cent for each four ounces, or a cent a single copy.

* * *

We mail several hundred free sample copies with each issue. If you receive one, it is an invitation to subscribe. If you receive Lucifer regularly without having paid for it, some one else has subscribed for you. If you do not want to receive the paper, your refusal to take it from postoffice will insure the discontinuance of your copy.

* * *

All trial subscriptions are discontinued on expiration of subscription. If you intend to renew, please notify us a week or two before the expiration of your subscription and thereby save us considerable time and expense.

* * *

We do not discontinue sending to "old subscribers" on the expiration of time paid for, unless requested to do so, as we have found that the majority let their subscription lapse and then pay up. So please be sure to notify us promptly if you want your copy discontinued.

Lucifer will be sent five weeks for ten cents to any address, on trial. As premium we will send either "Institutional Marriage," "Motherhood in Freedom," by M. Harman or "A Tale of the Strassburg Geese, by R. B. Kerr.

* * *

It is not the "duty" of any one to help circulate Lucifer; but to those who believe that it is doing a necessary work, and who wish to aid it, I would say that never was there a more auspicious time than the present. It is inevitable that some of our subscribers should grow frightened at the outcry now being raised, and, for family or business reasons order their names taken from Lucifer's subscription list. And though Lucifer would continue to exist even though hundreds should discontinue taking it, now is the time for the real friends of the paper to manifest their interest. And the most effective way to do this is by sending the names of new subscribers. We will send Lucifer five weeks to ten addresses, or thirteen weeks to four addresses for $1, adding premium pamphlets as stated elsewhere. Shall we hear from you? L. H.

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 8.

August 25. Boston Globe, prints a good letter from John A. Homans in answer to Senator Tillman's recent speech on the Afro-American.

August 26. Bulletin (Phil.), Edward Stern, appears on Methods of Progress; William E. Bonney answers the question, What is Spiritualism? Chicago Post, Edward Stern presents some Staggering Figures.

August 27. Traveler, Albert P. Lewis takes a shot at Prof. Moore on Defaming Infidels; Francis B. Livesey writes of the Excitement in West Virginia his articles in the Pioneer Press have caused. Bulletin (Phil.) John J. Fleming, True Friends.

August 28. Traveler, Miss Lucy Waters Phelps writes a good letter on the marriage and divorce question under the caption Precedent vs. Reason; Chas. A. Osborn answers a critic on Faith; Bulletin (Phil.), C. L. Swartz has a fine letter on Marriage and Divorce; Edward Stern, Hits for Single Taxers.

August 29. Weekly Enquirer (Cincinnati, O.), Charles A. Osborn handles the marriage question without gloves in answer to National Divorce Law League; Southern West Virginian (Williamson, W. Va.) Francis B. Livesey claims Compulsory Education Wrong.

August 30. Traveler, William Duffney answers E. H. J.'s attack on the Infidel Press Writers; J. T. Small has some questions for George William Gilbert to answer. Bulletin (Phil.), J. M. Gilbert writes on Science and Faith. Seattle (Wash.) Times, Francis B. Livesey replies to a Unitarian minister.

August 31. Traveler, J. C. Bell, A Day Dream; J. M. Gilbert answers Prof. Moore on Religious Persecution; Catonsville, (Md.) Argus prints Francis B. Livesey on the School Problem.

NEW MEMBERS.

a. Eldridge, Charles E., 2939 Michigan Ave., Kansas City, Mo.
c. Fleming, John F. 417 S. 6th. St., Philadelphia, Pa.
c. Homans, John A., 43 Roundy St., Beverley, Mass.
c. Hunt, H. W., Federalsburg, Md.
b. Kramer, J. L., 107 Mechanic St., Bradford, Pa.
b. Lord, Charles S., Reynoldsville, Pa.
c. Warren, A., Dale, Oklahoma.

Dorchester, Mass. A. C. ARMSTRONG.

VARIOUS VOICES.

A. J. K., Chicago:—Enclosed find two dollars for subscription to Lucifer, as I see my subscription expired several months ago. Accept thanks for sending the Light-Bearer, the brightest and most educational of all reform papers. I would like, also, to avail myself of your special premium offer of one of Ibsen's master works.

M. J., New York:—I wonder why the whole Republican party were not under suspicion when the Governor of Kentucky was assassinated? I have no doubt they were all as guilty as all the Anarchists are now. Such fools as the assassin make much trouble and turn the whole government into "anarchists' "—the kind we fear—they all want to act the part toward the crazy man that they say Anarchists want to act toward others.

"Kicking Mule," Whatcom, Wash.:—It is with horrified disgust that I read the account of last week's train wreck on the Great Northern in Montana. Surely the industrial battlefields are becoming bloodier than actual war. Could such a catastrophe be possible under State Ownership of Railroads or Socialism. Would like to see your opinion in some future issues. If such horrors will not open the public's eyes to the necessity of Government Ownership of Railroads, nothing on earth will.

C. P., Iowa:—Received your anniversary number. It is fine. Inclosed find seventy-five cents to use as you deem fit. I will pay what I owe on subscription later on. This is money I earned at a church sociable, helping serve dinner on the Fourth. Mr F. got a place on the railroad here and we were getting along nicely with a prospect of earning more later on. Last Sunday, after a hard day's work he was told not to come back Monday, as he was too old—forty-one. After January 1, 1901 they employ no men over thirty-five. And so this beautiful Trust shoves off its employes without a moment's warning. So F. said, "Send up the money to Lucifer now while we've got it. Payday will not come again, and its no use waiting till you can send more." With best wishes of us all I am yours in the fight—against all kinds of Trusts.

L. M. B., Florence, Mo.:—I attended a meeting of the citizens of this town, last night, the purpose of which, as stated in the call, was to express sympathy for our dead President; but which seemed to me to be very incendiary, as the "resolutions" advocated hanging, deporting, or jailing all "anarchists" and refusing them the use of the United States mails to distribute their literature. One of the "speakers," a very bigoted Methodist, in dilating on the beauties of our "government" that these wicked "Anarchists" are trying to overthrow, said that we want a government of peace and protection. He demanded that we be protected in our homes and in our assemblies; that we may meet in our churches and halls, with none to make us afraid; that each shall be at liberty to do as he pleases so long as he does not interfere with the liberty of any one else. Please don't give this descendant of Balaam's speaking trumpet away so that the detectives can catch him, as he belongs to that numerous and highly respectable class called "good citizens,' and I would not like to be instrumental in getting him into the clutches of the law.

The Respectable Way.

A gentleman invited a certain lecturer to his house to take tea.

Immediately on being seated at the table a little daughter of the house said to the guest, abruptly:

"Where is your wife?"

The lecturer, who had recently separated from his better-half, was surprised and annoyed at the question, and stammered forth the truth:

"I don't know."

"Don't know?" repeated the child. "Why don't you know?"

Finding that the child persisted in her interrogations, despite the mild reproof of the parents, he decided to make a clean breast of the matter and have it over at once, so he said, with calmness:

"Well, we don't live together. We think as we can't agree we'd better not."

He stifled a groan as the child began again and darted an exasperated look at her parents.

But the little torment would not be quieted until she exclaimed:

"Can't agree? Then, why don't you fight it out, the same as father and mother do?"—Tit-Bits.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New,

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $1. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 300 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yoleet Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Martian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

We still have a supply of our Anniversary double number. Mailed to any address for two cents each, twenty cents a dozen

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

A 'Bargain Counter' Lot of Literature

AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.
Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.
Did Jesus Christ Rise from the Dead? Saladin, 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.
Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton 5c.
Who are Christians? William Denton. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote, 5c.
Christianity no Finality William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 3c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick, 25c.
Reminiscences of August Spies, in German. With portrait, 190 pages, 25c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.
Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.
St. Matthew Before the Court. For the crime of forgery. Secularist. 5c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c.
Truth Seeker Annual, 1900. Among the contents is a symposium on Liberalism by Ingersoll, Helen Gardener, Putnam, Parker Pillsbury, E. B. Foote, E. C. Walker, Dr. Juliet H. Severance, and seventeen other representative Freethinkers. Illustrated. 10c
Hilda's Home. A story of social conditions as they are and as they may be. Rosa Graul. 20c
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 370 pages, 25c.
Direct Legislation by the Citizenship, J. W. Sullivan 5c.
Trials and Triumphs of Labor. G. B. de Bernardi. 190 pages. 20c
The Grant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
The Bible God. Bible Teachings and selections from the writings of scientists. Mrs. M. M. Turner. 10c.
The Gods of Mirule. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.
Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 5c.
Social Evolution. Benjamin Kidd. 340 pages. 20c.
The Evolution of the Class Struggle. William H. Noyes. 5c.
The Infidelity of Ecclesiasticism. A menace to American civilization. Prof. W. M. Lockwood. 5c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls, 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry, 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DR. FOOTE'S NEW BOOK.

THE HOME CYCLOPEDIA OF POPULAR MEDICAL, SOCIAL, AND SEXUAL SCIENCE.

Contains a full, plain, and easy reading treatise on "Health and Disease, with Recipes," all the average reader can probably learn of personal hygiene and common diseases (including special, separate chapters for men and women); all right up to date and fully illustrated with hundreds of photo-engravings and chromo-lithographs. Contains also the already popular "Plain Home Talk" about the relations of the sexes and social customs in all ages and all countries, with "original and startling" suggestions for social reforms; newly revised, enlarged, and well illustrated. All in "heart to heart" plain home talk from a clear-thinking, plain-speaking, liberal minded medical author of over forty years experience. Nearly 1,000,000 of his former books sold. A curious book for curious people, and a sensible book for every one. Answers those delicate questions one would like to ask his regular physician and yet doesn't want to.

1,248 pages, 400 illustrations, 8 in colors, 24 recipes. Price, Cloth bound, $2, mailed. Address Lucifer Office, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
v.5, no.37
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 37. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, SEPT. 28, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 884

PAST AND PRESENT.

In the smiling land where the Tiber flows
On its winding way from the mountains down,
The sun of a far-off day arose
On a seven-hilled city of past renown.

It shone on pillar and tower and arch,
On church and temple and statue fair,
On a mob of black-robed priests who march
To a chosen spot in a public square.

It sees the man they have brought and bound,
It sees them driving the martyr's stake,
And while they are piling the fagots round
Their curses and maledictions break.

We look, and the cowled and howling crowd
Of Roman ruffians and Romish priests
Scowl dark on their victim, angry-browed,
With the brutal passions of savage beasts.

No friend is present to take his part,
Nor venture the protest of groan or sob,
Save that some woman of tender heart
Weeps low at the outskirts of the mob.

The hands of assassins have lit the fire,
But the martyr, erect, unawed, unbowed,
Looks out from the smoke of his funeral pyre
Serene as the stars look through a cloud.

The deed is done, and the crowds disperse,
And Bruno, the noble, once more is free,
For the waves of the Tiber, a somber hearse,
Flow down with his ashes toward the sea.

Ah, this was Rome when the church had power,
And owned the soil that the patriot trod;
This was the bloom of the papal flower—
Yea, this was Italy under God.

But the sun shines still, round goes the world,
And another era has dawned on Rome;
The vicar of Christ from the throne is hurled,
And the land of the popes is the free man's home.

On the spot where Bruno died that day
A marble statue confronts the eye,
While the priests in their cloister curse or pray,
And bemoan the worth of a time gone by.

And Italy's sons, while the Tiber flows,
Will guard that statue from break or fall,
And Bruno's lovers shall fame disclose,
As the noblest Roman among them all.

Ah, this is Italy, free at last
From the curse of the sacredotal clan;
Undoing the crimes of a brutal past,
Lo, this is Italy under Man.

—George E. Macdonald.

All extremes cure themselves, for, when matters get pushed to a point where the balance of things is in danger of being disturbed, a reformer appears and utters his stentorian protest.—Elbert Hubbard.

The Industrial Goal.

The following paragraphs are taken from "The Economics of Anarchy," by Dyer D. Lum. As a rule, we do not occupy much space with the discussion of Anarchism, Socialism, or any other economic or industrial theory. But as Anarchism is so much maligned, misrepresented and misunderstood at present, we think it well to call the attentionof our readers to the works of the qualified exponents of that social theory. In Mr. Lum's pamphlet the chapter titles are: Fundamental Principles; Free Land; Free Labor; Free Capital; Free Exchange; Mutual Credit; Emancipation of Credit; Industrial Economics; Insurance or Security; Digression on Methods. L. H.

The history of nations shows us that enforced "law and order" has prevailed largest where there existed similarity of interests. The irruption of the barbarians into Europe destroyed the unity Rome had so laboriously established by causing diversity of aims between conquering and conquered peoples. Such countries as England and France attained partial equilibrium long before Spain, with its mixture of Basque, Celtic, Gothic, Moorish and Jewish subjects, and in whom both religion and natural traits kept alive diversity, which while the result of militancy became the cause of its continuance to preserve the conquerors amid warring factions. Where interests were so diametrically opposite and each seeking vantage ground, where the strong hand could alone preserve the semblance of order by the subordination of all individual interests to those of the State, peace—the condition of industrial progress—could not obtain. Fusion by conquest could not obliterate distinctive characteristics founded in race. Might could silence, but not eradicate them. Discontent might not find expression, but the embers were kept smoldering beneath the ashes.

In the present form of society we find diversity, but of classes rather than of races. While we have no State-created class of priests nor nobles, while all men are theoretically declared "equal before the law," we see unmistakable evidence of radical diversity of interests leading to internecine strife, a diversity that manifests itself in countless ways provoking discord and struggle. This strife is no longer either religious or political in its nature; those issues are of the past, our records report no Praise-God-Barebones' parliaments nor constitution-maker Sieyes' conventions; those issues were long since threshed. The contest of the present is industrial, and it behooves every thoughtful person to seek out the cause and ponder over the character of the remedies so freely advertised for its cure. Progress requires diversity, but order can never result save as

Per
HX1-937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.37

adapted to, not checking, progress. "Progress and Order," rather than "Law and Order," is the demand of the industrial type of civilization.

Reliance upon militant measures, trying to curb industrial discontent by legislative coercion, is reactionary in character. However disguised in twilight mixtures, it is the spirit of the old regime seeking to dominate the new; as vain as seeking to check an exhaustless flow of water by damming the stream. The remedy cannot lie in enactments, in the organization of systems, in return to simplicity of structure, for industrial civilization demands plasticity of forms, which "the law of equal freedom" alone gives, while organization, on the other hand, ever tends to rigidity. As in the physiological realm hybridity ever characterizes unlike organisms, so in sociology no successful progeny has ever resulted from compulsory intermingling of diverse classes; but where, as in sociology, the diverse classes are such because of chartered privileges, involving correlative restrictions, abolition can alone prove remedial. The sacerdotal and noble classes were destroyed as ruling classes, but today they stand behind the burgher class, animating it with their inherited antagonism to plebeian interests. When Caesar conquered Greece, he subjugated Olympus, and the gods now measure tape behind counters with Christian decorum. It is useless to seek to domesticate conquered classes for reproductive purposes; it is only in their extinction, the equalization of opportunities, by which divers classes cease to exist, that relief can come. Privilege, though not symbolized by tiara and crown, still survives and is the soul of the prevailing economic system, a new incarnation of the ancient fetich. Hence the present contest.

Industrialism means the direction of human activities to conquest over nature, and only by the complete eradication of the militant theorem can the ideal ever become real. From compulsion, artificially induced, to voluntary co-operation, naturally evolved, the star of progress leads, and no method of reform embodying any of the elements of the first will answer the end, for in so far as it does it contains the seeds which lead to fixity and choke plasticity. It is not by looking backward to regimentation, but forward to free contract, that the goal will be seen. Whether it be a Bismarck granting State pensions to aged workmen, France and England extending collective control over industrial activities, twilight schemes for instituting liberty by shifting tax burdens, or an appeal to a count of noses by which political alchemy will transform diffused ignorance into concrete wisdom, it is ever putting new wine into old bottles, an attempt to retard day by organizing morning twilight as a permanent condition for ever-varying needs. Voluntary co-operation needs no "direction"; self-interest alone will determine its rise and adaptation, for where the social demand is the supply then must follow. No matter how "advanced" a project may be vaunted to be, in so far as it incorporates militant direction, denies individual secession, forbids ignoring the State, be it of what form it may, just so far is such project looking backward when tested by the law of progress, and consequently in disagreement with the requirements of the future. Free contract (once declared utopian in all relations) either is or is not the ideal of industrial civilization. If it is, there can be no permanent halting place between these antagonistic lines, notwithstanding metaphysical doctors attempt it in Single Tax and Nationalism. Statecraft may dictate the straddling policy of Ensign Stebbins, who announced that he was "in favor of prohibition, but agin' its enforcement"; or priestcraft direct attention from present ills by preaching resignation coupled with post obit drafts on the Bank of New Jerusalem; but the social student should ever keep his gaze on the ideal end, and with voice and pen advocate such measures only as will not only tend thitherward, but which will remove rather than preserve obstructions. Neither in plethoric nor emasculated tariffs, prohibition, inspection of factories, mines, ships, houses, bakeries, and markets; not in compulsory education nor vaccination, nor of ballot prayer-mills, etc., lies the remedy. These and countless others are but makeshifts to reconcile the new with the old, twilight propositions of those whose eyes do not perceive the beauties daylight alone can fully reveal. They are based on the retained superstition that State authority has no assignable limit, and, demanding for it blind faith, it is a survival of past forms of thought, a diluted phase but lineal descendant of the old dogma that "the king can do no wrong," and involving the fiction of "divine right" in the maxim "vox populi, vox dei," spread out to cover half the whole plus one! Power no more resides in a definite number than in one, and all alleged "reforms" based upon this superstition derive their weapons from the armories of militancy, from the Bismarckian right wing down to the collectivist left wing of Tax-shifters and Nationalists.

* * *

So far we have endeavored to show that the course of progress in social affairs is from the militant type to the industrial, from regnant authority to individual sovereignty, from compulsion to voluntary agreement, from fixity to plasticity. If this be the goal, and this is the foundation stone of Anarchy, we must ascertain why obstacles meet us at every turn, why the law of equal freedom is inoperative, why abstract equity is summoned to give way to concrete privilege, in what forms militant measures still reign. We must seek where privilege still lingers entrenched, in what their correlative restrictions consist, and how they promote discord requiring the exercise of arbitrary force to preserve things as they are and thus subordinate progress to uniformity. We should always seek to first determine what is equitable, then the nature of the difficulties to be overcome, and the desirability rather than the feasibility of attaining such ends. The "practical man" is not the temporary adjustor of relations on false bases. When demands are aligned with progressive development, when ideas are based upon fundamental principles of social rectitude, we may well leave fears of their application to the time-saving crowd whose vision cannot penetrate the twilight. If history shows that in all social evolution ideas have ever worked down from the brain of the thinker to the muscles of the restricted, if the John Browns have always followed the Garrisons, shall we denounce the ideas or the obstacles which prevented their application? Or favor the ideas and be "agin" their realization? Let us consider what these obstacles are. And here we are brought to the consideration of Economics, which dominates the thought of the century and determines the nature of all systems, of all laws, of all institutions.

Superior to Fate.

I have, like other people, I suppose, made many resolutions that I have broken or only half kept; but the one which I send you, and which was in my mind long before it took the form of a resolution, is the key-note of my life. It is this—always to regard as mere impertinences of fate the handicaps which were upon my life almost at the beginning. I resolved that they should not crush or dwarf my soul, but rather be made to "blossom, like Aaron's rod, with flowers."—Helen Keller.

From My Point of View.

BY LILLIAN HARMAN.

"The king is dead, long live the king!" Such has been the cry times without number, and on innumerable occasions will it be re-echoed. Men die; but the king, the president, never dies. Only a man crazed by sectionalism, as Booth; by religious mania, as Guiteau; by a mis-called "Anarchism," as Czolgosz,—would dream for a moment that in striking down the official head he could materially change the conditions of the government. If one-half the presidents and kings were assassinated, still would there be found men eager to take their places, unterrified by the fear of death. Every day thousands of men are placing themselves in positions hazardous to their lives—often for a mere pittance. What folly, then, to expect the fear of death to deter men from becoming rulers of great nations! And it is equal folly to expect to frighten would-be assassins with the certainty of death in any form—even by torture. All such assassins have suffered death or worse than death, and doubtless at the time of committing the act were in a suicidal as well as murderous frenzy.

* * *

It is probable that very few, if any, of the people who are hysterically shrieking against "Anarchy" have even the faintest conception of what Anarchy really is. The confused conception in their maddened minds is that an Anarchist is one who wishes a sudden overthrow of all present institutions; that he goes abroad, raving, with dynamite bomb and revolver, to kill all who do not agree with him. Much that I read in the newspapers now-a-days, brings back a recollection of my childhood.

I was born a few years after the close of the war, and in my early childhood naturally heard a great deal about it, and particularly about the question of slavery, both my father's and mother's families having been strong abolitionists. More plainly than the cartoons of yesterday, in memory I can still see one which I studied closely when a child.

The picture showed the bare interior of a negro's cabin before the war. A fat black "mammy" is seated, holding by the arm a terrified, half-naked little "pickaninny," whose rolling eyes seem ready to start from his head in fear, as she says: "Now, den, Julius, ef yer aint a good little nigger, mudder'll call de big old Bobolitionist and let him run away wid yer!"

A Touch of Nature, Again.

The class in Pedagogy at the Boulder Chautauqua is assembled, note books in hand. Intelligent teachers, one or two hundred of them, including students of human nature past the half century mark,—ministers, artists, workers in divers intellectual lines. "Darwin" is the subject under discussion by a noted educator, and the development of mental faculties in the blind and deaf (consequently dumb) are clearly set forth. Pencils are busy; fans wave gently; the mountain breeze blows softly through, and the restful pines are in full view from the windows, climbing, climbing to the sky.

"O yes," says the genial doctor; "there are many fine minds among these unfortunates, and a few have been developed to an extraordinary degree. And sometimes, (a tender note in his voice) they love one another—but—they ought not to be allowed to marry."

"Why can they not marry?" ventures a gray-haired woman who eagerly listens.

"Why?" says the doctor, "the interests of society"—

"How can their marriage harm society?" pursues the steady voice.

"Why"—the speaker turns toward the enquirer—"the children, you know"—

The clear voice answers earnestly, "They can marry without propagating."

"Eh?" (as if he said, Do I hear aright?) The doctor advances a step; in his right hand his eyeglasses suspended before his brow—in his left, his references—his massive jaw drops—

"Well," he exclaims "if you know how——" a pause, the rotund form turns aside slightly bent, the few typewritten pages in the left hand are held before the face while a perceptible tremor of laughter crosses the broad shoulders. Other shoulders move mirthfully, irresistibly, pencils are suspended, fans raised, while a few necks are craned in the direction of the voice. The gray-haired woman sits cool and composed.

All is over in a moment. A voice comes from the back of the hall by the stairs, "Doctor, I think we ought to go on with the lesson. We are wasting precious time—our hour is nearly out." It is the well-modulated voice of another professor—member of the faculty of another college, and her hour comes next. The honorable president, recovering, resumes the answers to the questions on his paper, the breeze rises playfully, and though the recognition of a touch of nature is still betrayed by bent heads and quivering shoulders, and though the half question wrung from him in surprise is received in silence, there will be research,—and souls go marching on.

"You ought to have been pitched out the window," says the woman professor next day; "and the doctor after you!"

And yet she believes in the nude in art!

Fort Collins, Colo. ALBINA L. WASHBURN.

The true incident noted, of the Boulder Chautauqua serves again to point a moral in the direction of sex-education. If by accident it is touched upon in an educative assembly, at once there is abundant proof that none are ready to consider it seriously or to admit its claims among other studies. Instead of this the experienced see only a good joke, while the inexperienced find but horrible indelicacy and cause for blushes and anger. And yet a large proportion of these same people will in private conversation admit their ignorance of this confessedly all-important study and their own cowardice induced by false teachings.

Said a teacher to me, "I have sought everywhere for these facts, yet whatever I read seems always to stop short of the things I want to know—just the truth about the human body."

I sought the learned doctor's family tent to loan him "Karezza" but it was deserted; he had gone to fill other engagements in the city. A. L. W.

If Love Abide.

If love abide, misfortune may
Upon us heavy burdens lay,
  Yet, we, dear heart, shall bravely share
  The suffering, the toil and care,
Nor vainly adverse fate inveigh.

The skies may turn to threatening gray,
Glad song and laughter die away,
Yet we shall not for long despair, If love abide.

Capricious fortune may betray,
And friends forsake us day by day;
  Yet, even so, life may seem unfair—
  'Twill not be marred beyond repair,
Nor will all joy be dead for aye, If love abide.

—Margaret Manning.

SPECIAL PREMIUM OFFER.

Old, Yet Ever New,

Are Ibsen's master works, "Nora; a Doll's House," and "Ghosts." We have just purchased a large stock of these works, handsomely bound together in cloth, on terms which enable us to offer them as premiums with yearly subscriptions to Lucifer.

This is in no sense a cheap edition. The paper is fine and heavy, type large and impression clear; binding beautiful and substantial. A handsome and dainty volume either for your own library or as a gift to a friend.

We will send a copy of this book post-paid, to any address as premium with a paid in advance yearly subscription to Lucifer. If any subscriber who is in arrears wishes to take advantage of this offer he may do so by paying his arrearage, and sending us $1 for the ensuing year.

This is the very best premium offer we have ever made, and we would not now be able to make it were it not that the books were sold at bankrupt sale.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

884.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Meaning of the Pageant.

Since our last Lucifer went to press the greatest funeral pageant ever seen in this country, if not the greatest ever known in the history of the Anglo-Saxon race, has come and gone. Besides the public demonstrations of grief the private or household tributes of affection and honor for the dead President were such as were never heard of before.

Without attempting a description of these public and private tributes to the memory of the late William McKinley I wish rather to briefly consider the ethical meaning, the political import, of these phenomenal, these wholly unprecedented demonstrations. To sum the matter up in one short phrase, the public and private tributes of respect, of honor and affection paid to the memory the departed ruler, mean first and chiefly—

THE TRIUMPH OF IMPERIALISM!

Admitting for the argument that William McKinley was a model man in all the relations of life—as citizen, as husband, as father, as friend, as lawyer or member of any other profession or vocation, it must be admitted that such honors were quite out of place in a land of so-called republican simplicity and equality.

Neither could all this phenomenal demonstration have been caused by the fact that McKinley was the REPRESENTATIVE of eighty millions of free and independent people, since, as representing others, he could expect no greater honor than the individual persons he is supposed to represent. If he was a representative American citizen his funeral should have been in accord with that idea, which, as I understand it, means the ABSENCE of, the negation of, the pomp and display commonly associated with the monarchies and aristocracies of the old world.

What then? Simply that we are forced to the conclusion that these funeral honors typify and symbolize the changed American ideals. Honors paid to McKinley are not honors paid to the man, the citizen, or the representative of Republicanism—in its true meaning, that of a COMMONWEALTH in which all are equal—but honors paid to the chief IDEA for which the McKinley administration stood sponsor.

That idea, that principle, that standard of action, or goal of ambition, as we all know, was political EXPANSION, territorial ACQUISITION, commercial AGGRANDISEMENT, adoption of the tactics of England in India and South Africa, of Russia in Asia, of Spain in the days of its emperors—in one word, IMPERIALISM.

The obsequies that put away from sight the mortal remains of William McKinley, may be said, in no highly strained figurative sense, to have buried also about all that was left of the old ideas of republican simplicity and equality of rights for all and special privileges for none.

M. H.

Anarchy on the Boulevards.

The following paragraphs are selected from a prominent Chicago daily, showing that sympathy with Anarchy and its teachers is not confined to the saloons and the slums, as is commonly supposed:

On the subject of anarchy it is worth while to inquire: How many of the good people of the United States have aided, encouraged, associated with, entertained and exploited the person known as Prince Kropotkin?

This particular anarchist, or nihilist, was expelled from Russia and later found refuge in France, where, for his connection with a conspiracy involving a dynamite bomb, he was sentenced to prison. Since his liberation he has conducted a dilettante propaganda of anarchism in the parlors and drawing-rooms of such people of wealth and respectability in various enlightened nations as cared to entertain him.

This prince has been in Chicago. How many people who denounced anarchy and the works of anarchy made much of him? How many deluded themselves and others with the idea that there was some new and reasonable philosophy in his teachings? How many closed eyes and ears and consciousness to the fact that his doctrines were the same as those of Spies and Engel and Fisher? How many were beguiled and befooled because he called himself a prince?

Prince Kropotkin, who was made so much of in this city by various respectable people, has the same record in Russia and France that any other destructive anarchist has. He is not tolerated there. Why should he have been tolerated here? Unless the people who entertained him are themselves in sympathy with his ideas, there can be no reason unless it be that he is a prince.

Emma Goldman, John Most and Leon Czolgosz are no more pronounced in their anarchistic creed than is Prince Kropotkin. The people who are proposing to hang everybody who has had conversation or correspondence with these creatures should have a care, for by the same logic they will be compelled to hang a lot of very fine people who have made much of Kropotkin—as bad an egg, anarchistically speaking, as there is in the entire lot.

Prince Peter Alexievitch Kropotkin, who has been much talked of since the attempted assassination of President McKinley because of the claim that it was his teachings that influenced Leon Czolgosz, the would-be assassin, was an honored guest in this city for several days during the month of April. During his stay he met hundreds of men of wealth and learning and gained entrance into several homes of society, besides meeting its representatives at several functions which were arranged in his honor.

At the palatial home of Potter Palmer in the Lake Shore drive the Russian exile was the guest at a private dinner given by Mrs. Palmer, and later on he was the guest of Mrs. Emmons Blaine. Among the men of letters and of business who gave the prince a hearty welcome to the city and who listened intently to the words he had to say in private as well as in public were Dr. W. R. Harper of the University of Chicago, Professor O. L. Triggs, L. E. Laflin, Newton A. Partridge, Dr. Henry Wade Rogers, L. E. Sullivan, E. P. Rosenthal and Clarence S. Darrow.

That some at least of the people named in these paragraphs, knew what they were doing is morally certain. That they fully endorsed the philosophy of Anarchism is not probable but that they were broad-minded enough to hear all sides, and that they could find good in all should shame the men who now go wild with rage against all Anarchists because of the act of one unknown man whose deed shows that he is not an Anarchist. Guiteau was a Christian; logically such. He believed that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." To save the nation from its sins he shed the blood of Garfield. Why was there not a crusade against all Christians? M. H.

Who Are Anarchists?

Among the great dailies of Chicago the "Chronicle" has earned the distinction of treating Anarchy and Anarchists with more fairness, impartiality, honesty and honor than any other. Though using these much abused and much execrated words in their popular, unscientific, unphilosophic and irrational sense the "Chronicle" has earned the gratitude and respect of all fair-minded people by such editorials as the following, which appears in its edition of Sunday, September 22:

Doubtless there are many in the United States who will cordially indorse a plan suggested in Europe for a conference on Anarchism. The idea is to send dangerous Anarchists of all countries to a remote place, probably an island in the Pacific.

At first glance this seems to solve the evil, but serious difficulties arise as to who are Anarchists, and shall every type of Anarchist be expatriated? Rev. John P. Crosser, in addressing the Presbyterian ministers, said that the Anarchy which most threatened the life of the government and its institutions was the Anarchy of the boulevard which bribed legislatures. Shall we include, then, these denizens of the boulevard in making up the lists for the island in the Pacific? And if these, why not those who defy law in evading the payment of legitimate taxes in support of the government? This negative attack on authority is little better than open violence.

And what is to be done with the clergyman who would gladly have taken the law into his own hands and killed the assassin at once? Is this defiance of law to be countenanced? And what of the clergyman who wished the bullet had turned against certain leaders in the Democratic party rather than against the chosen leader of the Republicans?

The mad Chicago enthusiasts, Pearce, Weinland, and Meyers, who would have taken summary vengeance on the Anarchists in custody in the county jail, proved their own spirit of Anarchy. So, too, did the employes of the Heywood & Wakefield Rattan Company when in their righteous indignation they would have hanged the graceless Remlick if the sane John De Roche had not persuaded them to refer the matter to the proper authority.

Rev. John A. Vance thinks Anarchy comes from Russia, and Dr. Gunsaulus would have a wall of protection against human beings with "intellects gnarled and twisted by ages of tyranny" in the old country. The fact is, Anarchy is not confined to any one locality or to any one class of intellects. It is found among the sharply intelligent, who are keen enough to defy law and gain their ends by subverting law, as it is among the most degraded, who are too ignorant to escape the law. It is found on the boulevards and in the slums, among the clergy as among the laity.

In a time like this it is well enough for each one to examine his own temper and conduct of life. It is possible he is guilty of more Anarchy than he is aware.

In its issue of September 24 the "Chronicle" says editorially:

THE "STAMPING OUT" CRAZE.

Among the worthy utterances at the Coliseum Sunday were these by Rev. Thomas E. Cox: "All history witnesses the futility of tyranny to uproot Anarchy or suppress the growth of liberty." "America symbolizes liberty, freedom of speech, freedom of worship and a free press. If a republic cannot foster these and flourish it cannot exist at all."

Such utterances are timely when the air is so full of vague and passionate clamor for the "stamping out" of Anarchy.

They are worthy of the thoughtful attention of those who evidently have no clear idea of how the stamping out is to be accomplished, and still more of those who impulsively invoke Anarchy in one of its manifestations to stamp out Anarchy in another of its manifestations.

To every right-minded person it must be gratifying to know that not all the great dailies of the big cities are joining in the mad dog cry of "Stamp out Anarchy and the Anarchists." M. H.

Unconditionally Released.

After arresting thirteen men and women without warrant and holding ten of them more than two weeks, denied the right of bail, the Chicago police admitted that they had no evidence against their prisoners, who were therefore unconditionally released. This is a case which should receive cool, calm consideration. If the police had evidence to justify the arrest of these men and women, why was it not forthcoming? Only a few days ago these prisoners were held up to public execration as being such desperate criminals that they could not be trusted out on bail; they were to be extradited and possibly executed for complicity in the murder of McKinley. They and their friends have been hounded by the police and maligned by the public press. And for what? Absolutely no charge was made against them when their cases came up for trial.

Thousands of dollars, probably, have been spent in the effort to obtain evidence against the "Free Society" workers and Emma Goldman. The police had possession of the house of the Isaaks; everything, even to the most private possessions of the prisoners was ransacked, and yet nothing to their discredit could be found. And now the question is, what redress have these people? The "Free Society" workers have lost nearly three weeks' time, and their business has been seriously interfered with. Most of the others, besides losing their time, have lost their situations; Miss Goldman, in addition to losing her time, enduring insults and physical abuse at the hands of the Chicago police, is tried, convicted and condemned in nearly every newspaper in the country, from the metropolitan daily to the cross-roads weekly. Certainly the law offers a recourse to these people. They may bring suits for damages against the city, and for libel against the publishers who have slandered them. But it must be remembered that when city officials are prosecuted they defend themselves with their victims' money—the money with which they defend themselves and carry the cases from court to court is that which we pay in taxes, and even if, after a long and expensive fight, a case is won against these officials, we, the taxpayers, bear the loss. Well may the city officials, from judges and prosecuting attorneys down, exclaim, "Heads, I win; tails, you lose!"

And thus are the Anarchists taught the erroneousness of their views; thus are they taught respect for the administration of the law; thus are they given a practical illustration of the use it provides the weak against the strong! L. H.

Somewhat Personal.

A few weeks ago we celebrated Lucifer's "Coming of Age" by a double number and by a brief history of its birth and of the trials and perils attending its infancy, its childhood and youth. Having entered upon its majority—twenty-one years old last month—its paternal guardian is inclined to ask if it is not now about time to let the youngster go it alone for awhile.

Speaking in plainer language, I mean to say that Lucifer's responsible editor and publisher is greatly in need of a vacation, of rest and change such as experience shows he cannot get, or will not take, while in immediate daily contact with the necessary grind of the office.

While claiming similarity in no other way, I am much like the great educator, Horace Mann, as to physical health. In his personal notes he tells us that having in his youth overdrawn his bank account of vital force, he had been, most of his life, "put on his good behavior"; that if he overworked one day he was good for nothing the next. In like manner I may say that owing to early indiscretions, mainly dietetic, I have had gastric and cardiac troubles the greater part of my three-score and eleven years—lacking a few days.

From long experience I have learned that if I do not take a lay off, or make a change in work of some sort, in the spring or early summer I am almost sure to have a spell of nervous prostration more or less pronounced, in August or September. In the eleven years last past I have had the benefit of three summer vacations, at the command of our paternal Washington government, which vacations, notwithstanding the many serious deprivations—lack of sunshine, lack of open air exercise, lack of proper food and congenial companionship, were probably conducive to longevity by the enforced abstention from mental labor. Out of the remaining eight of these eleven summers I took voluntary vacations during six, and thus escaped serious collapse, leaving two in which the warnings of a life-time were unheeded—that of '98 and that of the first year of the new century. Three years ago my illness was so serious that by the urgent advice of many friends I spent the two following winters and spring, in the south, and received so much benefit therefrom that I became somewhat careless, thinking I could eat, drink, and work as appetite or occasion demanded; the result being that on the morning of August 8, or about six weeks ago, without an hour's warning, my stomach "went on strike;" since which time this very important member of the "home guard" has either refused to do his share of work or has done it so badly that the body physiologic has fallen off from one hundred and forty-five pounds to one hundred and twenty-five, with as yet no indication that the loss of assets is to stop.

Other reasons that need not be named here, induce me to to ask a furlough of indefinite length from active duty on the picket line. My chief object in speaking of this personal matter now is to remind Lucifer's old-time friends, "The Old Guard," if I may be allowed the term, that if the senior editor is to have a furlough the junior, or editor and manager pro tem, Lillian Harman, will need active co-operative help from all who would see Lucifer live and grow; from all who believe that the real and permanent cure of the ills that now afflict our race, including assassinations and wars of nations and classes, must come through a better recognition of woman's primal right of control in the realm of reproduction, that is, through freedom of womanhood and motherhood.

This, then, is the chief obstacle in the way of a vacation for the old editor—old in the work but still young in years, since comparative physiology shows us that the normal span of human life is at least one hundred and twenty years, or six times the period of gowth of the body—the fear that the work will suffer in his absence, else that those who remain must be overworked. But lest any reader should infer that this is meant to be a begging appeal for financial aid, so common with editors of reform journals, I close by repeating once more that we ask not for donations but for fraternal, wisely directed co-operation, especially for co-operation such as that of "R. C. C." of Portland, Oregon, who has sent us about one hundred names of new subscribers, with the money, mainly short terms at trial rates. This is by far the best method of extending the educational work of Lucifer, and giving the paper itself a long lease of life.

M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

J. C., New Glarus, Wisconsin:—You have been much in my thoughts during the past few weeks. I have wondered if the eagerness of the police to catch somebody seemingly connected with the shooting of the president might not possibly make trouble for you as well as the "Free Society" people, but I am glad to know it has not. I cannot give you a name for a new subscriber, but I will send you a dollar just the same.

Mrs. B. B. B., Mich.:—Please send me three copies of No. 883 and one containing the article by Lucetta J. Curtis. Your selection from Mr. Tucker's address is just in time for me to send to a friend. To my thought, V. De Cleyre is just right in saying that there is much to live for. The dead love or something that was called love, played its part, filled its mission and died to make room for the next experience in our development

> My own, my own will come to me
> And good, and good 'twill surely be,
> Although a cross it seems to me,
> I'll trust and wait 'till the good I see.

Albert P. Lewis, 8 Spring Terrace, Boston:—The head of a great nation, a worthy citizen, defender of the flag and constitution in the dark days of civil war, an old and honored hero of those grand days when character, courage and honesty were of more account than birth or wealth; loved and respected by all, as husband and friend, more than President or successful politician, now lies stricken by the bullet of assassination. The seeds of crime sown by heartless tyrants in the long centuries gone by, have borne fruit, and the innocent, the free ruler of a free people must reap the harvest. It has been the past boast and glory of our republic that its executive could mingle freely with his fellows, as any other citizen, without being hedged about by bayonets and guards, like a criminal in fear of the lynch-mob, or a European tyrant in fear of the avenger. Must we go back to such conditions? Lynch law is getting more popular every day; not in the south alone but in all parts of the country. You hear of threats of lynching. An "Anarchist," murderously honest, shoots the President, and instantly sober, respectable citizens cry, "Lynch him!" and for a moment become as murderously inclined as their victim.

This crime has injured not one man alone—the President, but seventy millions of people who read and hear of the crime. A feeling of wrong and hatred for the assassin and all his class rises in their hearts, and sows the seeds of many future crimes. Virtue, honesty, charitableness and love beget their like; and crime begets crime. You cannot destroy Anarchy by killing the Anarchist. Force has never yet reformed any man. One force creates another, which in turn destroys its creator. Intelligence and kindness are the enemies of life-destroying, force-performing men called Anarchists. Education is the only force capable of wiping Anarchy from the face of the earth.

[Albert P. Lewis, see above, says some very good things—as where he speaks of the current mania for lynching and the inevitable failure of all efforts to reform men by force. But when he commends the soldiers who in 1861 went forth to "defend the flag and the constitution," he probably forgets what the flag and the constitution meant in those days. He forgets that they both stood for the right of the white man to buy and sell and torture and take the person and the unpaid labor of the black woman, the black man and their children. He forgets that every "loyal" citizen of the United States was by the flag and the constitution compelled to support and defend the "fugitive slave law," by which the slave who escaped the clutches of an inhuman master must be returned to those clutches, to be dealt with as the brutal passions, revenge, cruelty and unbridled power might dictate.

In thus saying I have no word of censure for William McKinley and other young men who volunteered to fight for the flag and the constitution. At one time I had my name enrolled for the same purpose. Then, as now, everybody seemed to have lost his head. Hate, revenge, unreasoning anger, made the people of the North feel towards their Southern brethren very much as the great majority today feel towards the men and women called "Anarchists," whether approving or disapproving the act of Leon Czolgosz. Where I then lived the "abolitionist" and "rebel," or "southern sympathiser," were about equally hateful and hated. Neither were safe from mob violence, in person or property.

And thus from age to age history goes on repeating itself. How long, O how long will it be before human beings will cease to enact the wolf and the tiger? M. H.]

Making Themselves Useful.

With the governor of Mississippi suddenly walking into the state treasury and demanding a count of the cash, and the governor of Arkansas appearing unexpectedly in a state institution to learn whether the people had been getting what they had paid for, it may be inferred that governors may some day be very useful.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Farewell Reception.

The following account of an interesting social event occurring at the home of Lucifer's old-time friends, Thomas and Tillie Lees, at Cleveland Ohio, was sent us by one of the participants therein. The occasion of this social happening was the near departure for San Jose, California—there to make their future home, of Elizabeth H. Russell, her niece, Celia Snape Hillis and her two children, Ruby and Victor.

Among Lucifer's many and tireless helpers few if any have a better claim to the gratitude and kindly remembrance of its editors and publishers than has Aunt Russell, as she is familiarly called by her very large circle of friends and acquaintances, who will doubtless, one and all, send to her and to her fellow travelers, warmest wishes for success and happiness in their new home on the Pacific coast. Such at least is the earnest and unanimous feeling that goes with them from this office. M. H.

On Monday evening August 26, a farewell reception, under the auspices of "The Good Samaritan Relief Society," took place at 1021 First Ave. Although an impromptu affair, in the absence of many of the spiritual and liberal friends from the city, at least thirty persons were present to do honor to Mrs. E. H. Russell and her niece, both being old-time workers and earnest defenders of the cause of liberalism in Cleveland. The President of the G. S. R. Society in referring to the object of the meeting, suggested that all formality be dispensed with, and spontaneous remarks from all present be made the order of the evening, and proceeded while on her feet, to pay a loving tribute to the friends about to leave Cleveland perhaps forever.

Following these introductory remarks short addresses were made by Thomas Lees, Cynthia Goodwin, Anna K. Clifford, Mary Smith, Arthur J. King, Chas. L. Watson and others, all speaking in words of earnest praise of the work done in Cleveland during the past thirty years and more by the veteran Spiritualist and Freethinker, Elizabeth H. Russell, now in her eighty-fifth year, and by her niece, Celia Snape Hillis. Short and appreciative responses were made by the recipients of these many kind words. Music and light refreshments were enjoyed and altogether this social gathering was one long to be remembered by all who participated therein.

A supplementary good bye was also tendered the travelers by many friends, when taking the train for California.

[The above has been in type two weeks or more, side tracked with much other matter. Mrs. Russell writes us that the little party reached its destination in safety, and that they are very comfortably situated at 486 S. Fifth st., San Jose, California. M. H.]

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Woolland, M. D., American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsla, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Theept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wisner). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

FRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Martian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.50.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTROLOGY!

REDUCED TO ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Subscription Price in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba	$1.00
Foreign Countries	1.50
Sample Copies	.10

NONE FREE.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For Two Dollars you can have the Sphinx Magazine one year, and a year's forecast written by Mrs. Thompson. The work will be the same that she charges Three Dollars for. This offer is made to introduce the "Sphinx" to new readers. Address

PYRAMID PUBLISHING CO.,
336 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

A Beautiful Head of Hair. For 25 cents we will send our formula for a preparation for restoring gray or faded hair to its natural color; positively promotes its growth, stops and prevents its falling out. It is not a dye, but restores the natural color and growth by supplying its proper nourishement. Prepared from herbs that can be procured in any town. Address BOTANICAL COMPANY, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

SEND the date of your birth and 10 cents and we will tell you your prospects in business and social life for one year. GOLD SEAL SUPPLY COMPANY, 131 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the Indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 285 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW; a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f#808
v.5, no.38
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 38. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 5, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE NO. 885

TWO SPIRITS.

MILITANCY.

Son of Mars! tempestuous spirit,
Cursed in every thought and deed!
Man from thee all power inherit,
Labor loses half its merit,
Serving as the tool of greed.
Thou gives force to human passion,
Animates the brute in self,
Making avarice the fashion,
Crushing love in greed for pelf.

In thy steps comes deprivation
From the land whereon we tread,
Thou gives landlords their vocation,
To place rent against starvation,
Or a grave for loved ones dead.
Turning men to rapine's measures
Wrangling christians interest seek,
And derive their greatest pleasures
Squeezing profits from the weak.

INDUSTRIALISM.

Son of Pax! From tumult turning,
Healing on thy wings are brought;
Scenes of strife and carnage spurning,
On thy altar love's light burning,
Flowery paths by thee are sought;
Waking sympathetic feeling
In the rugged breast of man,
Doom of all coercion sealing
Where thy banner heads the van.

Ever onward still advancing,
Commerce yet will yield the place
Where war's offsprings now are prancing,
Force and greed and lust enhancing,
And in equity find grace,
Step by step in man's progression
Has been heard thy quiet voice,
Bidding labor take possession—
In fraternity rejoice.

—Dyer D. Lum.

Two Epochs in Man's Progress.

Eighteen hundred years ago, the world, under the rule of the Caesars, exhausted itself in slavery, superstition, and voluptuousness. The people—intoxicated and, as it were, stupefied by their long-continued orgies—had lost the very notion of right and duty; war and dissipation by turns swept them away; usury and the labor of machines (that is of slaves), by depriving them of the means of subsistence, hindered them from continuing the species. Barbarism sprang up again, in a hideous form, from this mass of corruption, and spread like a devouring leprosy over the depopulated provinces. The wise foresaw the downfall of the empire, but could devise no remedy. What could they think indeed? To save this old society it would have been necessary to change the objects of public esteem and veneration, and to abolish the rights affirmed by a justice purely secular; they said: "Rome has conquered through her politics and her gods; any change in theology and public opinion would be folly and sacrilege. Rome, merciful toward conquered nations, though binding them in chains, spared their lives; slaves are the most fertile source of her wealth; freedom of the nations would be the negation of her rights and the ruin of her finances. Rome, in fact, enveloped in the pleasures and gorged with the spoils of the universe, is kept alive by victory and government; her luxury and her pleasures are the price of her conquests: sh can neither abdicate nor dispossess herself." Thus Rome had the facts and the law on her side. Her pretensions were justified by universal custom and the law of nations. Her institutions were based upon idolatry in religion, slavery in the State, and epicurism in private life; to touch those was to shake society to its foundations, and, to use our modern expression, to open up the abyss of revolutions. So the idea occurred to no one; and yet humanity was dying in blood and luxury.

All at once a man appeared, calling himself The Word of God. It is not known to this day who he was, whence he came, nor what suggested to him his ideas. He went about proclaiming everywhere that the end of the existing society was at hand, that the world was about to experience a new birth; that the priests were vipers, the lawyers ignoramuses, and the philosophers hypocrites and liars; that master and slave were equals, that usury and every thing akin to it was robbery, that proprietors and idlers would one day burn, while the poor and pure in heart would find a haven of peace.

This man—The Word of God—was denounced and arrested as a public enemy by the priests and the lawyers who well understood how to induce the people to demand his death. But this judicial murder, though it put the finishing stroke to their crimes, did not destroy the doctrinal seeds which The Word of God had sown. After his death, his original disciples travelled about in all directions, preaching what they called the good news, creating in their turn millions of missionaries; and, when their task seemed to be accomplished, dying by the sword of Roman justice. This persistent agitation, the war of the executioners and martyrs, lasted nearly three centuries, ending in the conversion of the world. Idolatry was destroyed, slavery abolished, dissolutism made room for a more austere morality, and the contempt for wealth was sometimes pushed almost

Per
gL937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.38

to privation. Society was saved by the negation of its own principles, by a revolution in its religion, and by violation of its own sacred rights. In this revolution, the idea of justice spread to an extent that had not before been dreamed of, never to return to its original limits. Heretofore justice had existed only for the masters; it then commenced to exist for the slaves.

Nevertheless, the new religion at that time had borne by no means all its fruits. There was a perceptible improvement of the public morals, and a partial release from oppression; but, other than that, the seeds sown by the Son of Man, having fallen into idolatrous hearts, had produced nothing save innumerable discords and a quasi-poetical mythology. Instead of developing into their practical consequences the principles of morality and government taught by The Word of God, his followers busied themselves in speculations as to his birth, his origin, his person, and his actions; they discussed his parables, and from the conflict of the most extravagant opinions upon unanswerable questions and texts which no one understood, was born theology,—which may be defined as the science of the infinitely absurd.

The truth of Christianity did not survive the age of the apostles; the Gospel, commented upon and symbolized by the Greeks and Latins, loaded with pagan fables, became literally a mass of contradictions; and to this day the reign of the infallible Church has been a long era of darkness. It is said that the gates of hell will not always prevail, that The Word of God will return, and that one day men will know truth and justice; but that will be the death of Greek and Roman Catholicism, just as in the light of science disappeared the caprices of opinion.

The monsters which the successors of the apostles were bent on destroying, frightened for a moment, reappeared gradually, thanks to the crazy fanaticism, and sometimes the deliberate connivance, of priests and theologians. The history of the enfranchisement of the French communes offers constantly the spectacle of the ideas of justice and liberty spreading among the people, in spite of the combined efforts of kings, nobles, and clergy. In the year 1789 of the Christian era, the French nation, divided by caste, poor and oppressed, struggled in the triple net of royal absolutism, the tyranny of nobles and parliaments, and priestly intolerance. There was the right of the king and the right of the priest, the right of the patrician and the right of the plebeian; there were the privileges of birth, province, communes, corporations, and trades; and, at the bottom of all, violence, immorality, and misery. For some time they talked of reformation; those who apparently desired it most favoring it only for their own profit, and the people who were to be the gainers expecting little and saying nothing. For a long time these poor people, either from distrust, incredulity, or despair, hesitated to ask for their rights: it is said that the habit of serving had taken the courage away from those old communes, which in the middle ages were so bold.

Finally a book appeared, summing up the whole matter in these two propositions: "What is the third estate?—Nothing. What ought it to be?—Everything." Some one added by way of comment: "What is the king?—The servant of the people."

This was a sudden revelation: the veil was torn aside, a thick bandage fell from all eyes. The people commenced to reason thus:—

If the king is our servant, he ought to report to us;

If he ought to report to us, he is subject to control;

If he can be controlled, he is responsible;

If he is responsible, he is punishable;

If he is punishable, he ought to be punished according to his merits;

If he ought to be punished according to his merits, he can be punished with death.

Five years after the publication of the brochure of Sieyes, the third estate was everything; the king, the nobility, the clergy, were no more. In 1793, the nation without stopping at the constitutional fiction of the inviolability of the sovereign, conducted Louis XVI. to the scaffold; in 1830, it accompanied Charles X. to Cherbourg. In each case, it may have erred, in fact, in its judgment of the offence; but, in right, the logic which led to its action was irreproachable. The people, in punishing their sovereign, did precisely that which the government of July was so severely censured for failing to do when it refused to execute Louis Bonaparte after the affair of Strasburg: they struck the true culprit. It was an application of the common law, a solemn decree of justice enforcing the penal laws.

The spirit which gave rise to the movement of '89 was a spirit of negation; that, of itself, proves that the order of things which was substituted for the old system was not methodical or well-considered; that, born of anger and hatred, it could not have the effect of a science based on observation and study; that its foundations, in a word, were not derived from a profound knowledge of the laws of Nature and society. Thus the people found that the republic, among the so-called new institutions, was acting on the very principles against which they had fought, and was swayed by all the prejudices which they had intended to destroy. We congratulate ourselves, with inconsiderate enthusiasm, on the glorious French Revolution, the regeneration of 1789, the great changes that have been effected, and the reversion of institutions: a delusion, a delusion!

When our ideas on any subject, material, intellectual, or social, undergo a thorough change in consequence of new observations, I call that movement of the mind revolution. If the ideas are simply extended or modified, there is only progress: Thus the system of Ptolemy was a step in astronomical progress, that of Copernicus was a revolution. So, in 1789, there was a struggle and progress; revolution there was none. An examination of the reforms which were attempted proves this.—From "What Is Property?" by P. J. Proudhon.

Can Love Die?

Love is a force as free and unfettered as the wind. It is as much an indestructible element of spiritual man as is the granite and marble of earth; changing forever but never annihilated; hence the assumption that love dies is not warranted by the fact that many couples who apparently were happily mated drift apart and the place called home becomes a barrenness bordering on desolation. To determine the cause of domestic infelicity, in a given case, it is necessary to be familiar with every factor in connection with it. The prime factor is the psychologic effect of ages of false teaching that has evolved a sickly sentimentalism that considers sexual hypocrisy a virtue. Next comes sex-hunger that drives the majority into wedlock. Then hypnotic influence, self-induced or otherwise, that so benumbs the perceptive faculties that the parties to a contemplated union believe that they are constitutionally and temperamentally adapted to each other. They have little, if any, opportunity to become acquainted with each other. Every effort is made to please and all friction is sedulously avoided and whether verbal or not, there is a tacit agreement to have that respect for the feelings and opinions of the other that is demanded for their own. They truly believe a marriage certificate will transform the commonplace into the ideal, and that is required to make the home happy, the world beautiful and life desirable. If this mental attitude and environment could be maintained domestic infelicity would no longer be a curse to humanity; but right here another factor should be taken into account (which they never knew, or, knowing are prone to forget) that of environment. The thinking world has already discovered that fear and hope, love and hate are powerful operatives in the realm of nature. Every one knows or should know that the only way to keep the body performing its proper functions is to contrive to keep the soul (mind) serene. And how few there are who will deny that they are affected, largely and constantly, by the action of mind in the matter about them—by the action of mind relieved of the earthly matter which only revealed it to the external vision.

Unmindful of the law of cause and effect external aid (statute law) is invoked to insure mundane blossom and what is the outcome? In the vast majority of cases the sexual repression, forced on them by the prudish ignorance of a gullible public, is replaced by a torrent of passion that tears away the mask of conventionalism and the hitherto amenities of life are dominated by the feeling of exclusive ownership. The honeymoon over, the silken tie becomes a galling fetter, worn by some in the hope of regaining the sympathy, confidence and affection so lavishly bestowed in the past, but too often worn as a gilded chain in order to gratify a morbid appetite for ostentatious display of power and place in society.

Action and reaction is the law of life, hence every intrusion upon a natural, constitutional and inalienable right—the right to own one's self—brings its own reward. Regardless of this fact husbands and wives alienate each other's affections by meddling with the private concerns of the individual, by injudicious attempts to harmonize irreconcilable antagonisms, and making demands upon each other. In nine cases out of every ten these demands are for that which under normal conditions there could be no such demand for; each would involuntarily supply the needed demand if within their power to do so; hence a demand, of any kind, is an intrusion upon personal rights and if persisted in is sure to become an irritant. Anything short of that liberty which proclaims freedom to give or withhold, to accept or reject is an intrusion upon human rights, hence any deviation from this principle, whether in marriage, or the free union, is the entering wedge to distrust, envy and strife and when aggravated beyond the powers of endurance of the individual buries love between the two so deep that Gabriel's horn will fail to arouse it from its deadly embrace.

Observation and experience teach us that many couples, at marriage, are mentally and temperamentally adapted, and for a time life is a joyous stream unfolding the angelic side of human nature, lifting them higher, making them better; then the unknown factor—change—change of the mental status and with it a higher ethical standard supervenes, and if the companion does not keep pace a gulf is irrevocably established between them. To bridge this gulf requires more wisdom, tact and perseverance than is at the command of the average individual, and the parties separate, settle down into a state of armed neutrality, or fight it out as relentless foes.

However crude these premises and conclusions there can be no denial of the fact that, marriage under state regulation and church sanctification has been weighed in the balance and found wanting, hence I have the right to infer that the theory of one man for one woman and vice versa is successfully contradicted by the fact that the majority of widows and widowers do, or, would marry again, and every virile adult has entertained sympathetic and affectional emotions towards one, two, or more of the opposite sex.

JAS. W. ADAMS.

Home, Washington.

Books Worth Reading.

How to Enjoy Matrimony, or the Monogamic Marriage Law Amended by Trial Expiration Clause, by Rose Marie. The Abby Press Publishers. 114 Fifth Avenue New York.

This little book of ninety-seven pages is intended to show that a trial limitation to the marriage contract would prevent the need of divorce, and would prevent also a large part of the crime and miseries of life. The following paragraphs epitomize the manner and scope of the book:

A large percentage of husbands and wives are happily released when death's cold hand separates them. The graveyards are the regions where the broken-hearted parent and neglected children are stowed away. The heartless wretches who have obtained their release by years of persistent neglect and cruelty are not within the grasp of the law.

Brutality of the mind, tongue, and muscle are granted in holy wedlock, Since the contract is indissoluble, there is no complaint.

There are more deaths from starvation of the heart than of the stomach in this white slavery. "Indissolubility the cause" should be carved on many a tombstone instead of an eulogy.

If dissolubility of the marriage ties were possible without scandal and without litigation, fifty per cent. of the present connubial fetters would be severed upon short notice. This would not alone relieve many of silent heart-breaking burdens, but would be the means of creating more happiness than divorcees ever do enjoy in the course of time.

The trial expiration clause amended to the monogamic marriage law would eventually exterminate moral depravity, intemperance, narcotism, degeneration, violent disposition, self destruction, some of the diseases and crime in many forms.

* * *

Twentieth Century Conduct—by Charles Wallace Silver. A book of 528 pages filled with the observations and experiences of a man who does his own thinking and who is not afraid to tell what he thinks. Here are a few of his conclusions, after giving a multitude of illustrations drawn from life as he saw it in many lands and climes; page 417:

Society is purely a desperate flirtation with the sex question.

Church organization is a social combination of greed and of vacuous forms and creeds with tentative moral conditions.

Prosperity is a diversion of the minds of people from strikes and labor unions to wars, artificial patriotism and Pecksniffian religious ostentation.

Commercialism is the degree of practical greed which varies in price and margin of profit according to the impudence, gusto of money power and the facilities for traffic in the sexuality of inferior races and peoples.

Colleges are largely stultifiers of genius, promoters of inflated vanity and producers of freaks of law, medicine, theology and politics.

His opinion of the medical profession and practice may be inferred from this paragraph, found on page 52:

"So far as pharmacies are concerned a look at one of them with all manner of fake proprietary articles with so-called scientific names is enough, when taken in connection with their advertisements, to produce all manner of fearful and dread diseases. It is only because we know that they are mostly fakes we are so little affected by the sight of them. Every pharmacist knows how the doctors humbug their patients to secure a fee and to satisfy the patient's morbid desire for medical attention. In the scientific hygienic hospitals it would be interesting to note how many cures are affected by medicine, how many by kind nursing, how many by better mental surroundings. In the case of failure to cure or of death it would be more interesting to know what percentage of failures or deaths was caused by doping with medicines, what percentage was caused by fear produced by modern medical advice, or by fear caused by patent medicine advertisements or by sanctimonious fear inculcated by parents or pastor, or inherited. In the case of institutions for the insane, on the scientific plan, the same queries apply more forcibly and the remedy of mental therapeutics is more available than any known remedy."

The foregoing books may be ordered through this office. The price of "Twentieth Century Conduct" is not given, nor that of "How to Enjoy Matrimony." The latter can perhaps be had—cloth bound, for fifty cents and the former—a large and very substantially bound book, is probably sold for $1.50.

M. H.

Freedom of conscience, unless it means freedom of the individual conscience, means nothing, for there is no such thing as a collective or corporate conscience.—Sentinel of Liberty.

We lie to our children in the interests of morality.—Grant Allen.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

885.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Sentenced to Die.

"An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life." "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed." This is the LEX TALIONIS—the law of retaliation; the law of revenge; the law by which savage man in all ages of the world has been governed.

Under this law Leon Czolgosz the slayer of William McKinley, has been sentenced to die on the 28th day of this present month. If this sentence is carried out it will show that the doctors of law in New York have not progressed beyond the ethics of savages; and all who approve the sentence of death will show that they, too, are savages at heart.

They tell us that Czolgosz had a fair trial; that he had the benefit of able counsel, and now nothing can be done but to "let the law take its course"—that the "majesty of the law" must be vindicated and justice must be satisfied. In thus speaking we show ourselves the legitimate children of savages—with crude, immature minds. We speak as though "the law" and "justice" are realities, personalities, like unto the paternal despots of the old world, whose personal honor must be guarded and whose anger must be placated by sacrifice.

If we were really sane and rational we would say: McKinley is dead; nothing we can do will bring him back to life. To kill the man who killed him will do no good; there would then be two murders instead of one. Reason and experience teach us that like produces like; that killing produces more killing. That the fear of death does not prevent men from becoming murderers. That killing—except strictly in self-defence, is a mania, a self-repeating mania, and that hence the only rational way to prevent future murders is to STOP KILLING, and stop it NOW!

I have all the while maintained that Czolgosz is insane, or was insane when he shot McKinley. His statement in court when sentenced to die, confirms that view. Here is the report, and inasmuch as the trial was public we may reasonably presume that this report of what the condemned man said is approximately correct:

"Tell the people I am sorry I did it. It's too late to do me any good to say this now. So you may believe it. It was a mistake. It did nobody no good. I can't see why I thought it right to shoot the President. What I said to the judge in Court today is true. There was nobody with me. One thing more I want to tell you. I would give my life, if it was mine to give, if it would help Mrs. McKinley; that is the saddest part of it. But what's the use talking about that now? The law is right, it is just, it was just to me and I have no complaint, only regret. I don't know where I got my ideas. I got an idea and thought it was right, now I know it was wrong. Well, I have done all the harm a man could. It's no use talking and it will soon be over. That is all the consolation."

"There was no one else but me. No one else told me to do it, and no one paid me to do it. I was not told anything about that crime and I never thought anything about the murder until a couple of days before I committed the crime."

When Czolgosz says he doesn't know why he did the shooting he acknowledges that his act was that of an unsound mind, an irrational mind. If to plead the "baby act" would help him out of his trouble we might suppose this plea to be insincere, but the prisoner seemed fully aware when making it that it could do him no good.

His talk in court confirms the view that Czolgosz is a Christian, in theory at least, and not a rationalist—not an Anarchist, since all philosophic Anarchists are rationalists. He speaks as a "penitent" before his "confessor," as one who hopes for the forgiveness at the bar of "heaven" which he now knows the courts of earth will not grant him.

NO ONE BUT HIMSELF.

His statement, in view of certain death, confirms the oft repeated accusation that the reports in the papers that the assassin implicated Emma Goldman and others, are wholly false, made for the express purpose of inflaming the popular mind against the teachers of Anarchism. "I don't know where I got my ideas," gives the lie direct to the statements of Chief Bull—a very appropriate name it would seem—that he had important evidence implicating the Chicago Anarchists and others. If this typical Bull, and the editors who helped him to create the furore against all Anarchists, had any sense of shame they would at least make an humble apology for their egregious mistake—not to say criminal blunder, since, besides causing the imprisonment of more than a dozen innocent persons it came perilously near resulting in their death by mob violence. But a proper and normal sense of shame is not to be expected in this case.

There is great satisfaction, however, for all lovers of liberty and justice in this speedy vindication of the innocent and falsely accused, by the prisoner himself, who is of course the most important witness in the case of the police and the newspapers against Anarchy and the Anarchists.

Much more might be said in comment upon this text, but our space is full. M. H.

"The Ultimate of Anarchy."

The power of the press—especially the daily press, since a large part of the people read no other, is probably greater, for good or ill, than any other single agency. Of the great Chicago dailies the "Chronicle," classed as "Democratic Independent" by its friends, has seemed most fair and rational in its treatment of Anarchism and the Anarchists, so-called, and for this reason I have quoted more frequently from its columns than from any other, and now to show how far off the mark the fairest and apparently the most honest and honorable of these dailies can be, when defining Anarchy and its objects, I herewith insert the first half of the leading editorial of last Friday's issue—September 27. Under the head, "No Legislation Needed," The "Chronicle" says:

A law journal has discovered a reason why congress should legislate for the protection of the federal executive and other officials charged with responsibility under the general government.

It is that the Anarchist dreads nothing but death and that in certain states the penalty for willful murder is only imprisonment for life. Had President McKinley been assassinated in any of those states his assassin could not be subjected to the death penalty, and, by inference, an adequate lesson would not be taught to those inclined to like crime.

It is erroneous to assume that the Anarchist dreads nothing but death. To the Anarchist reason is wholly wanting. There is no starting point from which a sane mind can proceed with an Anarchistic mind to the end of a logical argument upon any subject.

The fundamental proposal of the Anarchist is that there shall be no government on earth. The word "anarchy" comes from the Greek. The "arch" part means government or rule; the prefix "a" is privative and the combination signifies "without rule."

Every human being who adopts this fundamental believes that he or she has a natural right to do anything and everything he or she believes it right to do. There is to be no other standard, moral or legal.

Brought down to practice, it means that should A and B enter each upon a path broad enough for only one each would have the right to throw the other down the abyss if the path happened to be between mountains and they approached each other from opposite directions or either undertook to catch up with and pass the other. How shall sanity argue with insanity?

Annihilation is the ultimate of Anarchy. Were its professors logical they could annihilate themselves. If they were generous they would leave life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to their fellow men who find existence precious and its responsibilities binding.

These paragraphs show as plainly as words can express, either that the editor does not read the literature of philosophic Anarchy or that his object is to mislead his readers.

To show what the logic, the "ultimate," of Anarchy really is, let any impartial investigator read the pamphlet "Thomas Jefferson," by the late Gen. M. M. Trumbull of this city, in which pamphlet it is clearly shown that the author of the Declaration of Independence was an Anarchist—in theory though he found it impracticable to carry out his theory in practice. The world of mankind was not yet ripe for the adoption of the highest and best in the science of human government, which highest and best is well stated in the definition of Anarchy given by the "Century Dictionary," namely:

"A social theory which regards the union of order with the absence of all direct government of man by man as the political ideal; absolute individual liberty."

The world was not ripe for the practicalization of Anarchy in Jefferson's time and the privileged classes—the political leaders, the clergy and the lawyers, have taken good care since then to make Jefferson's maxim, "that government is best which governs least," still more impracticable if not impossible.

"ANNIHILATION THE ULTIMATE OF ANARCHY."

Does any man in his right mind believe such talk? It is because the logic of Anarchy is the exact opposite of this and because Anarchy is the only cult that leaves to all the right to "life, liberty and pursuit of happiness" that causes it to be so thoroughly hated and misrepresented by its enemies. The ultimate of Anarchy is well expressed by Herbert Spencer in his Date of Ethics, wherein he says:

"Each has the right to do as he pleases so long as he invades not the equal right of others;" the practicalization of which ethical maxim would remove all necessity of government of man by his fellow man, and this again discloses the true inwardness of the hatred and misrepresentation of Anarchy and Anarchists as now voiced by the press, the pulpit and by all the agencies controlled by the machinery of church and state, including, of course the public schools.

ANARCHY AND THE DEATH PENALTY.

If the "Chronicle" had said "It is erroneous to assume that the murderer dreads nothing but death," and that hence the infliction of the death penalty would not tend to lessen the crime of murder, he would have talked rationally. But because an ignorant, uneducated man—uneducated except in the lore of the Catholic church whose record is one of murder and assassination since its organization as a church, because this product of bad heredity and environment, unknown to Anarchist societies, suspected of sinister designs by those to whom he tried to introduce himself as a friend of Anarchy—because this man, Leon Czolgosz, whose brother declared him to be "too lazy to read and study," chose to seek notoriety by killing the President of the United States, the whole country goes insane with rage and fear lest their government and institutions are all to be destroyed and its privileged classes deprived of their right to rob and murder their fellowmen according to law!

M. H.

Another Arrest.

Letters from Home, Washington, inform us that three men, Messrs. Govan, Adams and Larkins, have been arrested on the charge of sending obscene matter through the mails, the offending article being an extract from the pamphlet called Prodigal Daughter or the Price of Virtue. Hitherto the reports are so meager that no definite statement can be made at this writing. Before another issue of Lucifer we shall probably be in possession of the exact statement of facts.

Send Us Names.

Lengthening nights and shortening days again invite to reading and reflection. We have a large accumulation of surplus Lucifers that might be doing missionary work among those whose minds have hitherto been cramped and enslaved by old-time superstitions. Recent public events and recent utterances of the leaders of public opinion have stirred many of these indolent minds to do a little thinking on their own account. A few judiciously selected names from each of our subscribers and readers will help us greatly in putting Lucifer's educational work where it will be appreciated. Please send them at once, and if the spirit moves to send a few stamps to help defray expense of wrapping and mailing such help will be thankfully received but the important thing is to get the names, and get them now.

From My Point of View.

Mr. H. L. Green, editor of the "Freethought Magazine," kindly recommends that "Anarchists and Free Lovers," including Lucifer, be deported to some island in the Pacific where they shall be compelled to remain "and no schools, prisons, hospitals, or any other institution established by law or allowed there," and that there shall be no government whatever. Also that a commissioner be sent there once in three months "to see that this law of the United States government is strictly lived to."

This is a brilliant idea; but is not original with Mr. Green. For many years Freethinkers have been advised to "get out" if they do not like our Christian government. As Mr. Green takes so kindly to the idea, perhaps he will agree to go to a free thought island, together with all the other freethought editors, lecturers, and agitators whose ideas are not in accord with those of their Christian neighbors. Why should Mr. Green and his fellow-denouncers of the Anarchists remain here and attempt to keep the Bible out of the public schools, agitate for the taxation of church property, etc.? No doubt funds would be forthcoming to buy an island and transportation for Mr. Green and his sympathizers. Of course we would miss them, for self-government in religion is the first step toward self-government in all things, and Mr. Green's work is quite as useful as the primary department in any school Nevertheless we would not stand in the way of his practicalizing his scheme, for we believe in individual initiative—and others would arise to do Mr. Green's work after he is gone.

* * *

In these days when the Anarchist hunt is on at full cry, there should be some way of distinguishing the Anarchist from his neighbor. Who is the Anarchist? Is it he who criticises existing institutions? Who has not done so? Is it be who advocates violent, illegal methods of punishing wrong-doing? Then are there few, indeed, who are not Anarchists, and those making the loudest outcry against Anarchists are the most lawless.

Is the Anarchist one, as we claim, whose first rule of conduct is to attend to his own business, to exercise self-control that he may not invade the right of his neighbor to attend to that neighbor's own business? Then truly are there but few Anarchists. But only through cultivating the true Anarchistic, non invasive, self-governing spirit can come "peace on earth, good will toward men."

* * *

Must Mark Twain be "stamped out" as an Anarchist? In "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" (page 163 and 164) he says: "For it could not help bringing up the un-get-aroundable fact that, all gentle cant and philosophizing to the contrary notwithstanding, no people in the world ever did achieve their freedom by goody-goody talk and moral suasion; it being immutable law that all revolutions that will succeed must begin in blood, no matter, what may answer afterward." Mr. Twain may be correct in his statemeat in regard to the past; but it does not necessarily follow that we shall not attain anything by peaceful methods in the future. It is to be hoped that we shall grow more reasonable and less violent as the race developes from childhood to maturity. Two wrongs cannot make a right; two blows do not neutralize each other.

L. H.

Notes From the Picket Line.

CRANKS AND DEGENERATES.

Occasionally a paragraph appears in the great dailies that shows a disposition to look for the remote and primary causes of acts such as that of Leon Czolgosz. The following from a Chicago daily—the "News" I think, is in point:

"Cranks and degenerates cumber the earth. They are an evil heritage that must be eradicated by justice and wise teaching under the new civilization. They may even have their uses in turning the nation's thoughts away from the material things to the problems revealed by their deformed intellects, drunk with the dregs of ancient wrongs."

Yes, if people would fight causes more there would be less need to look after their effects. From what we know of similar cases, is it not more than probable that the conjugal or home life of the mother of Czolgosz was such as to cause her to transmit homicidal traits to her offspring?

MILITANCY, COMMERCIALISM, INDUSTRIALISM.

The poem on first page of this issue, though faulty as poetry, is prophetic of the time when wars of all kinds,—including wars among the workers themselves, shall cease. At present militancy and commercialism mean much the same thing. They go hand in hand. The generals of the armies of invasion in the Philippines say, "we must hold the Philippines, all of them, because of their commercial as well as strategic advantages." Even industrialism means war.

Poets are prophets of the future, rather than truth-tellers in regard to the present. An instance of this is seen in the selected poem in last week's Lucifer, in which the writer speaks of Italy as being "Free at last from the sacerdotal clan; undoing the crimes of the brutal past—Lo this is Italy under Man!" the plain hard, prosaic fact being that few countries if any, on the globe are so completely under the yoke of priest-craft and king-craft today as is the "smiling land where the Tiber flows."

WHO LIES?

H. S. Canfield writing to the "Chicago American" from Buffalo, New York, Sept. 23, said the face of the assassin as he sat in the dock awaiting his trial and sentence, gave the lie to the statement of Isaak and Fox that Czolgosz impressed them as a "spy," when seen by them in Chicago. Canfield thinks Isaak and Fox are deliberate liars, and Czolgosz a much injured man, by such imputation.

Let us see: If Czolgosz had been a true friend to Anarchy and Anarchists, why should he try to involve Emma Goldman and her work in the odium and the peril consequent upon his attempt to kill McKinley? If he had been, as suspected by Isaak, a traitor and a spy he could not have served his purpose better than to kill McKinley and say Miss Goldman prompted him to the act.

The trouble with Canfield is that he belongs to that class of human parasites known as "space writers" on the great dailies. He gets paid by the space, by the number of inches, he can fill with matter that will tickle the unreasoning masses and bring patronage and money to the publisher. Like the paid lawyer he uses his brain powers for the fee he is to get if he wins the case of his client.

Just now Canfield knows that the populace is hungry for blood; stirred to madness by the inflammatory appeals of the clergy and the subsidized organs of plutocracy and of imperialistic power—who all know their privileges would be gone if every man could be his own priest, his own lawyer and governor, such articles as that of Canfield are eagerly welcomed, and, inspired by them, such leaders of Chicago society as Pearce, Weinland and Meyers called loudly for volunteers to hang the imprisoned Isaak, Fox and others, against whom nothing whatever had been proved.

Again I ask, "who lies?" and if in answer to these appeals to lynch law the mob were to hang innocent prisoners, who is it that would be morally responsible for their death?

EDITORIAL COURTESY.

"Office of 'Freethought Mazazine,' 213 E. Indiana St. Chicago, Ill., Sept. 24, 1901.

"Editor Lucifer, Gents:—For reasons which it is not necessary for me to state I wish to discontinue the exchange of our publications. Yours &c. H L. GREEN."

As this request is the first and only one of its kind received by us in our twenty odd years of journalistic experience I think it well to make a note of it, and to say to our brother editors everywhere that if for any reason they wish to discontinue exchanging their papers for ours they will oblige us by stating their reason for so doing. We aim at excellence if not perfection in our work, and one of the most important aids to the attainment of excellence is contemporary criticism. We want to know our faults, so that we may correct them.

Speaking for myself alone I regret this unneighborly move on the part of Neighbor Green. The "Freethought Magazine" will be missed from our exchange table. Notwithstanding differences in views between its editors and ourselves we have found much to commend in its pages. Many of its best contributors are writers for and earnest supporters of Lucifer. The ultimate aim of both publications is, presumably, the same—the advancement of human happiness through the removal of ignorance and error. Then why should we not be mutually helpful?

As well as I now recall, the request for exchange came from Mr. Green himself, some fifteen years ago or more, and when prison bars he asked for my photo and the privilege of reproducing it with a sketch of my life, in his magazine; frequently has he asked us to advertise and handle his pamphlet literature, and once he called in person to arrange for that purpose—all of which requests we have honored, in a spirit of co-operative and neighborly good will.

But while much preferring good fellowship an al exchange with all men, Lucifer will probably survive the deprivation of the accustomed visits from the "Freethought Magazine." The world is wide, and all men are not built alike. For myself I should welcome exchange with a magazine edited and published by the Roman Pontiff, the "King of the Cannibal Islands," or even the fabled "Prince of Darkness" himself. I would like, for instance, to know whether the climate of hades has not become more temperate since the times of Eusebius, John Milton or Dante. Then I would willingly "Ex" with Prince Michael, Beelzebub's ancient adversary, and learn, if possible, whether there have been any recent insurrections inside the "jasper walls," or whether some half-crazed malcontent has not attempted to assassinate Heaven's paternalistic and partialistic ruler.

Well, Good-bye, Neighbor Green. Personally I wish you well, whether you choose to travel the broad gauge route that leads onward to universal brotherhood, or the narrow gauge line backward to the camps of the suppressors of thought and of speech—again, Good-bye.

M. H.

Helen Wilmans, the Mental Science healer, editor of "Freedom," Sea Breeze, Florida, is having a little experience with the postal department. She, together with C. C. Post, her husband, and C. F. Burgman, her son-in-law, were arrested charged with fraud. They were released on bond, their case being set for trial in November. Now the department at Washington has ordered Mrs. Wilmans' mail held, pending investigation. "Freedom" is still published weekly. The "fraud" with which she is charged consists in her claim to cure diseases by "mental treatment."

In the meantime, the bones of "St. Anne" and other Catholic miracle workers, as well as countless other religious faith cures are doing a rushing business, unmolested by our guardians at Washington.

Appearances.

The world is still deceived with ornament.
In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt,
But, being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of evil? In religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the grossness with fair ornament?
—Shakespeare, "Merchant of Venice" Act 3, Sc. 5.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

Below are listed books and pamphlets, the majority of which have not heretofore appeared in our lists. We shall continue adding to our lists and stock from time to time and shall be glad to receive orders not only for books which we advertise but for any books procurable anywhere.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Sharples painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the setting Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Portsea town, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edges. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Sexual Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Scientific Marriage; Conception; Offspring; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Critics; Physiological Mart; etc. Printed on fine paper. Any Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1. Hion edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 320 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Spondz, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. 25. Five volumes, plainer binding, $1.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 256 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Velept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. E. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

FRIENDLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (H. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, E. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Starlette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. E. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (E. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 25c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 25c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. M. Harman. 5c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Luciter, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTROLOGY!

REDUCED TO ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Subscription Price in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba	$1 00
Foreign Countries	1.50
Sample Copies	.10

NONE FREE.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For Two Dollars you can have the Sphinx Magazine one year, and a year's forecast written by Mrs. Thompson. The work will be the same that she charges Three Dollars for. This offer is made to introduce the "Sphinx" to new readers. Address

PYRAMID PUBLISHING CO.,
336 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

A Beautiful Head of Hair. For 25 cents we will send our formula for a preparation which, used by the hair promotes its growth supplies its failing nature; does not dye, but restores the natural color and growth by supplying its proper nourishment. Prepared from herbs that can be procured in any town. Address BOTANICAL COMPANY, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

SEND the date of your birth and 10 cents and we will tell you your prospects in business and social life for one year. GOLD SEAL SUPPLY COMPANY, 182 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 231 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lea. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 171 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBF E f+808 v.5 no.39 3rd ser. 1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 39. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 12, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 886

TO MAN.

In the dark and early ages, through the primal forests faring,
Ere the soul came shining into prehistoric night,
Two-fold man was equal, they were comrades dear and daring,
Living wild and free together in unreasoning delight.

Ere the soul was born and consciousness came slowly!
Ere the soul was born, to man and woman too,
Ere he found the Tree of Knowledge, that awful tree and holy,
Ere he knew he felt, and knew he knew.

Then said he to Pain, "I am wise now and I know you!
No more will I suffer while power and wisdom last!"
Then said he to Pleasure, "I am strong, and I will show you
That the will of man can seize you, aye, and hold you fast!"

Food he ate for pleasure, and wine he drank for gladness;
And Woman? Ah, the woman! The crown of his delight!
His now—he knew it! He was strong to madness
In that early dawning after prehistoric night.

His,—his forever! That glory sweet and tender!
Ah—but he would love her! And she should love but him!
He would work and struggle for her, he should shelter and defend her—
She should never leave him, never, till their eyes in death were dim.

Close, close, he bound her that she should leave him never!
Weak still he kept her, lest she be strong to flee;
And the fainting flame of passion he kept alive forever
With all the arts and forces of earth and sky and sea.

And ah! The long journey! The slow and awful ages
They have labored up together, blind and crippled, all astray!
Through what a mighty volume, with a million shameful pages
From the freedom of the forests to the prisons of today!

Food he ate for pleasure, and it slew him with diseases!
Wine he drank for gladness and it led the way to crime!
And woman? He will hold her—he will have her when he pleases—
And he never once hath seen her since the prehistoric time.

Gone the friend and comrade of the day when life was younger,
She who rests and comforts, she who helps and saves;
Still he seeks her vainly, with a never-dying hunger—
Alone beneath his tyrants, alone above his slaves!

Toiler, bent and weary with the load of thine own making!
Thou who art sad and lonely, and lonely all in vain!
Who hast sought to conquer Pleasure, and have her for the taking
And found that Pleasure only was another name for Pain!

Nature hath reclaimed thee, forgiving dispossession!
God hath not forgotten, though man doth still forget!
The woman-soul is rising in spite of thy transgression—
Love her now—and trust her! She will love thee yet!

Love thee! She will love thee as only freedom knoweth!
Love thee! She will love thee while Love itself doth live!
Fear not the heart of woman! No bitterness it showeth!
The ages of her sorrow hath but taught her to forgive!

—Charlotte Perkins Stetson.

A main difference betwixt men is whether they attend to their own affairs or not.—Emerson.

Per 9-1937 3rd ser. v.5 1901/02 no.39

Freedom in Love.

[The following questions and answers thereto, are given as part of a public discussion at one of the sessions of a convention of "German women in Frauenstadt," as reported in a paper called "The Pioneer." Though written nearly fifty years ago there are probably many persons living now as then who are as ignorant of the real aims of the advocates of Freedom in Love as was the man named "Old Morality," and while there are a few social reformers who can now answer objectors as well as did Julie Vom Berg, the greater number are often puzzled for suitable answers. To all such I would say that Karl Heinzen's book is one of the best yet written on the subject of woman's right to self-ownership and the great wrong that is done to her and through her to the whole race of humankind, by the denial of that primal right. The second part in particular, of this work, recently translated for the first time into English, gives points of value especially interesting to those who were so fortunate as to read "The Rights of Women and the Sexual Relations" when first published. M. H.]

MR. MORALITY—One of your resolutions demands the free, unrestrained contraction and dissolution of marriage. Is that not merely another way of saying "free love?" I am astonished to see German women make a demand which even among American women has called out disgust. What would it lead to, if it were left to the option of every woman to run away from her husband as soon as he had crossed her whims, and offended her sensibilities in any way, or as soon as another one pleased her better? What would become of feminine dignity and virtue if our women could rush into the arms of another man every day? Indeed, what would become of marriage, and love, that divine theme of our songs, if all were chasing after sensual pleasures in perpetual change? Think of the moral anarchy that would be the inevitable consequence of your new institution. I must confess that I am horrified, and can hardly believe it possible that the moral sense of our German women can be put to shame by men.

JULIE VOM BERG—The gentleman's objections, which so pathetically appeal to our conscience, and are soanxiously concerned about our dignity, are most welcome. They give me an opportunity to speak openly on this subject, which even in this country is still treated with the most unbecoming prudery, and the most senseless reserve. I do not know the gentleman whom I am to answer. He need not take my remarks personally—they are aimed at the masculine world in general.

I begin with the declaration that I advocate "free love" completely and decidedly. But the expression is incorrect and ought to be "freedom in love." Indeed, can any other kind of love exist except free love? Can love be commanded or forced? Something of this sort seems hitherto to have been in the minds of our philosophers of love, who have learned their philosophy in Constantinople or Utah apparently, and who can let a slave pass as their beloved. Among all the daughters of the goddess Liberty there is none, who, according to her nature, must possess the properties of her mother in a higher degree than love. Love and free love are therefore synonymous. It ought not to be necessary to talk of free love, any more than of wet water, or hot fire. I might, however, conceive of love as not free in the sense that the feeling, the necessity, the passion that unites two beings, binds them completely, destroys their free will, turns them irresistibly away from everything else. But just because true love has this effect, exerts this power, creates this necessity, it ought no more to be hindered in its choice, by external force, than it will require external bonds to insure its permanence. A man and woman who do not love each other ought not to be united, or where they are united, they ought again to be separated; a man and woman who love each other ought not to be kept apart, and they need no external force to remain together. This is the simple statement of what I understand by freedom in love, which is the only means of securing what has now become so rare—a true marriage and happy family life. Let him who does not agree with me have the courage to postulate the opposite and declare, that those who do not love each other ought to be united, and to be kept together by force, and those who love each other ought to be separated and to be kept apart by force—both in the interest of humanity and human happiness!

Although no man in sound mind dares to make such a demand, it seems, in practice, to be the guiding principle almost everywhere. If all the considerations, whose slaves men are nowadays, would suddenly drop for only a period of twenty-four hours, not ten of the so-called marriages would exist next day. For married people and their progeny the consequences of the existing relationships of force and prostitution are truly appalling. But this same society, especially the male portion of it, never wearies of pronouncing their anathemas on freedom in love. "Free love" is a word of terror, but free prostitution has become a social institution, which is approved inside and outside of marriage by a legal license. And shall I tell you why men condemn freedom in love? Because it would be the death of freedom in prostitution! Our male teachers, who can discourse so wisely on our nature, nowhere show their incapacity to judge of our nature more than in their anxiety that freedom will lead us whither it has led them. Give woman freedom, and she will love according to her own tastes and emotional needs; give man freedom—he already has it—without giving it to woman, and he will prostitute himself according to his habit. Prostitution does not proceed from woman any more than slavery does from the slave; as the latter must be charged to the oppressor, so the former must be charged to man. "Free love" for woman signifies the end of prostitution, just as free self-determination for the slave signified the end of slavery.

"Press-Writers Notes," by the Secretary, A. C. Armstrong, Dorchester, Mass., are again crowded out together with much other valuable matter now in type. While commending the Press-Writers for advertising and helping the radical work of Lucifer, "Discontent," "Free Society" and other journals, I would suggest that they seize the present moment to get in their say in behalf of Freedom of Speech and of Press, and also to show the wickedness of taking a life for a life—as in the case of Czolgosz. M. H.

Who Are Anarchists?

"I have sympathy for any man who is the victim of such an attack," says Eugene V. Debs in an interview published in Terre Haute "Gazette," "because I am opposed to shedding human blood. But I have no more sympathy with President McKinley than I have for the innocent victims who were shot down by the New York militia at Buffalo a few years ago or the inoffensive miners who were trudging along the highway of Lattimer and were riddled with bullets in the name of law and order. I am opposed to the killing of any human being purely upon moral grounds and this applies to the assailant of Mr. McKinley as well as to his intended victim.

"Who would not a thousand times rather be the victim than the assassin in such a case? Both are creatures of circumstances, and mysterious as it may appear, both fulfill their destiny.

"The talk about throttling Anarchists and suppressing Anarchy is simply the ebullition of the hour and a waste of breath. Where shall the line be drawn and who shall draw it? There is a very large class in this country who regard Hearst and his papers as Anarchists and only yesterday this Morgan of Journalism was burned in effigy in his native state.

"And when it comes to respect for law, the poor misguided and much hated Anarchists are models of innocence compared to the great trusts and corporations that trample all law under foot with impunity and so manipulate business and industry as to bring suffering, misery and death to thousands, each of which in its own small circle is as great a tragedy as the assassination of the president of the nation.

"These are the Anarchists, who menace this country and its institutions; and just now they are filling the air with their professions of patriotism, loyalty to the flag, sympathy to the president, while behind it all they shift their own responsibility and 'hide a smiling face.'

"As long as society breeds misery, misery will breed assassination. Every now and then the poverty and desperation in the social cellar will explode in assassination at the sumptuous banqueting board on the upper floor.

"King Humbert was slain by a half-crazed creature who was born of prostitution and from boyhood the victim of poverty and all its attendant social crimes. The way, and the only way, to end Anarchy is to cease producing it. Sympathy for its victims, while creditable to the human heart, does not mitigate the evil.

"When it comes to carrying out the policy now so vigorously demanded there will be a lively time for the people, including those who propose to reform the world in a day by destroying the Anarchists who are simply the products of their miserable environments.

"It so happens that it is always the other fellow who is the 'Anarchist.' Judge Woods regarded me as one, and I had to take his word for it. If Anarchy so-called, about the meaning of which there is a world of difference even among the wisest of men, is to be destroyed by force then there will be no one left to write the story of the self-extermination of the human race.

"What country breeds the most Anarchy? The most tyrannical and repressive. What country the least? The nearest free and untrammeled.

"In the last two presidential campaigns, William J. Bryan was almost daily denounced in the editorial columns and pilloried by the cartoonists of the leading newspapers of the country, as an Anarchist. According to the new theory he ought to be deported to some Devil's Island.

"What stump orator of the side opposite Judge Baker would like to have that distinguished jurist decide whether or not his impassioned political invective on the eve of election was Anarchistic, and, if so, if he was to be exiled for life from his native land.

"The attempt upon Mr. McKinley, deplorable as it is, will prove a blessing in disguise if it teaches the lesson that while there is injustice at the bottom, there is no security at the top.'

Emma Goldman Denied a Hearing.

It is a principle in law, as well as in justice, that the accused shall be heard in his own defense. This principle, however, is absolutely ignored by the Chicago city officials in dealing with Emma Goldman. She was arrested without warrant, held a prisoner for three weeks' and then, no evidence being found against her, was simply discharged without trial or a hearing. But the police and press are determined that the people shall believe her guilty, and to that end are trying to prevent her obtaining a hearing anywhere. A hall had been engaged for last Thursday night, and she was announced to deliver her lecture on "Modern Phases of Anarchy." This was the lecture which the Buffalo Chief of Police claimed influenced Czolgosz to kill McKinley. The absurdity of that accusation must be manifest to every one who has heard the lecture, for it is simply a cool, calm resume of the history and tendency of Anarchism, and so far as it deals with methods at all, deprecates the use of violence. Miss Goldman's strongest defense is the lecture itself. Did the police know this? Possibly not; but if they or Mayor Harrison had been sincere in their effort to promote justice they could doubtless have become acquainted with the nature of the lecture before it was delivered.

After all, the futility of repressive methods must be apparent to every one but the most prejudice-blinded. I heard Miss Goldman deliver this lecture, last summer, before the Society of Anthropology. The small hall was full; but the audience probably did not exceed one hundred and fifty. She might have gone on for years delievering this lecture to small audiences; but as a result of this persecution thousands will want to hear her where tens would listen before. The authorities may succeed in silencing her for weeks and months, but the law of demand and supply will work, here as elsewhere, and "Modern Phases of Anarchy" will be read, if not heard, by thousands who, but for her persecution, would never have heard of Emma Goldman.

The treatment which Miss Goldman and the other Anarchists have undergone at the hands of the Chicago police brings to mind Æsop's fable of

THE WOLF AND THE LAMB.

"Once upon a time a Wolf was lapping at a spring on a hillside, when, looking up, what should he see but a Lamb just beginning to drink a little lower down. 'There's my supper,' thought he, 'if only I can find some excuse to seize it.' Then he called out to the Lamb, 'How dare you muddle the water from which I am drinking?'

"'Nay, master, nay,' said Lambkin; 'if the water be muddy up there, I cannot be the cause of it, for it runs down from you to me.'

"'Well, then,' said the Wolf, 'why did you call me bad names this time last year?'

"'That cannot be,' said the Lamb; 'I am only six months old.'

"'I don't care,' snarled the Wolf; 'if it was not you, it was your father;' and with that he rushed upon the poor little Lamb and—ate her all up. But before she died she gasped out—'Any excuse will serve a tyrant.'" L. H.

WARRA WARRA WARRA WARRA WARRA—

Women and Modesty.

Are women less modest than they used to be? The answer to that question depends upon how old the woman is of whom you ask it.

If you ask my Aunt Priscilla, who is a maiden lady of what we euphoniously term an uncertain age, she will reply emphatically "Yes."

My Aunt Priscilla always says, at dinner, that she will take a small portion of the upper limb of the fowl. In her whole life she has never done anything so vulgar as going to bed.

She always mysteriously "retires," and when she travels she sits bolt upright all night in her section in the sleeper, with not a pin or a stay loosened, and in the morning she glares in speechless disgust at the brazen females who have enjoyed a good night's rest and who make a hurried flight from their berth to the dressing-room with their hair in curl papers and a silk petticoat flung over their arm.

To her the untrammeled freedom of speech and candid revelations of the toilette of the modern woman are little short of shameless indecency.

If you ask my niece Maud, who plays golf all day with her shirtwaist sleeves rolled up to her shoulder, and who thinks nothing of discussing the symmetry of Jack Quarterback's incomparable legs, if women are less modest than they used to be, she will answer "No."

"Women are less prudish, but not less prudent," is the way she puts it.

One thing is quite certain, and that is that we have a very different standard of modesty from the one that used to prevail.

Nobody can dispute the fact that women do many things now which would have filled the people of fifty years ago with shame and horror, but in which we see nothing to condemn.

Fancy the howl of immodesty that would have been brought against our grandmothers if one of them had ridden down the street on a bicycle, every turn of the pedal displaying a generous expanse of ankle.

Her character would have been blasted for life, yet we are merely disgusted with the prurient prudery of the person who can find anything immodest in the spectacle of a woman riding a wheel.

So far as we can judge in these degenerate days, the old idea of female modesty seems to have been a kind of feeling which a woman threw out, pretty much as a porcupine does its quills at every approach of a stranger.

It was something prickly and uncomfortable and required that she be handled with great caution.

Books had to be censored before she could read them, or she read them on the sly; plays must be guaranteed to be as innocuous as mother's milk, and conversation was maintained on a dead level of platitudes.

To mention any portion of one's anatomy was to bring the flush of shame to the cheek of one of these gentle creatures.

To speak of the plain facts of every-day life, that everybody saw about them, was to shock and horrify, and on the whole we can but think that these paragons of modesty, who saw evil in everything, must have been rather nasty-minded.

* * *

A few weeks ago the students at a co-educational institution in Ohio clubbed together and ordered a handsome cast of the Apollo Belvedere.

When it arrived and the girl students, who were apparently under the impression that Apollo was a Greek swell who wore creased trousers and a three-story collar, found that the statue was clothed only in its own beauty, they emitted shrieks of horror and fled from the room.

Now the nude in art is not immodest. It is only the immodest who find it so, and so far have we gotten from the days when women concealed the limbs of the piano in petticoats that it is genuinely shocking to hear of a class of young girls seeing anything vulgar in a masterpiece of sculpture.

As a matter of fact, modesty is too much of a matter of geography and time and place to admit of any hard and fast rules.

What is proper in one country is improper in another. Neither can any one explain why it is immodest to wear a low-necked gown on the street, but perfectly modest to display yourself in one at the opera, or why a woman will parade the beach at the seaside in a paucity of raiment that would cause her to blush herself to death if caught so undressed in the privacy of her own drawing-room.

Are women less modest than they used to be? The question is an interesting one.—Dorothy Dix in "Chicago American."

Any tyrant is willing that people should be free and happy the way he himself prescribes.—American Sentinel.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

886.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Archism versus Anarchism.

The words ARCHISM and ARCHY are seldom heard or seen in English; "government" or "rulership" being used instead, but now that Anarchism, Anarchy and Anarchist are so generally used and so generally misrepresented it is well to look after the real meaning, the origin and pedigree of these terrible words.

By reference to Donnegan's Greek and English Lexicon we find that they are derived from the Greek verb ARCHEIN, "to be first; to begin; to command; to be a chief or ARCHON"—ARCHON "a leader; a chief." ARCHE—ARCHY—is defined as "the beginning; first cause; the act of leading—hence magisterial rank." To get the derivative word "Anarchy" from this root word the prefix AN, meaning NOT, or privative, is used.

If, then, the Greek words Anarchism and Anarchist are proper to be used in English the parent words Archy and Archism are equally proper, and in order that the two opposing principles, leadership or rulership on the one hand, and equality or freedom from rulers on the other, may be clearly set forth and compared I propose to use the words Archism and Archist, as well as their derivatives Anarchism and Anarchist.

ANARCHISM A NEGATION—NON-INVASION.

From the origin of the words, then, it is easily seen that to be an Archist is to believe in leadership, rulership, or government of man by his fellowman, while to be an Anarchist is to reject rulership or leadership, and leave every man to be his own ruler, his own master, governor or king.

In the true and etymologic sense, therefore, the Declaration of Independence is an Anarchistic document, and the war of the American revolution was simply a rebellion of Anarchism against Archism, or of Anarchists against Archists. The principle that "all men are created equal," with equal right to "life liberty, and pursuit of happiness," means simply a denial of the right of some men to rule other men. To say that the ruler and the ruled are equal as to rights is a flat contradiction in thought as well as in words. The right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness implies and includes the right of every man to be his own ruler—"to do as he pleases so long as he does not invade the equal right of others," as Spencer puts it.

That this was the thought and the aim of those who threw off the yoke of Britain is easily shown from their writings, and that such was the general understanding of the basic theory of our civil codes, our fundamental laws, is readily inferred from such maxims as "government of the people, by the people and for the people"—"the people are the real sovereigns," etc., etc. This implies, if it means anything, that the people elect their AGENTS, their SERVANTS, to do their will, for to say that they elect their RULERS when they themselves are the rulers, is to juggle with words and to talk nonsense.

In fact, to the best of my knowledge and belief the idea that we elect our rulers is one of comparatively recent origin. Not till after the great civil war, not till after we began to spell nation with a big N, not till the right of peaceful separation had been drowned in fraternal blood, did we as a people begin to talk of our rulers, after the fashion of the governments of the old world.

From the foregoing definitions it is seen that Anarchism is a negation, a denial—a denial of the right of one man to rule another without that other's consent. But every negation contains an affirmation. The denial of the right to rule others is equivalent to the affirmation of the right of every man to rule himself, to own himself and to direct his own acts or efforts so long as he grants to all others the same right.

To put it in other language: Anarchism means non-invasion, while Archism means invasion, unless the subject of rule consents to be ruled.

CZOLGOSZ AN ARCHIST.

If these definitions be correct, then Czolgosz at Buffalo was an Archist, not an Anarchist, as he is said to have claimed to be. In trying to overthrow rulership he invaded the right of the MAN McKinley to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness and he invaded also the right of McKinley's subjects, his voluntary subjects, to have him for their ruler.

To kill a ruler is not to kill rulership, as it has been proved times without number, but to strengthen it manyfold by arousing sympathy for the invaded ruler and indignation against his invader.

If Czolgosz had desired to help Anarchism his act was illogical, ill-advised, foolish, INSANE, inasmuch as the legitimate and necessary result was just what we see—a tremendous accession of power to Archism, to rulership and rulers. If he was and is an Archist in disguise, or if he was hired by Archists to kill McKinley, then his act was rational, it was logical, just as some of the early Christians were rational and logical in their course when they voluntarily sought martyrdom in order to hasten the triumph of Christianity.

* * *

As a means to an end nothing has ever equalled martyrdom of its apostles in order to secure the triumph of an idea, a theory or doctrinal propaganda. It was the martyrdom of Joseph and Hiram Smith, and the driving of their followers into the wilderness, that gave to Mormonism the power and numbers it has since attained. If some zealous anti-Dowieite were to shoot the "Overseer of Zion" in his pulpit, nothing more would be needed to make this newest religious sect one of the most numerous and powerful in Christendom.

Just so with the doctrine of Archism—rulership of man by man. The tiny pocket pistol in the hand of Czolgosz at Buffalo has done more to advance the cause of Archism, of mon-archism, of imperialism, of centralized power, in this country than did all the heavy and costly armaments of war against Spain and against the "insurgent" Filipinos—just as the single pistol ball sent through the brain of Abraham Lincoln by Wilkes Booth did more to make Nationalism (with a big N) a success in the United States than did all the victories of Grant and Sherman on their many fields of battle.

Like McKinley Lincoln was an Archist. He believed in government of man by man. To save the Union, the national government, he became an invader. He invaded the soil of the Southern states; invaded the homes of the people; destroyed their crops, their stores, their mills and left their women and children to starve, besides killing thousands of their men in battle, and when the Southern half of the United States was in a manner laid waste and its regular armies all defeated or captured, then by his own death, more than by any act of his life, was the work of nationalization completed. "The blood of its martyrs is the seed of the church," is as true in the civil and political realm as in the religious.

In thus saying I wish to cast no censure upon the memory of Abraham Lincoln. If it be possible for a lawyer and politician to be a MAN—a true man, an honest man, intellectually and morally so, I think Abraham Lincoln was a man, honest and true. To condemn him for being an Archist would be to condemn myself, for all through the years of blood and terror known as the civil war I too was an Archist. Before Sumpter fell I said, as did Horace Greeley, "Better peaceful separation than a Union pinned together with bayonets—Erring Sisters, go in peace!" But when the "flag" was fired upon I too lost my head. In the name of "patriotism" I joined the Home Guards and later helped to organize a regiment and when I could not go with it, on account of physical disability, I went with the boys—my brothers and cousins, as far as I could; then volunteered to go to the front as army nurse, until I was turned back by the head of the Sanitary Commission at St. Louis, because no civilians were then allowed to pass the picket lines.

A Unionist in a slave state, an abolitionist before the war, I did not believe the forcible liberation of the slaves would be just to the masters or beneficial to the slaves themselves, but having yielded to the "majority" I worked for many years with the Republican party to help it make Archistic "reconstruction" in the South a success, and therefore repeat that I have no words of censure for Abraham Lincoln or for those who with him believed that the Union, the Nation, was of more importance than the lives and property of the citizens, whether "loyal" or "disloyal."

Neither have I a word of censure for William McKinley or for those who with him believe in the "manifest destiny" of the Anglo-Saxon race to rule the West Indies and the Philippines, and to establish an empire on the ruins of the American republic. I simply claim my equal right, as a citizen of the world, to express my honest thought on governmental as well as all other questions, and since my personal observation and experience for more than half a century convince me that it would be far better for us as a people to return to the Anarchistic principles of the Declaration of Independence of 1776, I am willing to "sink my present repute for the freedom" to think, speak, write and publish that thought, paraphrasing Lowell's immortal utterance.

M. HARMAN.

The Social Side of Anarchism.

The advocates of privilege for the few, that is, the defenders of Archism against Anarchism, assume and depend upon the ignorance and prejudices of the masses today, as they have always done. It is a matter of self-preservation with them—preservation of their privileges, and hence no one can blame them for resorting to falsehood. All is fair in war—political and social—even strategy, which is deception or falsehood.

As an illustration, take this incident: In the fall of 1856 I attended a grand rally of the "Democracy" of Indiana at Normanda, Tipton Co., at which the speakers were Thomas A. Hendricks, since Vice President of the United States, and a rising young lawyer since known as Judge Buskirk, of the same state. Of the two Buskirk was far the more eloquent and effective, and to him was given the task of closing the exercises by a fiery denunciation of the aims of the Republicans—"black Republicans," as they were then called. Said he—in substance if not in exact words:

"My friends, if you elect Fremont [the Republican candidate] you will have to accept all the abominations that begin with the word free, including free niggers and free love. This is what abolitionism means, and Republicanism is nothing more than abolitionism thinly disguised. Fremontism means the dissolution of the union of states and, logically also, it means the dissolution of the marriage bond and the reign of universal prostitution. It means destruction of family and of all that is sacred in the home life of civilized men and women. It means that a man shall be free to desert his wife and children whenever he sees a woman more attractive. In short it means a return to the morals of brute beasts"—with much more of the same sort, and the vast multitude shouted its approval of this eloquent arraignment of the social doctrines of abolitionists, as the followers of Fremont were then almost universally called.

Such were the tactics of partizanship fifty years ago, and such they continue to be, as witness the following extract from a leading editorial in the "Sunday Chronicle," (Chicago) of September 29:

> "The world has had abundant illustration of the political nature of Anarchy. Avowedly designed for destruction of all government, its advocates conspire in every part of the civilized globe to slay rulers chosen freely by the people or acquiring their sovereignty by constitutional inheritance. The social side of Anarchy is as loathsome as its political purpose is monstrous.
>
> "The miserable wretch who, having suffered no wrong, real or imaginary, at the hands of President McKinley, sneakingly seized his kindly hand in order the more effectually to assail the chief of a free people avows that he had discarded the religious teaching of his childhood, which was conservative, and had adopted in its place the doctrine of free love.
>
> "This doctrine aims as fatally at the family, the home, woman, the child, as the political creed of Anarchy at all civil institutions.
>
> "The doctrine of free love reduces mankind to the level of the beasts of the jungle as its political dogma of no government degrades mankind to the condition of savages, who are the only human beings without a form of political rule in which some direct and the majority obey."

Judge Buskirk was too intelligent to believe his own words but, as a lawyer pleading for his client, so also as a politician for his party, he felt that SUCCESS must be won—won at whatever cost to truth or fairness. In order to defeat Fremont and Republicanism Buskirk believed it necessary to keep the masses in ignorance. To keep them in ignorance it was necessary to appeal to their prejudices, to their fears, so that they would not be willing to hear or read the other side.

The Buskirk tactics won the day at the polls, and they won also four years later, by a large majority, when Lincoln was elected by a minority vote, to be President of the United States. Not till abolitionism—in name but not in fact—was made a success by bayonet and cannon, by fire and pillage, did it achieve success in any national election, and if left to the untrammeled vote of the white population at the south today, it would share the fate it did when Fremont was defeated and Buskirk's candidate was elected. Nay, more! North as well as South, ignorance and prejudice are dominant among the masses today as they were in 1856, and are relied on by party leaders as much now as then as factors of success at the polls.

ABOLITIONISM AND ANARCHISM THE SAME.

Abolitionism under the name of Anarchism is quite as unpopular north as well as south today as it was fifty years ago. In its larger and truer sense abolitionism means the denial of privilege. It means equal rights for all and special privileges for none. If this were once practicalized there would be an end of archism, an end of rulership, an end of government of man by man except by consent of the governed; and this is Anarchism pure and simple.

Must history continue to repeat itself, from generation to generation and from age to age? The editor of the "Chronicle" is doubtless too well informed to believe what he says about Anarchists and Anarchism, but he knows that the interests of the privileged classes, the Archists, are at stake and that if the Anarchistic principles of the Jeffersonian Declaration of Independence were generally adopted there would soon be an end to the class privileges that himself and his clients today enjoy.

Especially does this statement apply when speaking of the "Social Side of Anarchism," the title given to the editorial in question. It is this side of Anarchism that is most dangerous to the reign of the privileged classes, and hence all these classes join wits and tongues and pens to misrepresent and defame the social Anarchists. No falsehood is too gross, too palpable or too infamous to be used in this case.

As in most attempts, however, of Archists to perpetuate their power there is a modicum of truth in what they say; for instance: "The doctrine of free love reduces mankind to the level of the beasts of the jungle." If the "Chronicle" man had said:

"The doctrine of love in freedom elevates mankind to the level of the higher mammalia in their native forests, and to the level of birds of the upper air," he would have uttered an important truth, in fair and scientific language. The words "beast" and "jungle" have a sinister meaning, and the enemies of freedom well know how to prejudice their readers by using discredited words and phrases. In a state of nature the females of both quadrupeds and bipeds own their bodies, their reproductive powers and functions. This means and freedom of motherhood means "natural selection;" it means race improvement; it means perfection of type; it means the absence of deformities, the absence of idiocy, of lunacy, of imbecility, of inequalities and monstrosities such as we find everywhere among human beings where freedom of motherhood is denied by artificial or man-made laws and customs.

FREEDOM OF MOTHERHOOD,

From monad upward to man there was and is freedom of the reproductive instinct, resulting in race-improvement, but since man undertook to curb and defeat nature in this regard there has been no improvement, but retrogression instead, so far as type is concerned. It is well known that for symmetry and beauty of form and feature many of the so-called savages excel the self-styled civilized races; or at least they did so excel until depraved and conquered by superior greed and cunning, and by the diseases peculiar to their conquerors.

As a grandly beautiful expression of the working of love in freedom among mankind in the "prehistoric" ages—that is, in what we call the savage era of man's evolution—as compared with what the result has been since masculine man has ruled woman by cunning and physical force, I ask all readers to give a careful perusal to the poem on first page of this week's issue of Lucifer.

OUR ANSWER.

As part answer to the diatribe from which we quote I ask all who have the courage and the fairness to hear and think for themselves, to read the selection from Heinzen's Rights of Women and the Sexual Relations found on first page of this issue.

But lest any reader should say this answer is not sufficiently definite I would say that my understanding of the "Social side of Anarchism" is comprised in one word—FREEDOM!

Or in three words, Liberty with Responsibility—responsibility to self and to child; not responsibility to husband, to magistrate, to Grundy or to a priest-made god, or gods.

My understanding of social Anarchism is that every woman should be free to marry in any way she chooses, but that she should not be compelled to live with a man when she finds she has made a mistake and wishes to correct that mistake.

This means free marriage and free divorce; no taxes or tariffs to pay in either case, unless it be the cost of record when woman wishes to make marriage a commercial or a financial transaction.

Also, that every woman should be free to ignore marriage laws and customs if she so chooses, and that in so doing she should be subject to no police regulation, no penalties of any kind except such as nature herself imposes.

If this means social chaos, then we should remember that "the cure for the evils of liberty is more liberty."

As to duties and responsibilities of fatherhood under Anarchism, our limited space compels postponement to another issue. For the present I close with this addendum to the foregoing:

* * *

The most important of all rights is the right to be born well—physically, intellectually, psychically. This right finds its most impassable barrier in Institutional Marriage.

Inequalities of environment, including industrial, financial and educational advantages and disadvantages, sink into insignificance when compared to inequalities of hereditary endowment.

If men were born with approximately equal endowment of mind and body they would make short work of the laws, the financial and other institutions that now give to some the right and power to rule and rob, and to the masses no option but to OBEY!

Until womanhood awakes to a sense of its responsibility in creating a race of strong, self-reliant, self-respecting FREEMEN, the present relations of master and slave, of rulers and ruled, of exploiters and exploited, of great crimes and criminals unpunished in high places and of swift and often unjust punishment for petty crimes among the weak, the ignorant and defrauded masses—will continue.

M. HARMAN.

Law-Abiding Lynchers,

Now that we are to have a crop of new legislation to punish those who incite to, as well as those who are guilty of violence, it will be well to watch the effect such laws have on the mobs of "respectable citizens" who ignore the law. Of the 3,130 lynchings which have occurred in the past ten years not one of the mobs was composed of avowed Anarchists. "Unity," (Chicago,) pertinently remarks:

"The Chicago 'Tribune' is rendering great service to the science of government in carefully preserving the records of the cases of lynching in the United States. The figures from 1881 to 1901 show a total of 3,130 persons lynched; and of these 51 were women, 1,678 were negroes, 801 white, 21 Indians, 9 Chinese, and seven Mexicans. The high water mark of this wickedness was reached in 1892, when there were 236 put to death in defiance to the law. Although the great majority of this violence was perpetrated in the Southern states, Mississippi leading in the infamous business, there are but seven states not included in the ghastly list. And still the police are frantically hunting for Anarchists and report themselves baffled in the search."

Send Us Names.

Lengthening nights and shortening days again invite to reading and reflection. We have a large accumulation of surplus Lucifers that might be doing missionary work among those whose minds have hitherto been cramped and enslaved by old-time superstitions. Recent public events and recent utterances of the leaders of public opinion have stirred many of these indolent minds to do a little thinking on their own account. A few judiciously selected names from each of our subscribers and readers will help us greatly in putting Lucifer's educational work where it will be appreciated. Please send them at once, and if the spirit moves to send a few stamps to help defray expense of wrapping and mailing such help will be thankfully received but the important thing is to get the names, and get them now.

"FREE SOCIETY" was printed last week, but has not yet been mailed to its subscribers. Technically, when a paper which is admitted to the mails at second-class rates—that is, at one cent a pound—misses an issue its publisher must make application for entering just as if it were a new publication. Ordinarily the first issue is mailed on the deposit by the publisher of a sufficient sum to cover postage at the rate of a cent a copy. This money is refunded if the paper is admitted as second-class. Mr. Isaak was advised by a post office official to send out no papers until a decision should be received from Washington. For further information address A. Isaak, 515 Carroll Avenue, Chicago.

AS NEVER BEFORE, PERHAPS, Anarchism and love in freedom are everywhere receiving attention, judgment, condemnation and execration. Believing this to be a very opportune time to show our colors in regard to these subjects we have devoted this issue almost wholly thereto, and believing also that most if not all our readers could use a few copies to advantage we are ordering an extra large edition. The price will be one cent per copy or ten cents per dozen, for distribution. Shall we have your orders, friends and helpers?

LETTERS: Till further notice letters intended for the eye of the editor may be addressed to him at Bloomington, Illinois care Col. James Freeman. Letters on business, as usual, should be sent to Lucifer, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

"COMING OF AGE," a brief sketch of the twenty-one years of the life of our paper, together with other interesting matter, is contained in our Anniversary double number. Price, five cents.

Writing of the interest-taker, Ruskin says: "You knock a man into the ditch, and then you tell him to remain content in the position in which Providence has placed him."

VARIOUS VOICES.

G. V. Wretling, Chicago:—I inclose twenty-five cents for which please send Lucifer thirteen weeks, commencing with Sept 1. I have read several copies of Lucifer and am delighted with it, especially the editorials.

Henry Geigentasch, Vinton, Cal.:—Through the kindness of the San Francisco "Examiner" I have received a copy of Lucifer. I enclose $1 for subscription to Lucifer and fifty cents for The Evolution of Modesty, The New Hedonism, The Unwomanly Woman, and Our Worship of Primitive Social Guesses.

F. Radick, New York:—I was pleased with Lucifer No. 884 because it was almost wholly devoted to the much decried and fiendishly-abused philosophy of Anarchism and its exponents, though as a rule you "do not occupy much space with the discussion of Anarchism." By taking this course at this critical time you have proved yourself the champion of the truth and of the down-trodden. You may rest assured that you have not compromised yourself in the least. Every fair-minded person must inevitably voice the same sentiments. Enclosed is $2 for Lucifer with "Nora" as premium, and the inclosed list of pamphlets.

T. F. Lee, Lakeport, Calif.:—I wish to say Amen to your article in Lucifer No. 882 entitled "The Medical Doctor Question Again." The professions, so-called, travel in very narrow lines and make slow progress until the forces outside of their pathway compel them to move on. Those inside of the limits prescribed by law are sure to cry down any one who dares to criticise or say aught against their authority, forgetting or rather ignoring the fact that knowledge can be had in any other way than their way. It is the old, old theological story of lashing people into line or you will be damned. Orthodox science is almost as bad as Orthodox Theology.

Henry C. Roberts, Bennington, Kan.:—I am at a loss to understand why Comrade C. L. James gives utterance to such absurd and groundless accusations as appear in his "Was it Honest?" in Lucifer No. 882, concerning his treatment as a correspondent and contributor.

In my estimation, nothing so enriches and enhances the value of Lucifer's columns as the relations and observations of its veteran editor, and I believe, in saying this, I voice the sentiments of a large majority of the subscribers and patrons of the paper, and if it is in order I would move that the honored editor be invited and requested henceforth to give a chapter of his interesting observations and experiences each week.

With regard to the discussion that has been continued in Lucifer for some time, to my mind it has been abundantly proven that the regulars are arbitrary, unprogressive and fossilized to an unpardonable degree.

With due respect to the erudition of Comrade C. L. James, I fear he has made the mistake of his life in undertaking the defense of a lost cause.

The slanderer is like one who flings dust at another when the wind is contrary; the dust does but return on him who threw it. The virtuous man cannot be hurt, and the misery that the other would inflict comes back on himself—Buddha.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 428 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 475 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents.

RBR
E
F4203
v.5, no.40
3rd ser
1901/02

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 40. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 16, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 887

ON READING TOLSTOI'S "RESURRECTION."

Hearken the voice that grave and low
Tells of the way wherein we shall go:

"He that hath ears, let him hear the word;
Make a path in the desert for Love, the Lord.

The earth is filled with shouting and strife;
Man wrestles with man for land and life.

You cheer the fighters, you praise the bold,
You smile on the strong as he gathers his gold,

But beneath the strugglers the prostrate lie,
Your cheers are drowning their bitter cry.

With hunger the cheek of the child is wan,
The boy grows a brute ere he grows a man.

The wanton's leer, in your city streets,
The sodden face of the drunkard greets.

From the chill and gloom of the prison cell
Break the captive's groan and the maniac's yell.

But the walls of your houses are not so thin
As to let these discords enter in.

And, muffled up safe from the blast of the storm,
You are sure your hearts are soft and warm.

When you throw to the crippled beggar his dole—
There are sores on his body, a curse to his soul.

Yet on your soul lies a curse more dread,
For your life at ease is the life of the dead;

Though the jewel of price and the garment of pride
May seemly the spots of corruption hide."

"He that hath ears let him hear the word—
Open the door to Love, the Lord.

Love, the Lord, at the threshold stands,
The bloodstains are bloody on feet and hands.

He will raise to your lips his cup of pain,
And for pleasure you never shall thirst again.

Upon your brows, for a coronet,
Shall the twisted wreath of thorns be set.

Counting the treasure of earth as dross,
You shall leave the gold to claim the cross.

And the joy of life shall be woe to share,
Its glory the sin of the world to bear.

Open the prison and break the sword,
He that shall conquer is Love, the Lord."

—Eliza Ritchie, in "Conservator."

Individualistic Anarchism Opposed to Force.

BY DR. RUDOLPH STEINER.

The individualistic Anarchist wishes that no man should be prevented by anything from developing the forces and faculties latent in him. The individuals are to assert themselves in a perfectly free competitive struggle. The existing State has no taste for this competitive struggle. Step by step, it prevents the individual from developing his faculties. It hates the individual. It says: I have use only for a man who conducts himself so and so. Whoever is different must be compelled to conform. Now, the State thinks men will agree among themselves only if it is said to them: "Thus you must be; and, if you are not so, then you must be so—anyway." The individualistic Anarchist, on the other hand, holds that the best conditions will be evolved, if people are allowed a free course. He is confident that they will find the right way themselves. He does not believe, of course, that there would be no more pickpockets day after tomorrow, if the State should be abolished tomorrow. But he knows that people cannot be prepared for liberty by authority and force. He knows this,—that the way is made free for the most independent people by removing all force and authority.

But the present States are founded on force and authority. The individualistic Anarchist is hostile to them, because they suppress liberty. All he demands is the free, untrammeled development of forces. He wishes to remove the force which hinders free development. He knows that at the last moment, when Social Democracy shall draw its conclusions, the State will call into requisition its cannons. The individualistic Anarchist knows that the authoritarians will at last always resort to coercive measures. But he is convinced that whatever smacks of force is inimical to liberty. Therefore he combats the State, which rests on liberty; and therefore he combats just as energetically the "propaganda by deed," which rests no less on force. If the State beheads or imprisons a man on account of his convictions, the proceeding, call it whatever one will, is execrable in the eyes of the individualistic Anarchist. It is no less execrable, of course, when a Luccheni stabs a woman who happens to be the empress of Austria. It is one of the foremost principles of the individualistic Anarchist to combat these things. If he were to approve them, he would have to admit that he does not know why he opposes the State. He combats the force which suppresses liberty; and he combats it as vigorously when the State coerces a libertarian idealist as when an insane, vain fellow assassinates the sympathetic visionary on the imperial throne of Austria.

It cannot be urged explicitly enough against our opponents that the "individualistic Anarchists" emphatically condemn "propaganda by deed." Aside from the coercion practised by States, there is perhaps nothing that is so repugnant to these Anarchists as the Caserios and Luchenis.
—From the Magazine fur Litteratur.

X
Per GL937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no. 40

A Democratic View of Postal Censorship.

Commenting on the Chicago "Chronicle's" recommendation of a strict postal censorship whereby Anarchistic literature could be ruled out of the mails, a correspondent says in that paper:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE CHRONICLE:—I am surprised at the "Chronicle" advocating more postal censorship. We have already too much. As soon as the principle that the postal department transmits nothing but pounds, ounces and dollars is violated we are in Russian conditions. The platform of all liberal parties in Germany, France, Austria, England, Holland, Sweden and Spain contains as one of the most sacred paragraphs and issues: Respect for the privacy and the intellectual contents of the mail!

The fight for uncensored postal service was especially fierce in Europe between 1830 and 1856, and today the mails of France contain absolutely no restriction as to intellectual contents. We have fallen behind in postal liberty even of Germany. The Democratic party should raise the extremely proper issue of: Uncensored mail! Why should there be made another law excluding "Anarchist literature?" "Turn the rascals out" was the slogan of Cleveland's first campaign. Any postmaster might interpret this as "Anarchistic" and stop all mail having allusions to it. No matter, if finally the courts decide the postmaster was wrong, it is notorious that any call on the courts is outrageously disagreeable, expensive, unsatisfactory and the offending postmaster is unattackable and unremovable. He becomes a despot of greater power than the postmaster general of France, who can be turned out of office in twenty-four hours. You cannot define "Anarchistic" strictly enough. Because some weak men misuse thinfis does not lead us to abolish revolvers, cyanide of potassium, razors, ropes, carbolic acid, even pictures and novels.

We cannot put a whole nation into a figurative prison because we cannot pick out those who ought to be there. There ought to be absolute defense for the postal authorities to take cognizance of the intellectual contents of the mail, and the offenses which now are committed by objects passing through the mail should be attacked from another direction. It is a silly logic to say the government makes itself a partner when it transports "Anarchistic literature." No more than the paper mill that makes the paper on which it was printed, the press which printed it, the letter carrier who carried it, the stamp stuck on it. These far-fetched responsibilites are the childish pretenses of petty tyrants to inflict their micro-intellectual tyrannies. All "fraud" stamping of letters before the courts have passed on the cases are tyranny pure and simple, are Anarchistic and without due process of law. A postal inspector cannot judge of what is "Anarchistic." As a rule he is not intellectual enough to know the difference between Anarchy, Nihilism, Marxism, Socialism, Communism, etc. That ridiculous lottery law censorship, even the postal censor's construction of obscene literature, are Anarchistic, in direct conflict with al common sense interpretation of our constitution.

Our supreme court which once said black was white and later that white was black (see income tax) must be Anarchistic in one case, or else our constitution is silly twaddle. "Obscene" is so wrongly understood that some postal censors have condemned Mr. Zola's "Fecondite," the most moral book on sexual sociology extant. "Obscene," while often something vulgar and coarse, in reality does far less damage than hayseeds imagine.

It behooves the Democratic party to take up all issues where more liberty rather than less is aimed at and to fight all cunning attempts at suppression, no matter under what specious disguise. There won't be more than 1,000 pounds of Anarchistic literature mailed in a year, and no more than 2,000 or at the most 10,000 will read it. What is the damage? Was it "Anarchy" that made Booth kill Lincoln, Guiteau kill Garfield? Nobody even thought in 1881 to call Conkling responsible for Guiteau's deed. Have our intellects degenerated so far that now we must hold Tom, Dick and Harry responsible for Czolgosz' deed? No, the only fair attitude is to call each criminal self-responsible and not enslave a whole nation into a postal censorship because of a few cranks. "Abolish absolutely all postal censorships" should be one and a very attractive plank of the Democratic platform.—A. C.

The Latest Press Outrage.

Under the above title James P. Morton, Jr., writes in "Discontent" of the recent arrests at Home, Washington:

"On Tuesday September 24, a deputy marshal entered the office of 'Discontent,' bearing a warrant for the arrest of C. L. Govan, James W. Adams, J. E. Larkin and G. Morong. The offence charged was that of 'depositing lewd, lascivious and obscene matter in the mails,' to wit, certain issues of 'Discontent.' Comrade Morong is not a member of the colony; but the other three were taken into custody. Our comrades were taken to Spokane, Wash., as provided for in the warrant. Bail was fixed at $1,000 each. This being furnished our comrades were released, and are with us again. The trial will be held before Judge Hanford, of the federal court, in Tacoma, at its regular session, next February.

"The articles complained of are understood to be that of James W. Adams, in No. 128, and especially certain quotations from the 'Prodigal Daughter' contained therein; and that of G. Morong, in No. 149. Both of them are quietly argumentative in tone; and neither one contained a line calculated to inflame sensual passions. There is not a word in either which could offend the most susceptible ear. It is purely and solely a question of the right to express honest opinions on the sex question. The issue could not be more clearly drawn. Every American citizen should be interested in this test case. It is an open secret that a conviction in this case will mean other arrests, and a concerted attempt to destroy all discussion of vital social questions. The goodness or badness of the 'free love' idea is not involved in the contest. It is simply a question of free speech. Those who believe in ignorance, and in the wanton invasion of individual liberty, will be found ranged on the side of the prosecution. Those who believe that knowledge is essential to progress, and that open discussion is the best roadway to knowledge, will support the defence.

"This is no season for indifference. Popular prejudice is relied on to force a conviction. This must be met by a full presentation of the true facts, and of the real animus of the prosecution. The liberties of many others are bound up with the liberties of our persecuted comrades. This case must not be suffered to go by default. It calls for the united support of liberals everywhere, regardless of past divisions. Never mind your personal opinion of 'Discontent' or of its contributors. It is your fight, if you believe in free speech at all. The indicted comrades represent the principle of the liberty of the press."

The new woman in Norway has gained a glorious victory. For many years the Norwegian women have been waging war against the use of the word OBEY in the marriage service of the Norwegian Church, and their labors are at length crowned with success, or at least with a partial success. The Parliament in Christiania has ruled that the use of the obnoxious word shall henceforth not be obligatory upon the bride, but only optional. That is to say, the bride is to be free either to say that she will be "faithful or obedient" or simply to say that she will be "faithful," just as she pleases. And after that she will do as she did before—have her own way.

However, this is a good step in the right direction. Everything that savors of an injunction should be taken out of the marriage ceremony. It is absurd to command people to cherish each other and to make them swear that they will do so. You certainly can swear that you will be faithful to a woman, but you cannot swear that you will love her forever and ever, and as for making a woman take a solemn oath that she will obey her husband, the thing is so absurd that the very best married women will invariably tell you that they have not the slightest recollection that they ever made such a promise.—Max O'Rell.

Queries.

"Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." Is it not then an act of impiety in man to take vengeance upon Czolgosz, thereby usurping the Lord's prerogative?

* * *

If McKinley was right when he said, "It is God's way—his will be done," why should Czolgosz be punished for doing God's will?

* * *

If this is a Christian nation, as decided by the Supreme Court, is it right and proper for this nation to kill Czolgosz for killing McKinley when it is remembered that Jesus, the founder of Christianity, abolished the law of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life? and substituted the law of forgiveness and love?

* * *

If Czolgosz believed it to be his "duty," to kill McKinley, will not his electrocution make him a martyr in the eyes of all who believe as he does? And will not his death produce more assassinations of rulers, in accord with the well known principle that the "blood of its martyrs is the seed of the church?"

* * *

Was not the late queen of England more wise than our rulers when she requested that all her would be assassins should be treated as lunatics and not as criminals?

* * *

If all Anarchists ought to be banished or deported because one man calling himself an Anarchist commits murder, why should not all Christians be banished when one of their number commits murder? as in the cases of Guiteau, of Freeman and hundreds of other yearly occurring instances?

* * *

As Czolgosz was born of and educated by Christians, would it not be well to look into Christian sacred literature to see whether there are not instances in which assassination is commended and sanctified? Take the case of Ehud—Judges, third chapter; of Jael, fourth chapter of same book; of Judith, book of Judith and others that might be named, as samples of the glorification and canonization of treacherous assassination. Since our early impressions are most powerful and lasting, is it not more than probable that Czolgosz got his inspiration from the teachings of his church, and not from the text books of Anarchism?

M. H.

A California Outrage.

TO THE EDITOR OF LUCIFER:—In No. 885 attention was called to some unjust arrests. I should like to tell you and your other readers of another one if, as is possible, it has not already come to your notice. It is that of Morrison I. Swift, of Nordhoff, Calif. He is known to most of those who work for social and political regeneration, on both coasts of the continent. I will quote his own account of the arrest.

"It was 'Imperialism and Liberty' that landed me here, two years after birth. Some one happened to get hold of the book about the time of the assassination, and went red, white and blue, and read it to the town, which followed him. Just as if McKinley's death or shooting had anything to do with the truth of the book, or anything to do with it anyhow. But this roused a mob spirit, which I understand even rather scared some of those who raised it. They baited me on my ranch, and were not going to let me change from my thin overalls, with no vest, to a decently warm suit to ride eighteen miles to the chilly ocean by evening. At length I persuaded the constable to let a fruit-picker go up to the house."

I have not heard yet whether Mr. Swift has been released, but rather suppose that he has. The fact that a man could be so arrested and jailed, shows how much protection our institutions give the individual.

S. H. EARLE.

Germantown, Phila., 423 Stafford St.

The most charming part of a love affair is the beginning. No wonder that so many people find pleasure in the beginning again.—Max O'Rell.

Bird Shot.

Capitalism is welcome to all the advantage it has tried to reap from the Buffalo tragedy. Every turn it has made has tended only to emphasize its brutality.

* * *

It has ransacked the earth in search of a "conspiracy," and has failed at every point. It has attempted almost every means of misrepresentation that the unscrupulous ingenuity of man can devise. It has tortured the imbecile who performed the act. It has poisoned the public mind against liberty and all reform.

* * *

And all for what?—to maintain existing conditions. Capitalism, no longer able to argue its way through, resorts to methods that would bring a flush of shame to the face of the average savage.

* * *

Who is a "freethinker?" Is it one who believes in free speech and free press and is tolerant of the opinions of others? Does H. L. Green, of the "Freethinkers' Magazine," fill this definition? Hardly.

* * *

I have been a close reader of Lucifer for the past twelve years. I have tried carefully to watch its course on all the important issues that have come before the people during this time. From this long acquaintance with this publication I take pleasure in saying that any sane person who will say that Lucifer should be suppressed, or that its editors and contributors have not earned the right to a respectful hearing is too stupid and prejudiced to be a good citizen of any country.

* * *

Evidently Mr. Green belongs in the same camp with the editors of the "Herald and Presbyter," and all similar publications. He has given the proof that the name of his magazine is a lie. He is no freethinker.

* * *

I am not an Anarchist, but all proof goes to show that Philosophical Anarchy is far more rational and humane than is capitalism. I believe in social co-operation; but if this is impossible of accomplishment, then why should we not work for Anarchy? All governments today are merely committees of the exploiting classes to do their will.

* * *

Poverty, crime and war are simply effects—not causes—and are as much a part of Capitalism as snow and ice are a part of winter. So long as we have Capitalism there will be assassination. Capitalism produces oppression, and oppression is the harlot-breeder of crime.

* * *

H. L. Green and his misnamed magazine stand for Capitalism. He had better take down his sign and go into the other camp.

HENRY B. ALLEN.

Berwick, Ill.

The Mother Not a Parent.

So says the local government board of education, of Kingston, England. In commenting on this assertion the "Westminister Gazette" says:

"Sir John Gorst, as we noted on Saturday, declares that it is no part of the board of education to interpret acts of parliament. The local government board make no mock modesty o that sort. It not only interprets acts of parliament but apparently assumes the right to dictate to the courts. The Kingston magistrates, we are informed, granted a vaccination certificate to a married woman. A few days later the vaccination officer informed the bench that the local government board had instructed him that the mother of a child was not the parent within the meaning of the act, and to ask for the revocation of the certificate. We are glad to see that the bench refused to take orders from the board in this way and refused to revoke its decision. The local government board has no more authority to dictate to magistrates in this way than a private person has. As for its wonderful discovery that the 'mother of a child is not its parent'—well, since a government department says so, that settles it. It is quite right that we should be accurately informed on such matters."

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

887.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Free Unions and Parental Responsibility.

A correspondent writes us in regard to social ethics in the far west, in part as follows:

EDITOR LUCIFER:—I once was an extreme monogamist and anti-divorce man, but experience compelled me to change my views. Custom is a great thing. In California the law does not interfere with men and women living together. Yet the opportunity is not embraced very often. I have known such couples, and the women preferred it to marriage, and they lived together till death parted them. Still I believe there is less pain to marry than to have your children pointed to as bastards when at school and elsewhere. I say this in the face of the fact that I was compelled to leave ten children simply to get a little peace, and have been a hermit ever since. One child was only two months old—maybe three. Two days before I left I heard my wife say: "You needn't fret, he'll not leave his babies"—this to a daughter who had remonstrated with her about some matter in controversy, when I had threatened to leave. I gave her and the children all the property I had, and yet have the name of being a brute for abandoning my family.

The points most worthy of notice in this extract are these:

First. Comparison between legalized monogamy and "free unions."

Second. "Bastardy" as an objection to freedom in love.

Third. Responsibility for large families.

Fourth. Responsibility for care of children.

Our correspondent says the opportunity of living together without legal bonds is "not embraced very often" and yet the "women preferred it to marriage," in the few cases known by him.

Why did the women prefer illegal marriage to the legal sort?

Was it not because the masculine partner was put on his good behavior, and knew he must continue the ethics of courtship after he began living with his lover, and does not this tell us also why "they lived together till death parted them," instead of seeking separation through the divorce courts, as so many legally married couples do?

A little story just here is in point. It was told me by a lady lawyer in good standing, in the capital of Kansas. She knew the parties in question and said, "you can make what use you choose of the facts."

In a western town, where people did pretty much as they pleased, a man named Jones led a reckless and "dissipated" life until he fell under the influence of a woman of the "demimonde," called Madame Smith. They began living together and the daily lives of both became much improved. Jones was no longer the terror of the town but a quiet and useful citizen, and his partner a well-behaved and reputable home-keeper. Thus they lived and prospered for several years till in one of the periodic "devastations," or psychic epidemics known as "religious revivals," they both "got religion and joined the church." Being now church members they must marry—of course; and marry they did, with the result that inside of six months they were separated, having quarreled, fought and returned each to the reckless and worse than useless life they had lived before they met.

My lady informant said for herself she preferred legal marriage. Why, she did not say, but looking for causes the reason is obvious enough. As a lawyer it was to her advantage to have many laws on the statute book, and the more irrational and invasive the laws the better for the lawyer, because without a lawyer the unlearned and unsophisticated citizen cannot know how to defend himself.

But a more important reason is this: The ruling classes, that is, the officials of church and state, will allow no man, and especially no woman to openly and avowedly antagonize the marriage institution. To be a heretic in regard to marriage is incomparably more dangerous to political, social and financial success than it is to be a heretic in religion, in politics, in finance or economics.

* * *

And why so very dangerous to oppose Institutional Marriage?

Again the answer is plain to be seen. In order that the ruling classes may have a sure hold on their positions and an easy time generally, they must be able to show that the masses of people are not able to rule themselves.

This means that the masses must be—as compared to themselves—weak, imbecile, intellectually and morally. The priest, the judge and the legislator must be able to point to the depravity, the sinfulness, the viciousness and the criminality of the average man and woman, the "natural" man and woman, and these ruling powers are shrewd enough to see that it is MARRIAGE—Institutional Marriage, canon law marriage, indissoluble marriage, that furnishes a perennial supply of material to prove their claim that the masses of people are not able to govern themselves.

But more of this under another head.

"POINTED TO AS BASTARDS."

From time immemorial the terms "bastard" and "bastardy" have been used as whips by church state rulers, the archists, to hold woman in subjection and to drive the masses of people into the fold of matrimony, just as the words, "infidel," "atheist," "freethinker," "skeptic," "miscreant" (misbeliever) etc., have been the whips to drive people into the church. But from Shakespere's time to the present—and doubtless long before the time of Shakespere—it has been known that, as a rule, "bastards" are brighter in mind and superior every way to the "legitimates," so much so that when a genius of any sort appears in a family of mediocre children the neighbors wonder who can be the father thereof.

But, as time wears on, the old whips, bogies and scarecrows of Archists in church and state, are gradually losing their terrors. The laity, the common people, the unprivileged masses, are slowly finding out that the words infidel, atheist, anarchist, bastard, etc., etc., have no such meanings as our power-loving, our cunning and unscrupulous rulers and their pliant tools, the publishers of daily papers, would have us believe, and hence we may reasonably expect that the time is not far distant when children at school will no longer point the finger of scorn at the free-born child, just as they now no longer voice the hatred of their parents towards their non-church-going neighbors by calling the children of these by such epithets as "little infidels," "young atheists," etc.

* * *

It should not be forgotten, however, that the fact alone that the mother is unmarried does not mean that her child is or will be born well, nor that it is a test case of free motherhood. Often it means the very opposite. So limited is the right of choice on the part of the prospective free mother, so easily victimized is she by the hypnotic power of sensuous men, and so sensitive to the scorn of "respectable" women, not to speak of financial dependence, that the wonder is that the child of the unmarried mother is not generally, if not always, inferior to children born in wedlock.

To make a fair comparison between free motherhood on the one hand, and married or enslaved motherhood on the other, social conditions—laws, customs and prejudices, must be wholly changed from what they now are.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR LARGE FAMILIES.

The "ten children" to one mother is significant, terribly significant of the married mother's enslavement, and at the same time her importance in the social, religious, political and economic systems that require the many to serve as hewers of wood, drawers of water, and also as lunatics, imbeciles to fill asylums, and as morally and intellectually inferior and weak, so that there shall never be lacking a good supply of candidates for penitentiaries and houses of correction.

Without such supply it would be impossible for the archistic leaders of human society to point to such specimens as Czolgosz, Guiteau, Prendergast and the thousands and millions of petty thieves, burglars, tramps and "ne'er-do weels," as proof that government of man by man is necessary, is indispensable, and that therefore the Anarchistic theory at its best, is wholly impracticable, and would result in social chaos and ruin.

"Free Unions" do not produce a swarm of children, such as the husband and father, in the above instance, was compelled to abandon "in order to get a little peace." The free mother owns her body, her bed and the room occupied by her bed, and she admits no one to her room and bed as a matter of right, or of ownership.

This fact alone accounts for much of the disparity in the size of families of married and unmarried couples. I once asked the overseer of the poor, in Topeka, Kansas, why it is that the poor have large families while the rich have few children. His reply, in substance, was this:

"The poor have few sources of pleasure, of recreation or gratification, and hence they very naturally indulge to excess in the gratification of the reproductive appetite or instinct, and the temptation is always present. The rich can afford the entertainment of clubs, the opera, summer vacations etc., and when at home, husband and wife usually sleep in separate rooms and beds, whereas the poor man and wife have but one sleeping room and bed."

A Chicago lawyer in speaking of his efforts to help the poor gave this as a typical case: "I told the father of many children that on one condition I would interest myself in his and their behalf, namely, that there shall be no more additions to the family. The promise was readily given, and with my help and the work I procured for him the prospects of the prolific couple were soon much improved; but before the first year was gone a new arrival claimed a share of the husband and father's earnings.

"'How is this,' said I. 'Did you not promise there should be no more mouths to feed?'

"'Yes,' said he, 'but the fact is, the cold weather compelled us to sleep together to keep warm.'"

* * *

While as a man and philanthropist this lawyer discouraged over-production of children, as a member of the governing class his interests lay in the opposite direction. Hence early marriages and large families are constantly encouraged by both church and state authorities. Hence the pensioning of parents of exceptionally large families, as in some countries; also the custom of sending royal presents to the mothers of triplets or quadruplets, as reward for diligence in adding to the census rolls. Only a few weeks ago the mother of quadruplets here in Chicago, was made the recipient of many hundreds of dollars, and of much sympathetic, eulogistic notoriety, from rich and poor alike.

Numbers, numbers!—quantity, quantity, not superior quality, of population, is the goal sought for, the necessary condition and foundation upon which our archistic and capitalistic human society is based, and this fact, more than anything else, explains the unanimity with which the archistic religious and political organs oppose the freedom of woman, the self-ownership of woman, and clamor for more stringent divorce laws. Freedom in love—"the social side of Anarchism," means an end to the archistic privileges of the present leaders, the drones and parasites of the great human hive.

* * *

As I see it, then, the cure for the evil of large families must come through freedom of motherhood, and with freedom of motherhood must come RESPONSIBILITY of motherhood for the SIZE of the family. Robert G. Ingersoll was right when, in the last and greatest speech of his life, he said:

"There is but one hope. Science, the only savior of mankind, must make woman the mistress of herself; must put it into the power of woman to say whether she shall become a mother or not"—and having the power and the right to choose or to refuse, woman must be held RESPONSIBLE—by an enlightened public conscience, NOT by laws, written or unwritten, for the manner in which she exercises that right and power, the most tremendously important of all human rights, powers, duties, functions, involving responsibilities.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR CARE OF CHILDREN.

Law and custom make man the head of the family, the ruler of and provider for both woman and child, or children. Hence to desert wife and children is reckoned more than a misdemeanor; it is held to be a crime, than which few offenses are more heinous. Hence also to defend or excuse the deserter of wife and children is to invite the condemnation, the enmity and hate of all who up-hold our present political and societary institutions, based as they all are upon Institutional Marriage. But let us see:

If the husband and father is the head of the house, the ruler of the house and of its inmates, and if upon his shoulders rests the responsibility for support of the children and of their mother—especially during the child bearing and child-rearing years of her life, is it not clear that just here is the logical reason for the subordination of woman to man in the realm of reproduction? that is, in the sex-life, the sex-power and functions of woman?

If then, woman is ever to be freed from sex-slavery, is not the first step, the first logical step, in her emancipation the removal of man's plea or claim that upon him rests the responsibility for her support? including the support of her children during gestation and early infancy?

Consider carefully, please, kind reader, before condemning. As I have often heard R. G. Ingersoll iterate and reiterate, "Let us be honest, let us be just—" and I venture to add,

LET US BE LOGICAL—RATIONAL.

When nature permits masculine man to gestate and give birth to a child, then he can logically claim the right of ownership and control of that child, and also the right to care for it until it can care for itself—all for the same reason that he claims the right to own, control and care for his own personal organism. Rights and duties are commensurable; they run parallel, or should so run, and therefore when man shall have acquired the right to own and control a child in nature's way, then and not till then will the duty of caring for that child devolve upon him—logically, naturally, rationally, devolve upon him.

That this reasoning and its conclusion will seem cold, hard and cruel to many readers I have not the slightest doubt, but we all remember, doubtless, how cold and hard and cruel it seemed to part with many of the superstitious and illogical notions of our early childhood. For one I am not in the least afraid to trust to

LOVE IN FREEDOM,

for the care and maintenance of children. Masculine man can be trusted to do his part, as well as woman hers. When womanhood awakes in the "Land of Freedom," manhood will awaken, also, and the new man, the really free and manly man, will find his highest pleasure, his deepest and truest satisfaction in helping the woman he loves—the WOMEN he loves, if perchance he be a "pluralist" in love—to care for HER child or children, without the slightest idea that such help gives him a claim upon the person or service of the woman, or women—without expectation of REWARD of any kind except that which comes with the labor of love itself. He will feel and know that

"Love is life's end, an end yet never ending—
Love's life's reward, rewarded in rewarding."

Herein, as elsewhere, "the letter [of the law] killeth; it is the spirit [of love] that maketh alive," paraphrasing the words of Paul.

By man's law the care of children has been made man's duty, man's responsibility. In all the past this law has been more or less a dead letter; LAY, worse—it has been a fetter, a handicap, instead of a help to human progress. Remove the fetter, take off the handicap. No law but that of love is needed between woman and man, between child and man.

In the family, as in all other departments of associative life it holds good that

"If men relied on love to guide
The world would be the better for it."

"But where is this 'Land of Freedom,' and how are we to get there"? it will doubtless be asked.

As yet the Land of Freedom exists only as a prophecy, a mental concept, in the minds of the few. But this is nature's way. First the ideal, then the actual, the visible, the practical. As aids or pointers for those of our readers who are discontented with the present regime, and who would be glad to help to inaugurate the reign of freedom and justice, I will venture to name the writings of Leo Tolstoi, the grand old Russian thinker and iconoclast whose revolutionary ideas, and work among the poor peasants of his own country have caused his excommunication by the national church, and the threat of banishment by order of the Czar.

Also I would recommend a little paper published at Home, Washington, called "Discontent," which paper is the organ of a band of workers for freedom and justice on all lines, and who are trying to open the way for their practicalization on the Pacific Coast of the United States. The publishers of this paper are now under arrest for their radical utterances, as told elsewhere in this issue.

Now is a good time for the friends of progress everywhere to show their colors by sending for the paper "Discontent"—only fifty cents per year,—and also for some of the radical pamphlets and books sold by the same publishers, showing the road to the land of freedom. M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

E. H., New York:—For the inclosed dollar kindly send me a copy of your Autobiography if you get it out; if not keep the money anyway. It is refreshing to read your comments after the awful rot of the daily press.

Elisha and Louisa Crawford, Orchard, Ia.:—We have been subscribers to your paper for years, and though we are very old, we have tried in every way to interest the people of our community in Lucifer and human freedom which Lucifer advocates, and to secure new subscribers. We send $1 to add to our subscription, and fifty cents for your distribution fund. We anticipate much pleasure in reading the Life of Moses Harman.

Geo. C. Brooks, Newark, N. J.:—I have read with interest your editorial "The Lesson of the Hour" and am surprised at your claiming that Czolgosz was not an Anarchist. Surely the the man's own statement points to the contrary and his intelligence and philosophy serve to prove the statement. Perhaps we shall soon hear that Most and Goldman are not Anarchists, should they follow their own teachings. If there is one thing more to my disgust than the white-washing of a noble statesman is white-washing his murderer.

[Well, let us see: Suppose that instead of calling himself an Anarchist, Czolgosz had called himself a Christian of the "non-resistant" type—"resist not evil etc.," would not Friend Brooks say that the act of the assassin belied his words? Anarchy—logical and philosophic, seeks the destruction of rulership, not of rulers. Philosophy and experience both teach that to kill rulers and thus make martyrs of them, is the surest way to defeat the purpose of Anarchy, the surest way to strengthen and perpetuate the despotism of man over his fellowman.

To speak of the "intelligence and philosophy" of the poor miserable wretch who now cowers and moans in the death ward at Auburn prison, is a travesty on language. It now transpires that Czolgosz was born and reared in the bosom of the Catholic church; his murderous act shows him to be a good Catholic, a logical Christian—"Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Of all the great religions of the world the Christian, and especially the Roman Catholic, is the most consistently and uniformly bloody. Anarchism is a philosophy, not a religion. Philosophy is love and wisdom. Love and wisdom are the opposite of hate and revenge, and therefore has no use for bloodshed. M. H.]

Free Society.

No decision has been received from Washington by the publishers of "Free Society," but they expect to be able to send out the two issues of their paper that are now ready. Meantime they can attend to correspondence and fill orders for books. Address A. Isaak, 515 Carroll avenue, Chicago.

American Soldiers and Their $5 Filipino Wives.

As an illustration of the civilizing example offered the conquered Filipinos the following, taken from "Unity," is interesting:

The "Advocate of Peace" is responsible for this quotation, taken from the words of Corporal Diffenderfer, whose home and friends are at West Chester, Penn. He was attached to the Forty-Fourth Regiment, which was situated in the Isle of Panay in the Philippine Archipelago. He said: "There was a somewhat remarkable scene when we left for home on account of the wives which many of the soldiers had taken to themselves while on the island. The women over there are purchased for from $5 each upward, and nearly every soldier has one. When we left it was impossible for the men to bring them along, but when we arrived at the port from which we sailed it was found that one of the governors of a province had sent about one hundred of the wives to the port, and every one of them wanted to come along. There was no end of trouble until the matter was adjusted by the officers, who persuaded the women to remain at home." We print the above quotation in all its barren hideousness. If it is not true it should be promptly denied in the most efficient and official manner. The army ought not to rest under such an imputation if it be false. If it is true then again it deserves publicity, that the American people may understand the horrible demoralizations that follow an army, particularly when it becomes resident among a foreign and presumably an inferior people. Such facts as these have become so patent and of such long standing in connection with the English army in India that they have become the available stock in trade in the Kipling class of literature. Is the army of the United States, which has an indefinite period of service before it among Asiatic peoples, to follow in the same line of degradation?

Press-Writers' Notes, No. 9.

September 8. Pennsylvania Grit (Williamsport, Pa.) Mrs. Ida C. Craddock wins first prize for the best letter published in that issue, her theme was The Demand for Divorces; a Chicago Press-Writer resents an injustice to Ingersoll in the same paper. New Christianity (Ithaca, New York), Bolton Hall writes on Christianity.

September 9. Traveler, John B. Barnes under the caption Mysteries of the Universe tells "Truth" some things we do not know. The Spokesman Review (Spokane, Wash.), prints a column from the pen of Olans Jeldness commending D. Webster Grob and the writer and at the same time pours a broadside into the Rev. Gibooney.

September 10. Traveler, Aurin F. Hill describes how penal institutions are a "school of crime." Bulletin (Phil.), J. M. Gilbert, God and Science; G. L. Gullickson, Christianity and Advancement; John J. Fleming, "Lack of Newness."

September 11. Traveler, J. C. Barnes discourses on the evil of Selfishness; Bulletin (Phil.), John J. Fleming writes on Pride and Piety. Democrat (Monson, Iowa), prints a column from Harriet M. Closz entitled "Boys, Why Don't You Be Good"—an answer to the editor's "Girls, Why Don't You Be Good."

September 12. Traveler, D. Webster Grob, explains why he opposes Christianity; Weekly Enquirer (Cincinnati), Francis B. Livesey writes a good one on the Mountebank Clergy; Albert P. Lewis muses in verse on the "Whence and Wherefore." Bulletin (Phil.), a Chicago Press-Writer has a good one on Foreign Missions; G. L. Gullickson deals with the Adam and Eve story, while William C. Crawford's topic is After Death, What? Baltimore (Md.) World, Francis B. Livesey writes on the case of Czolgosz, entitled Schools Breed Assassins.

September 13. Traveler Charles A. Osborn gets after the uniform divorce law bigots with a fine letter; Kent C. Perry's theme is "Infant Damnation;" John B. Barnes has a round with B. H. J. on a personal matter and Chas. D. McBride defends the Press-Writers' Association from the same writer's attack. Bulletin (Phil.) Chas. A. Osborn discusses the much abused word Morality. Boston Post, H. A. Libbey, Dorchester Wants Transfers, a demand on Boston trolley car management.

September 14. Cantonsville (Md.) Argus, Francis B. Livesey has two letters one entitled "Libraries and Carnegie," the other "A Peoples' Newspaper." Pioneer Press (Martinsburg W. Va), Aurin F. Hill gives Old Side Methodist some points on Spiritualism, and Francis B. Livesey writes on the Buffalo shooting and educational matters.

Dorchester, Mass. A. C. ARMSTRONG.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for October contains a tribute to the late President, with portraits of Mr. McKinley, his mother, and Mrs. McKinley, the last article written by Professor L. G. Janes, on "The Home as a Social Factor." The article on The People of Note contains a sketch and portrait of Sir John Stainer, by Mr. D. T. Elliott. Dr. Holbrook gives some valuable advice on health. The Irish character is discussed by J. A. Fowler, illustrated by portraits of Sir Thomas Lipton, Lord General Kitchener, and Patrick Henry. The editorials contain a criticism on Czolgosz with portrait.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTROLOGY!

REDUCED TO ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Subscription Price in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba	$1 00
Foreign Countries	1.50
Sample Copies	.10

NONE FREE.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For Two Dollars you can have the Sphinx Magazine one year, and a year's forecast written by Mrs. Thompson. The work will be the same that she charges Three Dollars for. This offer is made to introduce the "Sphinx" to new readers. Address

PYRAMID PUBLISHING CO.,
336 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

A Beautiful Head of Hair. For 25 cents we will send our formula for a preparation for restoring gray or faded hair to its natural color; positively promotes its growth stops dandruff prevents its falling out. It is not a dye, but restores the natural color and growth by supplying its proper nourishment. Prepared from herbs that can be procured in any town. Address BOTANICAL COMPANY, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

SEND the date of your birth and 10 cents and we will tell you your prospects in business and social life for one year. GOLD SEAL SUPPLY COMPANY, 131 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

"Our Home Rights" Fifty cents a year. 24 Boylston St., Boston, Mass. Advocates reform in social political and religious life. Send for sample copy, and you will become a subscriber. From the First of January "Our Home Rights" will be enlarged, and the subscription price will be $1.00 a year.

Dr. Pfeiffer the editor, has fasted in the interest of science for 21 days and 21 days, and is an expert in the laws of true living. He gives advice by letters. First letter $5.00, subsequent letters $2.00.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old asceticism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers: 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 173 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
HX330
.L8
V.5 no.41
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 41. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 24, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 888

WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

Watchman, what of the night?
Storm and thunder and rain,
Lights that waver and wane,
Leaving the watch-fires unlit,
And the flash of the lamps now and then
From a palace where spoilers sit,
Trampling the children of men.

Mourners, what of the night?
All night through without sleep
We weep, and we weep, and we weep.
Who shall give us our sons?
Beaks of raven and kite,
Mouths of wolves and of hound,
Give us them back, whom the guns
Shot for you dead on the ground.

Captives, what of the night?
It rains outside overhead,
Always a rain that is red,
And our faces are soiled with the rain;
Here in the season's despite,
Day-time and night-time are one,
Till the curse of the chain
Break, and their toils be undone.

Liberty, what of the night?
I feel not the red rain's fall,
Hear not the tempest at all,
Nor thunder in heaven any more.
All the distance is white
With the soundless feet of the sun,
Night with the woes that it wore,
Night is over and done.

—Algernon Charles Swinburne.

The Goal of Anarchism.

BY BENJ. R. TUCKER.

The following paragraphs are taken from "State Socialism and Anarchism," published in pamphlet form by Benj. R. Tucker. In the summer of 1886, shortly after the bomb-throwing at Chicago, the author of this essay received an invitation from the editor of the "North American Review" to furnish him a paper on Anarchism. In response this essay was sent him. A few days latert the author received a letter announcing the acceptance of his paper, the editor volunteering the declaration that it was the ablest article that he had received during his editorship of the "Review." The next number of the "Review" bore the announcement, on the second page of its cover, that the article would appear at an early date. Month after month went by, and the article did not appear. Repeated letters of inquiry failed to bring any explanation. Finally, after nearly a year had elapsed, the author wrote to the editor that he had prepared the article, not to be pigeonholed, but to be printed, and that he wished the matter to be acted upon immediately. In reply he received his manuscript and a check for seventy-five dollars. Thereupon he made a few slight changes in the article and delivered it on several occasions as a lecture, after which it was printed in "Liberty" of March 10, 1888.

When Warren and Proudhon, in prosecuting their search for justice to labor, came face to face with the obstacle of class monopolies, they saw that these monopolies rested upon Authority, and concluded that the thing to be done was, not to strengthen this Authority and thus make monopoly universal, but to utterly uproot Authority and give full sway to the opposite principle, Liberty, by making competition, the antithesis of monopoly, universal. They saw in competition the great leveller of prices to the labor cost of production. In this they agreed with the political economists. The query then naturally presented itself why all prices do not fall to labor cost; where there is any room for incomes acquired otherwise than by labor; in a word, why the usurer, the receiver of interest, rent, and profit, exists. The answer was found in the present one-sidedness of competition. It was discovered that capital had so manipulated legislation that unlimited competition is allowed in supplying productive labor, thus keeping wages down to the starvation point, or as near it as practicable; that a great deal of competition is allowed in supplying distributive labor, or the labor of the mercantile classes, thus keeping, not the prices of goods, but the merchant's actual profits on them, down to a point somewhat approximating equitable wages for the merchant's work; but that almost no competition at all is allowed in supplying capital, upon the aid of which both productive and distributive labor are dependent for their power of achievement, thus keeping the rate of interest on money and of house-rent and ground-rent at as high a point as the necessities of the people will bear.

CAPITAL AND PRODUCT IDENTICAL.

On discovering this, Warren and Proudhon charged the political economists with being afraid of their own doctrine. The Manchester men were accused of being inconsistent. They believed in liberty to compete with the laborer in order to reduce his wages, but not in liberty to compete with the capitalist in order to reduce his usury. Laissez faire was very good sauce for the goose, labor, but very poor sauce for the gander, capital. But how to correct this inconsistency, how to serve this gander with this sauce, how to put capital at the service of business men and laborers at cost, or free of usury,—that was the problem.

Marx, as we have seen, solved it by declaring capital to be a different thing from product, and maintaining that it belonged to society and should be seized by society and for 21-937

X
3rd par.
1901/02

employed for the benefit of all alike. Proudhon scoffed at this distinction between capital and product. He maintained that capital and product are not different kinds of wealth, but simply alternate conditions or functions of the same wealth; that all wealth undergoes an incessant transformation from capital into product and from product back into capital, the process repeating itself interminably; that capital and product are purely social terms; that what is product to one man immediately becomes capital to another, and vice versa; that, if there were but one person in the world, all wealth would be to him at once capital and product; that the fruit of A's toil is his product, which, when sold to B, becomes B's capital (unless B is an unproductive consumer, in which case it is merely wasted wealth, outside the view of social economy), that a steam-engine is just as much product as a coat, and that a coat is just as much capital as a steam-engine; and that the same laws of equity govern the possession of the one that govern the possession of the other.

For these and other reasons Proudhon and Warren found themselves unable to sanction any such plan as the seizure of capital by society. But, though opposed to socializing the ownership of capital, they aimed nevertheless to socialize its effects by making its use beneficial to all instead of a means of impoverishing the many to enrich the few. And when the light burst in upon them, they saw that this could be done by subjecting capital to the natural law of competition, thus bringing the price of its use down to cost, —that is, to nothing beyond the expenses incidental to handling and transferring it. So they raised the banner of Absolute Free Trade; free trade at home, as well as with foreign countries; the logical carrying out of the Manchester doctrine; laissez faire the universal rule. Under this banner they began their fight upon monopolies, whether the all-inclusive monopoly of the State Socialists, or the various class monopolies that now prevail.

Of the latter they distinguished four of principal importance: the money monopoly, the land monopoly, the tariff monopoly, and the patent monopoly.

FREE BANKING VERSUS STATE PROTECTED MONEY MONOPOLY.

First in the importance of its evil influence they considered the money monopoly, which consists of the privilege given by the government to certain individuals, or to individuals holding certain kinds of property, of issuing the circulating medium, a privilege which is now enforced in this country by a national tax of ten per cent. upon all other persons who attempt to furnish a circulating medium, and by State laws making it a criminal offence to issue notes as currency. It is claimed that the holders of this privilege control the rate of interest, the rate of rent of houses and buildings, and the prices of goods,—the first directly, and the second and third indirectly. For, say Proudhon and Warren, if the business of banking were made free to all, more and more persons would enter into it until the competition should become sharp enough to reduce the price of lending money to the labor cost, which statistics show to be less than three-fourths of one per cent. In that case the thousands of people who are now deterred from going into business by the ruinously high rates which they must pay for capital with which to start and carry on business will find their difficulties removed. If they have property which they do not desire to convert into money by sale, a bank will take it as collateral for a loan of a certain proportion of its market value at less than one per cent. discount. If they have no property, but are industrious, honest, and capable, they will generally be able to get their individual notes endorsed by a sufficient number of known and solvent parties; and on such business paper they will be able toget a loan at a bank on similar favorable terms. Thus interest will fall at a blow. The banks will really not be lending capital at all, but will be doing business on the capital of their customers, the business consisting in an exchange of the known and widely available credits of the banks for the unknown and unavailable, but equally good, credits of the customers, and a charge therefor of less than one per cent. not as interest for the use of capital, but as pay for the labor of running the banks. This facility of acquiring capital will give an unheard-of impetus to business, and consequently create an unprecedented demand for labor,—a demand which will always be in excess of the supply, directly the contrary of the present condition of the labor market. Then will be seen an exemplification of the words of Richard Cobden that, when two laborers are after one employer, wages fall, but, when two employers are after one laborer, wages rise. Labor will then be in a position to dictate its wages, and will thus secure its natural wage, its entire product. Thus the same blow that strikes interest down will send wages up. But this is not all. Down will go profits also. For merchants, instead of buying at high prices on credit, will borrow money of the banks at less than one per cent., buy at low prices for cash, and correspondingly reduce the prices of their goods to their customers. And with the rest will go house-rent. For no one who can borrow capital at one per cent. with which to build a house of his own will consent to pay rent to a landlord at a higher rate than that. Such is the vast claim made by Proudhon and Warren as to the results of the simple abolition of the money monopoly.

PERSONAL USE THE ONLY EQUITABLE TITLE TO LAND.

Second in importance comes the land monopoly, the evil effects of which are seen principally in exclusively agricultural countries, like Ireland. This monopoly consists in the enforcement by government of land titles which do not rest upon personal occupancy and cultivation. It was obvious to Warren and Proudhon that, as soon as individuals should no longer be protected by their fellows in anything but personal occupancy and cultivation of land, ground-rent would disappear, and so usury have one less leg to stand on. Their followers of today are disposed to modify this claim to the extent of admitting that the very small fraction of ground-rent which rests, not on monopoly, but on superiority of soil or site, will continue to exist for a time and perhaps forever, though tending constantly to a minimum under conditions of freedom. But the inequality of soils which gives rise to the economic rent of land, like the inequality of human skill which gives rise to the economic rent of ability, is not a cause for serious alarm even to the most thorough opponent of usury, as its nature is not that of a germ from which other and graver inequalities may spring, but rather that of a decaying branch which may finally wither and fall.

FREE TRADE IN MONEY MUST PRECEDE FREE TRADE IN GOODS.

Third, the tariff monopoly, which consists in fostering production at high prices and unfavorable conditions by visiting with the penalty of taxation those who patronize production at low prices and under favorable conditions. The evil to which this monopoly gives rise might more properly be called misusury than usury, because it compels labor to pay, not exactly for the use of capital, but rather for the misuse of capital. The abolition of this monopoly would result in a great reduction in the prices of all articles taxed, and this saving to the laborers who consume these articles would be another step toward securing to the laborer his natural wage, his entire product. Proudhon admitted, however, that to abolish this monopoly before abolishing the money monopoly would be a cruel and disastrous policy, first, because the evil of scarcity of money, created by the money monopoly, would be intensified by the flow of money out of the country which would be involved in an excess of imports over exports, and, second, because that fraction of the laborers of the country which is now employed in the protected industries would be turned adrift to face starvation without the benefit of the insatiable demand for labor which a competitive money system would create. Free trade in money at home, making money and work abundant, was insisted upon by Proudhon as a prior condition of free trade in goods with foreign countries.

OPPRESSIVE MONOPOLIES CREATED BY PATENT LAWS.

Fourth, the patent monopoly, which consists in protecting inventors and authors against competition for a period long enough to enable them to extort from the people a reward enormously in excess of the labor measure of their services,—in other words, in giving certain people a right of property for a term of years in laws and facts of nature, and the power to exact tribute from others for the use of this natural wealth, which should be open to all. The abolition of this monopoly would fill its beneficiaries with a wholesome fear of competition which would cause them to be satisfied with pay for their services equal to that which other laborers get for theirs, and to secure it by placing their products and works on the market at the outset at prices so low that their lines of business would be no more tempting to competitors than any other lines

FREEDOM OF THE INDIVIDUAL IS FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE OF ANARCHISM.

The development of the economic program which consists in the destruction of these monopolies and the substitution for them of the freest competition led its authors to a perception of the fact that all their thought rested upon a very fundamental principle, the freedom of the individual, his right of sovereignty over himself, his products, and his affairs, and of rebellion against the dictation of external authority. Just as the idea of taking capital away from individuals and giving it to the government started Marx in a path which ends in making the government everything and the individual nothing, so the idea of taking capital away from government-protected monopolies and putting it within easy reach of all individuals started Warren and Proudhon in a path which ends in making the individual everything and the government nothing. If the individual has a right to govern himself, all external government is tyranny. Hence the necessity of abolishing the State. This was the logical conclusion to which Warren and Proudhon were forced, and it became the fundamental article of their political philosophy. It is the doctrine which Proudhon named An-archism, a word derived from the Greek, and meaning, not necessarily absence of order, as is generally supposed, but absence of rule. The Anarchists are simply unterrified Jeffersonian Democrats. They believe that "the best government is that which governs least," and that which governs least is no government at all. Even the simple police function of protecting person and property they deny to governments supported by compulsory taxation. Protection they look upon as a thing to be secured, as long as it is necessary, by voluntary association and co-operation for self-defence, or as a commodity to be purchased, like any other commodity, of those who offer the best article at the lowest price. In their view it is in itself an invasion of the individual to compel him to pay for or suffer a protection against invasion that he has not asked for and does not desire. And they further claim that protection will become a drug in the market, after poverty and consequently crime have disappeared through the realization of their economic program. Compulsory taxation is to them the life-principle of all the monopolies, and passive, but organized, resistance to the tax collector they contemplate, when the proper time comes, as one of the most effective methods of accomplishing their purposes. . . .

Upholding the right of every individual to be or select his own priest, they likewise uphold his right to be or select his own doctor. No monopoly in theology, no monopoly in medicine. Competition everywhere and always; spiritual advice and medical advice alike to stand or fall on their own merits. And not only in medicine, but in hygiene, must this principle of liberty be followed. The individual may decide for himself not only what to do to get well, but what to do to keep well. No external power must dictate to him what he must and must not eat, drink, wear, or do.

Nor does the Anarchistic scheme furnish any code of morals to be imposed upon the individual. "Mind your own business" is its only moral law. Interference with another's business is a crime and the only crime, and as such may properly be resisted. In accordance with this view the Anarchists look upon attempts to arbitrarily suppress vice as in themselves crimes. They believe liberty and the resultant social well-being to be a sure cure for all the vices. But they recognize the right of the drunkard, the gambler, the rake, and the harlot to live their lives until they shall freely choose to abandon them.

RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES OF PARENTS.

In the matter of the maintenance and rearing of children the Anarchists would neither institute the communistic nursery which the State Socialists favor or keep the communistic school system which now prevails. The nurse and the teacher, like the doctor and the preacher, must be selected voluntarily, and their services must be paid for by those who patronize them. Parental rights must not be taken away, and parental responsibilities must not be foisted upon others.

Even in so delicate a matter as that of the relations of the sexes the Anarchists do not shrink from the application of their principle. They acknowledge and defend the right of any man and woman, or any men and women, to love each other for as long or as short a time as they can, will, or may. To them legal marriage and legal divorce are equal absurdities. They look forward to a time when every individual, whether man or woman, shall be self-supporting, and when each shall have an independent home of his or her own, whether it be a separate house or rooms in a house with others; when the love relations between these independent individuals shall be as varied as individual inclinations and attractions; and when the children born of these relations shall belong exclusively to the mothers until old enough to belong to themselves.

Dr. H. H. Schaberg, of Kalmazoo, Mich., criticising the Michigan Supreme Court for deciding against compulsory vaccination, said: "Persons fortified against smallpox by vaccination have the right to demand that they shall not be exposed to contagion by the presence of those not so fortified." Whew!

We still want names and addresses of progressive people to whom to send copies of Lucifer. If you can send stamps with the names they will be appreciated; but please send the names, anyway.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

888.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Government Against the People.

That the word "government" as used by the daily press means something wholly different from, or distinct from, the people themselves is shown by such editorials as the following, taken from a recent issue of the Chicago "Chronicle."

"Several Anarchistic publications have been excluded from the mails and their owners arrested on charges which, if proved, will result in the imposition of fines or imprisonment, or both.

"In a local case it is noticeable that while the authorities have proceeded against an Anarchistic newspaper because it is Anarchistic, the charge against the publisher is the circulation of obscene matter, which is clearly interdicted.

"The necessity for any subterfuge in this matter is to be regretted, and the fact suggests the propriety of an amendment to the postal laws covering the cases of seditious publications of every description. Such an enactment would have to be very carefully drawn, or it would lead to abuse, but it is clearly within the right of the government to decline to become an agency for the distribution of publications the object of which is the destruction of government.

"Under the laws as they now stand many things printed and others regarded as inimical to good morals are forbidden mails A newspaper which advocates assassination, rebellion or violence of any description certainly is no more entitled to take advantage of the liberal postal laws of the country than would be a publication devoted to lewd pictures and stories, to the promotion of counterfeiting or to the advertising of a lottery.

"Anarchy as a philosophy can be urged in print without inciting the reckless and the ill-balanced to murder. Such publications as undertake to promote assassination and violence should, first of all, be excluded from the mails. No legitimate interest will be endangered by the process."

If the government and the people were one there would be no sense in saying, "It is clearly within the right of government to decline to become an agency for the distribution of publications the object of which is the destruction of government."

If the government and the people are one then "the destruction of government" would mean nothing less than the destruction of the people also.

The plain inference, if this language means anything, is that government is a thing apart from the people, that it has interests of its own to be looked after, and as government is nothing without officials to execute its behests it means, in plainer language, a class, and the interests of that class; a ruling class separate from the masses of the people.

That this is the true interpretation of such articles as that from which we quote, was well shown by a correspondent of the "Chronicle" whose rebuke of the editor's advocacy of more censorship laws, was printed in our last week's issue, under the head, "A Democratic View of Postal Censorship." The government, that is, the officials who administer government, can use the mails as they choose, but the common people are held responsible and punished under the arbitrary and partialistic rulings of the same officials,—as has been shown by instances without number.

That the government officials constitute a class to themselves is well illustrated in the army and navy. In these organizations the officials receive large pay and many perquisites, as compared with the pay received by the common soldier and sailor, and are seldom punished for brutal treatment of their men; and when one of these officers dies, or is killed, expensive funeral honors are paid to his memory and his widow and orphans receive pensions many times larger than those paid to the widows and orphans of the common soldiers who take the place of danger in battle and on march, and who bear all the hard labors of the campaigns.

The same thing is shown in civic life, or in what is called national, state and municipal government. Here, as in the army and navy, the officials get high salaries and many perquisites for little labor or no labor at all, and when they die or get killed, by accident or assassination, great honors are paid to their memory and their widows and orphans are bountifully cared for at public expense, whereas, let a common laborer be killed—by the carelessness or greed of employers, as in mines, factories, on railway trains, etc., or killed by hired murderers (assassins) as in the case of the inoffensive miners at Lattimer, Pa., no honors are paid to their memory and their widows and orphans are left to starve.

In many other ways it can easily be shown that government is a thing apart from the masses of the people, and that the boast of Americans that theirs is a government of the people, by the people and for the people is a monstrous falsehood, mere political buncombe used by the privileged classes to hypnotize the stupid masses into submission. M. H.

Chicago to Bloomington.

At 11:45 A. M. of Wednesday Oct. 16, Lucifer's editor bounded the south-bound "Chicago & Alton Limited" and sped away from the dust and noise of the great western "Babylon" called Chicago, and for the first time in eighteen months enjoyed the luxury of the sight of open fields, meadows and wooded hills. Fall rains had given the fields of late-sown grain, also the lawns, meadows and pasture lands, a robe of dark luxuriant green, while the groves were clad in their variegated suit of green and gold, of orange and crimson, that makes Autumn the most magnificent season of all the year for display of coloring.

October is Autumn's own month. September is in part a summer month, while November is divided usually with winter, but October is shared with no other season, and is, in more senses than one, the very crowning glory of the solar year, in the north temperate zone.

The main line of the "C. & A." for many miles out from Chicago lies along the famous "Drainage Canal" that unites Lake Michigan with the great Mississippi system, and with the Gulf of Mexico. Passing through Joliet, we catch a glimpse of the gloomy stone walls of the Illinois penitentiary and see the smoke issuing from innumerable factories. Then, in a southwesterly direction our train,—the very finest I ever rode upon—speeds away through an agricultural country of rare beauty and fertility, and cultivated by an apparently industrious and prosperous farming population. While other sections of the "great west" have been parched by drouth, Illinois seems to have suffered but little for lack of rain.

Arriving without incident worthy of note, at Bloomington, I find myself most agreeably domiciled in the very pleasant and commodious suburban home of the Freemans,—name most appropriate for Lucifer's old-time friends, at which home I hope to gain renewal of strength, health and flesh, for a winter campaign of effective work with hand and pen, with tongue and brain.

Until further notice my address will be Bloomington, Ills., care Col. James Freeman. Meantime letters intended for the business department should be directed, as usual, to Lucifer, 500 Fulton St., Chicago. M. HARMAN.

High Treason!

Congress will have to hurry up with its anti-treason legislation by which we are to "prevent personal criticism of the chief executive."

"The most damnable outrage which has ever been perpetrated by any citizen of the United States was committed by the president——"

O, where is the rope and the mob to fittingly punish the traitor who penned and printed those words! And what was the grievous wrong perpetrated by the president? It was "When he invited a nigger to dine with him at the white house"! So says the Memphis "Scimitar." The "nigger" was Booker T. Washington. Theodore Roosevelt, the man, was on friendly terms with Mr. Washington, and Roosevelt, the president, continues the friendship regardless of the wishes of the negro-phobists. The Memphis "Commercial-Appeal" joins in the treasonable outcry thus:

"It is now incumbent on those white Democrats of the south who had received appointments at the hands of President Roosevelt to resign their offices. They cannot afford to remain the recipients of any favor at his hands, certainly there is no honor attached to his benevolence or bestowals."

Will these papers be suppressed? L. H.

What They Say.

The extra copies of Lucifer No. 886, containing "Archism vs. Anarchism," "The Social Side of Anarchism," "Freedom in Love," etc., are going rapidly. In ordering fifty copies, J. L. Buxton, Milford, Mass., says:

"The last Lucifer analyzes and explains Anarchy so thoroughly that I want to give some of the Milford people a few papers to show where I stand as a man and a radical."

* * *

From Ithaca, N. Y., comes $5 with an order for copies of 884, 885, and 886. "I want to thank you from away down in my heart," says this friend, "for the stand you now take." In a postscript he adds: "I have ordered 'Freethought Magazine' sent to you for my unexpired term of subscription."

* * *

In sending the money for fifty copies of No. 886, to be mailed to addresses furnished by himself, a Kansas City subscriber says:

"On reading in your paper that H. L. Green, of the 'Freethought Magazine,' had declined longer exchanging with Lucifer, I was reminded of the shameful attack made by this man on Samuel P. Putnam after the Freethought leader's death several years ago. When Mr. Green published this slanderous editorial I withdrew what little support I had been able to give his paper and have given it to more worthy publications. I think every friend of liberty should do his best to extend the circulation of Lucifer, whose editor is one of the most thoroughly emancipated men in America."

While we appreciate all efforts of our friends to extend our circulation, we would not advise them to discontinue taking the "Freethought Magazine," as several have written that they have done because of its refusal to exchange with Lucifer. Its editor has a right to discontinue that neighborly courtesy for any reason or for no reason. We do not feel injured, as the loss is his quite as much as ours. Indeed, his is the only loss, as we are to have the pleasure and benefit of the possession of copies of his Magazine anyway. Nor would we, if we could, interfere with its circulation. In its limited field—that of Anarchism, self-government, in the realm of religion—it is doing effective work. In denying the right of church and state to control free thought and free expression of religious views, the ground is prepared for sowing the seed of free thought and free expression on all other questions. Mr. Green's desire that thought shall be free only so far as he himself has gone cannot limit the good effect of his work. Many will stop at his "halfway house," but many more will go on. They will dispense with church and state not only on Sundays and at the cradle and the grave, but on every day of the week and in every relation of life.

So again I say, More power to Mr. Green in his chosen field! "The Freethought Magazine" is an excellent text-book for the primary class in Anarchism. If you have a friend who is beginning to awaken to the uselessness of church control, send him the "Freethought Magazine." It may be the necessary entering wedge. Price fifteen cents a copy. Address H. L. Green, 213 Indiana street, Chicago. L. H.

"Strike While the Iron Is Hot."

Now is the time when every friend of free speech and a free press finds the soil prepared for the sowing of the seed of a larger liberty. Recent issues of Lucifer have been mainly devoted to a consideration of the present crisis, and we have had many calls for extra copies. To facilitate ordering the following leading articles are named. Please order by number:

887. Free Unions and Parental Responsibility (editorial); Individualistic Anarchism Opposed to Force; A Democratic View of Postal Censorship; The Mother Not a Parent. Also accounts of arrests in Home, Washington, and in California.

886. Archism vs. Anarchism; The Social Side of Anarchism, (editorials); Freedom in Love, by Karl Heinzen; Who Are Anarchists? by Eugene V. Debs, and Women and Modesty, by Dorothy Dix.

885. Sentenced to Die; The Ultimate of Anarchy (editorials); Two Epochs in Man's Progress, by P. J. Proudhon, and From My Point of View, by Lillian Harman.

884. We have had so many calls for 884 that the supply is almost exhausted.

883. The Lesson of the Hour (editorial); Anarchism and the Trusts (a selection from the speech of Benj. R. Tucker before the Conference on Trusts, held in Central Music Hall, Chicago, '99), and Jane Addams (of Hull House) on the Anarchists.

Price two cents each, twenty cents a dozen, seventy-five cents for fifty copies.

This issue (888) ought to be very valuable for distribution because of Benj. R. Tucker's masterly exposition of Anarchism. Please let us have your orders as early as possible.

R. Heber Newton Endorses the Ideal of Anarchism.

In All Souls' Protestant Episcopal Church, New York, the Rev. R. Heber Newton last Sunday startled his hearers by his endorsement of philosophical Anarchism. He took for his text St. Matthew v., 17: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets; I am not come to destroy but to fulfill." The following paragraphs are taken from the newspaper reports of his sermon:

"Perhaps the most remarkable religious leader at the present time is the Russian Tolstoi, who is an individualist Anarchist. He does not believe in the law, not because he would have chaos, but he would have men govern themselves, in the broadest sense of the word.

"Anarchism is in reality the ideal of political and social science, and also the ideal of religion. It is the ideal to which Jesus Christ looked forward. Christ founded no church, established no State, gave practically no laws, organized no government and set up no external authority; but he did seek to write on the hearts of men God's law and make them self-legislating.

"The most appalling fact of life is the multiplication of paupers, tramps, vagabonds—diseased, insane and criminal—who become the parents of future generations. Anarchism is a revolt from an oppressive and unjust social order which generates poverty and disease. Vice and crime turn dreamy youths into assassins, who, after the deed is done, say 'I have done my duty.' On the other hand, there is a revolutionary Anarchism which seeks to establish a social and political terrorism as a means of frightening society into a state of concession and paralyze law in order that lawlessness may in fact reign. In our country there is no justification for terrorism. It is an outrage against society, a crime against humanity and a barrier to future progress.

"The problem of revolutionary Anarchism is a problem not for statesmen alone. We must deepen our abhorrence of lawlessness. We must cherish a deeper reverence for the law. We must learn to hold all life, even in its humblest forms, sacred. We must seek and embody whatever truth there is in philosophical Anarchism. We must individually seek to realize the ideal, and become each of us self-governing beings, enshrining the moral law so as to need no restraint of external legislation.

Is the Death of Love a Necessity?

BY CARRIE A.

In a somewhat elaborate and beautifully expressed article in Lucifer, No. 883, Voltairine de Cleyre assumes that the death of love is a necessity, and her reason is that the place it occupies in the mental repository is needed for the exercise of other budding faculties. There isn't room, she thinks, in the magnificent edifice of the human mind for both love and intelligence to have full swing without colliding and bringing about disastrous results. If we love, she says, we cannot think, and if we think great thoughts, it will preclude our loving.

This assumption is based on the fast-dying belief that man's mind is greatly circumscribed and generally inefficient. It is well for the world, however, that all are not of this opinion, and that thousands of advancing souls are now learning that the capabilities of the mind are not limited, but are as vast as the Infinite after whose image and likeness it is fashioned.

Love, in its various phases, and intelligence, ever unfolding, constitute the mind of man, and to dispense with either element is to leave the mental machinery greatly in need of repair. Love is to the intellect what spirit is to the body—its life and vitalizing power. More than that, it is its spiritualizing element. Therefore it is an unwise teaching that would relegate love—and that, too, in its most complete and vital expression—back to the first few and infantile years of experience. That would make love fit simply to sit in the lap of ignorant and frivolous youth, when in reality it yields its highest and best only to the matured intelligence and highly evolved soul.

Youth, whose shoulders are too narrow to carry any other great responsibility, cannot, surely, bear worthily the whole of love. If we think so, we have not yet learned love's name. Oh! that is the difficulty. Man, failing to find himself, how can he know love's deeper significance?

Miss de Cleyre speaks of "spoony" love, and insane love, (passionate love). As for the former, to speak plainly, it is simply milk for calves, and becoming only to the calf stage of one's experience. But the latter—passionate love—is drawn from the depths of the soul, and would be perfectly sane and beautiful if only it were born into a sane mind.

But love coming, will he go? That depends on whether he meets with thoroughly congenial friends. Miss de Cleyre says he always goes, that love must die. A very sweeping assertion, this, to be accounted for only on the ground that reformers sometimes fall into pessimistic moods and for the time being fail to see other than the evils they would remedy. A cloud overshadows one mind and it believes the whole creation is wrapt in darkness. Love need not necessarily die, as I presume a long array of witnesses would be willing to testify. Many men and women have loved through long years, their love growing the stronger, the sweeter, and the holier because of its prolonged existence. Who can believe that love ever died in the case of Robert Browning and his wife Elizabeth Barrett? and can one for a moment believe that love touching the hearts and quickening the minds of these two grand souls made them less efficient in their chosen calling?

There is something beautiful in contemplating the united lives of such a man and woman; one's mind is pervaded with a subtile sense of appropriateness and fitness of things that one does not feel when contemplating a segregated life, an "alone" life. And why is this so? It is because two truly united lives stand for the ideal life, and whether we deny it, or believe in it, the ideal is always beautiful and ever appeals to us as the desirable.

I have written the foregoing comments in the desire not only to defend love, to hold it as a fit possession for all, but to place it upon a more ideal basis than one that would conceive of it as "spoony," or as the "soaking of one individuality in another." Such is not ideal love. The ideal savors of strength, not of weakness.

The Gentle Methods of the Government-Protected Capitalist.

In the Colorado Springs "Gazette," October 9, 1901, we find the following Victor news note:

"Victor, Oct. 8. The Woods Investment Company today issued an order to the superintendents of its various properties instructing them to discharge any employe who resides in Cripple Creek after Oct. 15. The order was made by Frank M. Woods, secretary and manager of the company's property. He stated that it would be carried out to the letter. In an interview tonight Mr. Woods said: 'It is needless for me to tell you that the Woods Investment Company has always been very fair with Cripple Creek; that we have never discriminated against that city, and that we are the heaviest tax payers in Teller County. We made this order in retaliation for the action of the Cripple Creek city council in refusing to grant the Pike's Peak Company a franchise. This company is a home institution that has spent nearly one million dollars in building a power plant in the county. We asked Cripple Creek for a franchise. The council would not grant this favor, but gave the right to a foreign company. This order is not made for the benefit of Victor, but is directed wholly against Cripple Creek. The employes of the Woods Investment Company may reside in any town or city in the camp except Cripple Creek. There is nothing clannish in our action; we are here now as we have been in the past to build up the county and district. Our fairness to Cripple Creek was shown but recently when the Woods Investment Company agreed that the Short Line should be completed to Cripple Creek before it was to Victor. We know that we shall be condemned in some quarters for this action, but think that all fair-minded people will see the force of the argument.' The order affects about two hundred men, most of whom are employed at the Doctor, Jack-Pot, Wild Horse, and Gold Coin Mines and Economic Mill."

Mr. Woods neglected to state that all the money the Woods Investment Company has invested in this county is gold taken out of the earth by the miners of the district; the same is true of the taxes he speaks of. He also fails to state that the Woods Investment Company is practically the owner of the town sites of the district with the exception of Cripple Creek, and therefore the Woods Investment Company graciously permits its slaves to live on the earth anywhere outside the city of Cripple Creek, thereby paying rent to the Woods Investment Company for the privilege of living on the earth.

Victor, Colorado. H. HANSEN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

M. A. Buswell, Whittier, Calif.:—I have been quite an admirer of Lucifer and the fearless stand its editor and his daughter have taken for woman's emancipation from sexual bondage. I notice in the papers the attempt of the police to connect Brother Isaak and his associates with the attempted assassination of President McKinley. I don't believe Brother Isaak, or his coworkers of "Free Society," knew anything about the crime, or had anything to do with it, but the police and detectives have to make a reputation some way, and some one has to be a victim. Of course there will be a great outcry against anarchy but it will only make anarchy stronger. These poor deluded people, such as the man who attempted to assassinate McKinley, realize that something is wrong and strike blindly at what they conceive to be the cause. So long as woman is held in sexual bondage such characters as these will be born, as a matter of course. There is talk of excluding the foreign anarchists from this country. Can the government stop assassins and criminals generally from being born here?

When woman is free to bear children only when she desires them, and free to choose the father of her child whether he have a license from the government or not, then we may reasonably expect an end of assassinations, an end of lynching, an end of wars and of murders generally.

Later I hope to order the Autobiography of the editor.

W. Fretz, Trenton, N. J.:—I am somewhat in arrears but you kindly continued sending the paper, for which I am glad. I herewith enclose a dollar. I was pleased with what you said in No. 883 in regard to the murdered president; it was equitable and just. Such crimes tend to centralize government and make it still stronger, while it weakens the cause of Anarchy and brings disgrace and reproach upon it. I say this because Czolgosz claims to be an Anarchist. No paper can countenance assassination if it wants to hold the respect of well-meaning people. Even a president has a right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

H. Hanson, Colo.:—I suppose all the Anarchists will be driven out of the country now, because one of them killed President McKinley. Would it not be a good plan to drive all the Republicans out, too, because it was a Republican that killed Garfield? While we are at it we might just as well drive the Democrats out, also, because it was a Democrat that killed Abraham Lincoln, and while we are at the driving out business why not drive the whole Catholic church out, because all three of these president slayers perchance happened to be Catholics. Enclosed find sixty-five cents for subscription to Lucifer, a stray copy having come my way—also to pay for a few pamphlets.

L. M. H., Colo.:—When Czolgosz said he was an Anarchist of course that was enough to set the whole world in a furor. If he had really been one he would not have mentioned Emma Goldman so quickly to get her into trouble. Nothing that any one can say—the inconsistency of Anarchists having "leaders," "high priestesses," of organizations, plots and conspiracies, of "commands to kill which must be obeyed at the price of death," when they do not believe in the authority of any person over another and rely thoroughly on the responsibility of each for his own deeds and for no one's else—nothing will stop the clamor, the persecution, the misrepresentation, the frenzy of the public hounded on by pulpit, press, and the teachers, until there are more innocent martyrs

J. D. Wilhite, Vallejo, Calif.:—Enclosed find $1.25 to apply on subscription and pamphlets. In looking over back numbers of Lucifer I discover some references to the quack game of skinning the ignorant through the "Lost Manhood" fake. It seems to me that it would be in line with Lucifer's policy of throwing light on sexual subjects, to give some advice in its columns from some of its scientific friends, that would point out the proper course for those to pursue whose physical condition makes them ready victims of those scoundrels. It may be and doubtless is just that vice should be punished with loss of health, but when the victim sees the error of his way it is needless cruelty to leave him, in his search for saving knowledge and help, a prey to those merciless robbers. I sincerely hope the present wave of fanaticism excited by the capitalist press will leave Lucifer unharmed.

James B. Elliott, Phil., Pa.:—Permit me to congratulate Lucifer upon coming of age. I have been a subscriber some ten years or more. I should have liked to seen how the bright star of the morning looked when he was born. A reproduction of the modest little sheet in childhood dress would be a very interesting souvenier for the old time subscriber; but all these little things cost.

I am still hard at work in preparing a suitable programme for the Centennial Anniversary of Paine's Return to America and hope as many of Lucifer's subscribers as are in favor of having the Original Edition of Common Sense placed in Independence Hall, and those desiring to help in the good cause the Paine Memorial Association is engaged in, will send ten cents and receive the portrait of Thomas Paine now hanging in Independence Hall, and full particulars of the objects of the Association to, Jas. B. Elliott, Secretary, 3515 Wallace St., Phila., Pa.

"COMING OF AGE," a brief sketch of the twenty-one years of the life of our paper, together with other interesting matter, is contained in our Anniversary double number. Price, five cents.

In ordering Lucifer sent "by return mail," please inclose stamps for postage; one cent for from one to five copies.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTROLOGY!

REDUCED TO ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Subscription Price in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba	$1.00
Foreign Countries	1.50
Sample Copies	.10

NONE FREE.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For Two Dollars you can have the Sphinx Magazine one year, and a year's forecast written by Mrs. Thompson. The work will be the same that she charges Three Dollars for. This offer is made to introduce the "Sphinx" to new readers. Address

PYRAMID PUBLISHING CO.,
336 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

A Beautiful Head of Hair. For 25 cents we will send our formula for a preparation for restoring gray or faded hair to its natural color; positively promotes its growth stops and prevents its falling out. It is not a dye, but restores the natural color and growth by supplying its proper nourishment. Prepared from herbs that can be procured in any town. Address BOTANICAL COMPANY, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

SEND the date of your birth and 10 cents and we will tell you your prospects in business and social life for one year. GOLD SEAL SUPPLY COMPANY, 131 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

"Our Home Rights." Fifty cents a year. 74 Boylston St., Boston, Mass. Advocates reform in social, political and religious life. Send for sample copy, and you will become a subscriber. From the First of January "Our Home Rights" will be enlarged, and the subscription price will be $1.00 a year.

Dr. Pfeiffer, the editor, has fasted in the interest of science for 21 days and 21 days, and is an expert in the laws of true living. He gives advice by letters. First letter $5.00, subsequent letters $2.00.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 473 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

REF
E
#203
v.5, no.42
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 41. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, OCT. 31, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 889

SESTINA OF THE RED HEART AND WHITE WORLD.

My songs have breathed the music oft of love,
And oft intoned a lyric for the free,
And often chanted Nature and her charm;
And now I sing the Red Heart's purpose great,
And sing the White World that this shall become
When men count manhood more than things that serve.

When men count manhood more than things that serve,
We shall not need, I trow, to speak of love;
For, certes, to fit souls sweet love shall come
In Nature's course, when first the way is free,
But most of all to those whose thoughts are great,
And least to jealous ones who prison charm.

Monopoly of land and love and charm,
And lust of power unpaid to make men serve —
These are the things which are not truly great,
And yet this Dark World yields them all its love,
And mocks at those who prophesy the free,
And says, 'neath heaven, the White things cannot come.

Yet, when the Red Heart beats, shall surely come
The White World with its peace and health and charm,
Its comrades working side by side, yet free,
Each other serving, yet unforced to serve;
Its daily life a garden wherein love
Blooms large, and each man's genius ripens great.

When each man's selfhood grows to ripeness great,
Root-based in Nature, whence all ripe things come,
Its bud and fruiting aye the genius-love
Of perfect skill in dainty feats that charm
And true success in sterner works that serve,—
Art shall be all delightful, being free.

I see my song return to all things free,
It finds no other theme so truly great;
Nature alone, in freedom, may I serve;
It shall be so with all when White days come,
Wherein no deed of mastership may charm,
Nor coldness check the Red Heart's crimson love.

Comrades, be free! and then the White shall come,
Life's commonplace grow great and rich in charm,
And all hearts Red to serve with human love.
—J. Wm. Lloyd, in "The Red Heart in a White World."

The Ruinous Effects of Slave Labor.

BY RACHEL CAMPBELL.

In saying that marriage is largely responsible for the low wages of women, I am not running atilt against that union which exists only in the dreams of poets. I mean marriage as it is exemplified in common usage, and defined in common law; where woman is "given in marriage," and becomes a servant without wages in her husband's home. That a class of unpaid laborers will degrade any branch of industry in which they toil, has already been so clearly and forcibly shown in other departments, that we have only to apply the same logic to this one, and the point is carried. In the old days, when abolition of negro slavery in the south was an unsettled question, we were told that slave labor tended to make the laboring white man poor and keep him so; and that free labor never can compete with slave labor without reducing the free laborer to a condition very little better than slavery. Understanding this principle, Northern working men are forming leagues to resist the encroachment of convict labor, knowing that the kind of work done by unpaid convicts will be so cheapened and degraded that free labor will be driven from the field. Now, just as slave labor operates against free labor, just as the prison system of offering cheap convict labor injures honest working men, just so wife labor affects free working women. It is the character rather than the name of anything that makes it either good or ill. The injury to labor is caused by having a class of unpaid laborers to compete with; and whether that class be called slave, convict, or wife, the ruinous effect on free labor remains unchanged.

I am well aware that wives are not generally considered or thought of as a class of laborers, the popular opinion being that wives are a non-producing class of laborers, depending for support on the labor of their husbands. Many husbands, otherwise intelligent, whose wives toil early and late, honestly and conscientiously take to themselves the whole credit of supporting their families, and not unfrequently their hard working, over-tasked wives share the delusion. Wives have worked so long without wages, that "women's work," sweeping, dusting, cooking, etc.—the never ending routine of house work that must be done in every home, is not regarded as labor exactly. It is an inferior grade, lacking the dignity and importance of man's labor, and when performed by a wife in her husband's house, has no financial value.

There is, however, another way in which wife labor tends to reduce the wages of working girls. The germ of independence has quickened in the hearts of a large majority of the wives of this age. They feel bitterly the humiliation of being obliged to ask for every dime they may need, to explain just what they wish to buy with it, and then argue the case to convince their husbands that the purchase is really necessary; and to avoid the necessity of frequent begging, they go out to the work-shops and get sewing to do at home. They cannot leave home and work in the shops, and in order to get the work they are obliged to underbid the shop-girl and reduce her already low wages a little lower still. Married women, doing cheap work at home, make it possible for manufacturers to get fine, white shirts made for a dollar a dozen, and the other kinds of

Per
HD1937
.L3 sec.3
1901/02
no.42

shop work at proportionally low rates. Full of their own sorrows, and adopting the only method they can find to better their own condition, wives have crowded into this field of labor, destroyed the business of the shop-girl, compelled her to work more hours for less pay, and driven her to want, poverty, destitution and prostitution.

It may perhaps be thought incredible that the condition of working girls is as I have represented. I tell you it is even worse! it can never be told, but must be endured to be understood! Human speech cannot voice the long drawn out agony of a life, robbed of all the hopes and pleasures that make up the joy of living, and forced into a treadmill of constant toil for a bare subsistence. The best years of my life have been dragged out in a New Hampshire cotton mill, so I know what I am talking about. New England people are naturally proud of their manufactories, and many of them seem to think these are run by water power alone. This is a mistake, the water power only propels the machinery. Another force is requisite to make the machinery effective. A deep, full current of human life is constantly pouring in, as freely as water and almost as fast. Women and children especially, are being used up and worn out with a rapidity unthought of by those who look only on the surface of things. If the blood of all the victims, whose lives have been crushed and broken in the mills that stand on its banks, were spilled in its tide, the Merrimac river would flow on towards the Atlantic, as red as were the waters of the Seine on the morning of St. Bartholomew. But blood-spilling is barbarous, and puritanical New England never tolerates barbarism. She freely grants to Capital a "bond" that enables it to take from labor the "pound of flesh," but, because of her pious, puritan faith in her own righteousness, bloodshed is forbidden. The Yankee Shylock, however, has more inventive genius than the old Jew, and finds a way to enforce his bond without either breaking the law or shocking public sentiment. Human strength and endurance are put to work against tireless machinery, in gas-poisoned rooms, until the flesh wastes and the cheek pales as the red blood is gradually transmuted into sweat and tears, and a used operative quietly passes away to make room for a fresh hand. All the proprieties observed, and everything done "decently and in order."

I have no fault to find with the work in a cotton factory, in and of itself. A reasonable amount of work, a reasonable number of hours for a day's labor, and reasonable wages therefor would make of mill work pleasant and healthful employment. As it is, corporate greed has assigned to each operative too much work—too many spindles, too many frames, too many looms, etc., and insisted on too many hours in the day, and in the meantime little by little has reduced wages, till these mills, instead of being "hives of industry," as they are sometimes called, are become hells of torture where men are overworked, women are enslaved, and children sacrificed.—From "The Prodigal Daughter."

Send Us Names.

Lengthening nights and shortening days again invite to reading and reflection. We have a large accumulation of surplus Lucifers that might be doing missionary work among those whose minds have hitherto been cramped and enslaved by old-time superstitions. Recent public events and recent utterances of the leaders of public opinion have stirred many of these indolent minds to do a little thinking on their own account. A few judiciously selected names from each of our subscribers and readers will help us greatly in putting Lucifer's educational work where it will be appreciated. Please send them at once, and if the spirit moves to send a few stamps to help defray expense of wrapping and mailing such help will be thankfully received but the important thing is to get the names, and get them now.

News-Notes and Comments.

In a report of a meeting of the Manhattan Liberal Club, New York, on Friday evening, Oct. 8, Emma Goldman is quoted as saying that, as an Anarchist, she was opposed to violence. She deplored the assassination of McKinley, and said that if the people want to do away with assassins they must do away with the conditions which produce murderers.

* * *

In the trial of Powers for the killing of Gov. Goebel of Kentucky, N. I. McDaniel testified that he heard Dr. Robinson of Frankfort say, after Goebel was shot: "Let's get guns and kill Taylor and every white Republican on the square." This testimony was given on Oct. 23. Up to our going to press we have not learned of the suppression of the Democratic papers of Kentucky.

* * *

A great wave of sympathy for Miss Stone, the missionary held by the bandits, is sweeping over the country. But why for her only? She is an exceedingly robust woman of middle age, if her picture represents her fairly. Little is said of her companion; yet Mme. Tsilka has given birth to a child while held in captivity. It would seem that hers is by far the saddest case. Is she less deserving of sympathy and aid because she is not an American?

* * *

"Keep out the foreigners!" is now the cry. The United States is to be the home of natives, only, henceforth. Very well; but shall we also keep the "foreigners" (ourselves) out of the territory of other nations? The United States is large enough for its citizens. Let them remain at home instead of involving themselves and the nation in broils in the Philippines, in China, in Bulgaria. "Sauce for the goose" should be "sauce for the gander."

* * *

"O, that such difference there should be
'Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee!"

Letters addressed to "Helen Wilmans" are held non-deliverable by the post-office department, and returned, stamped "fraudulent," to the senders. Meanwhile, Col. Post is informed by the officials at Washington that as Helen Wilmans-Post is not being proceeded against, letters addressed to her will be delivered. If Helen Wilmans is convicted, will she be sent to prison while Helen Wilmans-Post is left to do business at the old stand? Those desiring to know more of the case should send for a copy of "Freedom," Sea Breeze, Florida.

* * *

The Rev. Charles G. Adams who recently killed Dr. John G. Jessup, in Berkeley, California, has been acquitted on the plea of insanity. It was claimed that Adams' daughter had appealed to Jessup for protection from her father's brutality. Adams is reported to have said, after the trial:

"If I have had all the things the doctors say I have, the wonder to me is that I have lived through them. I will have to go to an asylum. I do not anticipate that the association with the lunatics there will bother me much. I do not expect to find those people a great deal different from some people I have met who are not in asylums."

Commenting on the case the San Francisco "Star" says:

"If Adams was not insane when he killed Dr. Jessup, then he escaped punishment for a crime most foul. If he was insane, then it is proper that he should be confined now, however sane he may appear, to prevent his doing further harm. Too many people escape punishment for taking human life, on the plea of insanity; but if it were once understood that any one acquitted on such a plea would be confined for life in an insane asylum, it would seldom be resorted to."

* * *

An interesting case has just been decided by the Illinois Supreme Court. Curtis E. Robinson died, leaving an estate of $1,000,000. He had lived for many years with Johanna Schoeninger, whose husband was still living. Robinson's wife, also, was alive, though no children had been born of the marriage. After the birth of several children to Robinson and Mrs. Schoeninger, they married, Robinson's wife having died, though Mrs. Schoeninger's husband still lived. Robinson's brothers and sisters claimed the estate, arguing that the children, being illegitimate, could not inherit. The court decided in favor of the children, giving them the property. Without going into either the question of the rightfulness of the possession of such a large fortune by anyone, or that of the mixed-up relations of the people concerned—of which no one can judge fairly without knowing all the facts in the case—it seems a wise decision. There should be more parental responsibility for offspring, rather than less. The theory that children have no claims on parents unless those parents have gone through a certain formula, is most pernicious and mischievous.

* * *

One of the most notable instances of passive resistance against a law-sanctioned mammoth steal is that of the citizens of St. Clair County, Missouri. More than a quarter of a century ago they voted to issue $25,000 in bonds to aid the construction of a railroad through the county. The promoters of the road got possession of the bonds and sold them, but the road was never built. The citizens paid some of the bonds and repudiated the remainder. The United States court, on hearing the case when the county was sued ordered that a special tax be levied for the payment of the bonds. This the county judge refused to do, and was sentenced to jail by the federal judge for contempt of court. Each succeeding county judge, for thirty years, has served his term of office in jail rather than levy the special tax for the payment of the bonds. The debt is now over $1,500,000, with no prospect of compromise. If a man orders a ton of coal and it is not delivered he is not forced to pay for it. There have been many cases where citizens of a county have been compelled to pay for railroads that were never built, but the action of St. Clair County is perhaps as unprecedented as the attempted robbery through the federal courts is outrageous. All honor to the St. Clair County practical Anarchists.

L. H.

The Gentle Art of Persuasion as Practiced by the Russian Police.

The truth about the extreme brutality displayed by the Cossacks during the late student riots is gradually coming to the knowledge of those beyond the reach of the Czar's police. Here are a few facts concerning the trouble at St. Petersburg on March 4:

Before the demonstration by the students began there was not a policeman or a Cossack in sight; the evident intention being to throw off their guard the malcontents and gather them all into one trap, as Bismarck wished to do with the revolutionists of Europe during the commune of Paris. Since early morning the people began to gather near the Kazansky Sobar (a large cathedral). Fully ten thousand people, consisting of students, men and women, lawyers, writers and laborers, were in the assemblage. About noon one of the students began to read from a manifesto, copies of which had been freely distributed to the crowd. This manifesto set forth the reasons for the demonstration and protest. The cheer that greeted the conclusion of the reading seemed to be the signal for the Cossacks. They rode from every gate and side street into the crowd, trampling men, women and children under their horses' hoofs. There was no effort to disperse the crowd. The brutal soldiers rode in a circle, much as the vanqueros do around stampeded cattle on the American plains, using sword and quirt, till not a man or woman in all that vast multitude stood upright. The Cossacks then drove their horses upon the upturned faces of their victims. The fiendishness of the Cossacks stands without a parallel, and only when the truth leaked out that they had been given vodka (whisky), by the higher officials, was it understood.

The policemen fell to work when the soldiers had completed their bloody work. They dragged the young women students by the hair of the head across the square and threw them into buggies and drove off with them. Some not utterly crushed staggered to their feet and vainly tried to escape, holding, in some cases, their cheeks, that had been laid open by the Cossacks' swords, together, that they might not bleed to death. The Cossacks made a special effort to murder the ringleaders. One was dragged to his feet and lashed with the lead-tipped quirt till he fell on the pavement and neither moved nor breathed. A large number of mechanics gathered together with the intention of plunging into the seething mass of humanity to aid their fellow-workers. Without warning, volley after volley was poured into them from the guns of a re-enforcing army and hundreds fell to rise no more. No one even now has the least idea of the number of these workingmen who were killed. It is another secret to be dragged from the officials when the final revolution comes.

The chief of police, Kleygels, is entirely responsible for this massacre, and to show in what esteem he is held by the Czar, the latter granted him a private audience and with his own "royal" hands pinned a large medal on his murderous breast.

"I (the writer) saw this brute calmly smoke a cigarette in the midst of the carnage, and when a student with his face split open begged him to interfere and save a sixteen-year-old girl who was being fearfully misused by the drunken Cossacks, saw him playfully puff the cigarette smoke into the bleeding wound and tell the student to go to the devil."

The government sets much store by public opinion in Russia, as elsewhere, during riots. Every effort is put forth to turn the shopkeepers and the working men against the students. To that end, in the late trouble Kleygels resorted to a trick that explains more than volumes the subtlety of his Muscovite character. He sent his police, dressed as students, to the various cathedrals of St. Petersburg, and ordered them to desecrate the altars and other holy things. The police pulled the garments of the priests and tweaked their beards, and laughed and danced and sang bawdy songs. They kicked the images and put cigarette ashes in the holy water. This had the desired effect. The Russian character is essentially religious and prayerful. Anything approaching blasphemy arouses their hatred. And when the report of the supposed students' actions spread over the city, the real students had not a friend to whom they could appeal.

Just one more incident, then I close. This is so horrible that only the good it may do by stirring up a feeling in America against the Russian government impels me to mention it. The young women students who were caught at the demonstration of March 4th were stripped naked and whipped through the streets. It is almost impossible to believe such things could happen in this twentieth century, and possibly some doubt may linger in the minds of some; but when we have Professor Belalubsky banished from Russia because he protested against this one act, there need be no longer a doubt.—From the San Francisco "Star."

Commission of Crime Not Essential to Conviction.

In sentencing Most to one year's imprisonment, Justice Holbrook enunciated a principle that is about as bad in law as anything that Most has put forth is in political philosophy. He said:

It is not necessary to trace any connection in this late article with the assassination of the late president. The offense here in the eye of the law is precisely the same as if the event had never occurred.

Truly enough it does not seem to have been necessary to connect Most with any crime in order to jail him; but I think it ought to be necessary. I may be wrong, but it seems to me that in punishing for the commission of a crime there should be a line drawn between the innocent and the guilty—that is between the man who committed it and the man who did not. Otherwise, what approval has a person, except his own conscience, for being innocent? Most reprints Heinzen, saying Assassinate rulers. The Bible Society reprints Moses, saying. Stone to death the man who picks up sticks on Saturday. These are "Twin Thoughts," both sanguinary and barbarous, but the promulgator of one goes to jail, while the disseminator of the other goes to heaven, let us hope.—Geor E. Macdonald in "Truth Seeker."

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

889.

Do these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer? If so, your subscription expires with this number. Please renew for another year.

When Lucifer fails to reach its subscribers, notice thereof by postal should be sent us at once.

Cowardly Murder---McKinley and Czolgosz.

To kick or strike a man when he is down and disarmed, even though an enemy, is always considered a mean act, a cowardly act—an act that no honorable or brave man will be guilty of.

To kick or strike an unarmed, unresisting or surrendered enemy, so hard that he dies from the effect of the blow, is usually considered murder, cowardly murder, and punished as such.

On the sixth of last month, at the Buffalo Exposition, a murder was committed. It was a treacherous act, a stupid, idiotic crime, but it was not a cowardly murder. McKinley was not down, and though himself unarmed he was closely guarded by armed men—an instructive commentary, by the way, upon our costly police service when these well-paid guardians of the official head of the national government allowed their charge to be approached by an unknown man with his right hand muffled in a handkerchief, and this hand tucked away under the lappel of his coat.

Yes, it was a treacherous murder, because, like unto Ehud, Joab, Jael and other Bible heroes and heroines, Czolgosz approached his victim under the guise of friendship, and without giving warning of his murderous intent; but it was not a cowardly murder. The assailant knew full well, if not wholly demented, that if he succeeded in his purpose his own life would be forfeited to the Christian's code of justice. To do that which will bring certain death to the doer is not commonly called a cowardly act.

* * *

But what of the electrocution that is to take place Oct. 31, within the silent walls of the Auburn prison?

The victim in this case will be down; he will be unarmed and helpless. He has long since surrendered to superior force. He has long since acknowledged his mistake—provided reports do not lie; says he does not know why he fired the fatal shot, and is sorry he did it. His assailant, the executioner, will not meet him on equal terms, but will be armed with the means to kill. And not one assailant alone, but the entire force of the prison guards, and these backed by the armies and navies of a nation numbering more than seventy millions of people, will do the killing.

Under such very unequal conditions, will not the killing of the helpless prisoner Czolgosz be MURDER? COWARDLY murder? Murder such as the "roughs" and "toughs" of frontier life would scorn to be guilty of?

MARTYRDOM.

Yes, the killing of the man McKinley was a crime, one of the very worst of the calendar. A crime because it was committed against a MAN, and NOT against a RULER; for mark you! the ruler was not hurt at all. Rulership went on all the same as before, and would have gone on if Roosevelt and all the officers of the national government had been slain. Rulership would have gone on if the NATION, as such, had been slain, for the nation means simply the officials of the artificial machine called the national government. The people would have remained, but with their present superstitious notions about government they would at once have elected a new set of rulers. Like the frogs in the fable they must have rulers if for no other purpose than to be devoured by them.

Yes, the act of Czolgosz was a crime, not against McKinley alone—to whom as a man life was probably as sweet as to any other man; as sweet, perhaps, as to the overworked and underpaid father of a numerous family, such as McKinley did not have—but a crime against the cause of the working man and woman, a crime against the cause of human liberty and justice, in whose behalf it is supposed the deed was committed. Hence it was MORE than a crime, it was a political BLUNDER, which, as can easily be shown, is worse than an ordinary crime, because it has the power of multiplying itself manifold.

Czolgosz had seen and felt, doubtless, the utter powerlessness of the working people as against the monopolistic trusts. He had seen, perhaps, the cartoons, "Willie and his Papa," in the daily papers, representing McKinley as the product or child of the trusts, and imagined, illogically imagined, that if he could kill the child the parent would die; which is simply another way of saying that if he could kill a ruler he would kill rulership—with the result that while the man McKinley is dead rulership still lives; rulership is more alive, much more alive than ever before. The trusts are much more firmly established than ever before, because now they have their MARTYR!

* * *

It was the martyrdom of the Nazarene reformer and of his apostles that made creedal Christianity a success. It was the martyrdom of Abraham Lincoln, more than any other one thing, that made nationalism a success in this country. It was the martyrdom of Julius Cæsar that made Roman imperialism a success, and no event in our political history has given such impetus to the drift towards imperialism as has the assassination, the martyrization of William McKinley by Leon Czolgosz.

And what is imperialism? What but the concentration of irresponsible power in the hands of one man or of a few men. In former times power meant militarism, mainly. Now it means COMMERCIALISM, mainly, with the military arm to enforce its behests.

What is this but Mark Hannaism, J. Pierpont Morganism, Schwabism, Rockefellerism, behind the national government?

Yes, the crown of martyrdom placed upon the head of William McKinley was all that was needed, two months ago, to establish imperialistic commercialism as the recognized policy of our national government. The pocket pistol of Leon Czolgosz supplied the long-felt want, and now, henceforth and forever, he who says a word or writes a line against the TRUSTS, or against the figure-heads that they may set up, shall be deemed guilty of treason, and dealt with as a traitor against the national government, the plutocratic empire.

* * *

But just here there comes a suggestion that perhaps the martyr business may be OVERDONE. There is a proverb which says, it is a poor rule that wont work both ways. If the pistol of Czolgosz set the crown of martyrdom upon the head of William McKinley, may not the electric bolt of a New York sheriff do the same thing for Leon Czolgosz? and may not the canonization of McKinley's assassin lead to other assassinations?

If McKinley's name will go down to posterity as the martyr of and for capitalistic imperialism, will not that of Czolgosz be regarded by many as fit company for Leonidas, the immortal Spartan; of Arnold Winkelreid, the deliverer of Switzerland; of Joan of Arc, and of thousands more who in all the ages have bravely thrown their lives away in the forlorn hope that humanity, the larger self-hood, would profit by the sacrifice?

* * *

Let me not be misunderstood. Most sincerely do I desire to do no injustice to the memory of these two men. Regarding the earthly career of both as now run, I would say that neither did anything in life to merit the canonization of martyrdom. Neither was a hero, a philanthropist or benefactor of his race, in any large sense or degree, and yet it is probable if not certain that each did what he thought to be right and best under the circumstances. Neither was exceptionally good or exceptionally bad. With like heredity and environment I myself would have done as McKinley did, and with like heredity and environment I would have done as Czolgosz did. Each was probably the slave of "duty," as each understood that much used and much abused term.

What more can be said?

Praise and blame are alike irrational, illogical, unphilosophical. McKinley was an opportunist; a very capable man, a very practical man, with instincts that led him to side with the rich and powerful few, rather than with the poor and oppressed masses. Hence he easily persuaded himself that a strong centralized government in the hands of a few strong and capable rulers was better for all concerned than any attempt at self-government by the poor, the ignorant, the incapable. In his youth he took the sword—to invade the people of the south,—and in his riper years he sent his armies to invade the people of the Philippines, and in his case is now fulfilled the saying, "He that taketh the sword shall be slain by the sword"—figuratively speaking.

Czolgosz was in most things the counterpart or exact opposite of the man whose life he cut short—he and the medical doctors! Czolgosz was impractical—a dreamer, as I take it—incapable of adapting himself to his environment. Had he been capable of becoming a monopolist, he too might have been found among the oppressors of the poor and the weak.

But why go on? To sum up:

Our irrational, artificial, anti-natural, conventional, tradition-ruled human society will continue giving birth to McKinleys and Czolgoszes, especially the latter, until WOMANHOOD awakes to a sense of its responsibility, and demands the conditions necessary to create a better race of human beings. Then and not till then, will rulers cease to rule, and assassins cease to kill rulers.

M. HARMAN.

Pulpit Pointers.

Scanning the reports of the pulpit utterances on Sunday October 20, several things attracted the eye. Under a large-type heading "Lauds the Reds from Pulpit," were four sub-heads giving the chief points in the sermon of one of Chicago's most popular preachers, a sermon so wholly different in tone from that of the average talk from the pulpit in regard to Anarchists and Anarchism that it seems to have created a profound sensation among the hearers. The following paragraphs are taken from the "Chicago Chronicle" of Monday, Oct. 21:

Rev. Frank Crane at the Hyde Park Methodist Episcopal church yesterday morning furnished a surprise when in the course of his sermon he took occasion to defend Emma Goldman and the Socialists. Although the pulpits of Chicago have been denouncing in unmeasured terms Anarchy and its believers, Rev. Mr. Crane insisted that Socialists and reformers of every class were advanced thinkers.

"When Emma Goldman was arrested," he said, "she had in her hand a copy of the book 'Toward Democracy.' How many of you have read it, or how many of you could read it through? You say that Socialism, Single Tax and nearly all reforms are wrong. How do you know? Have you studied these questions? No, you prefer to travel in the same rut that you have traveled for years.

"Down at the public library you will find books on political economy and on sociology thumbed and worn and marked. Who did it? Did any of you believers in the constitution of the same old social order of things that we have had for years do it? No, it was done by the men who cannot afford to buy the books they love.

POINTS TO THE "DEAD ONES."

"They are progressive and they study the questions that you condemn without reason. Those men are thinkers. You are the dead ones."

* * *

RICH ALSO ARE ANARCHISTS.

Under this heading we find the following in the same paper:

Rev. A. Lazenby, preaching in the Unity church yesterday morning said:

"The present distress of society arises from the fact that so many people do not feel under moral compulsion, any moral authority. They are the children of impulse, the creatures of opportunity. They are the slaves of liberty.

"Not merely the low-down but the high-up in society feel themselves free to do as they like instead of as they should. And when you have a crowd of people making license their only law then you have a condition of Anarchy. And it matters not whether those people gather about the court or herd together in hovels, they are to all intents and purposes Anarchists."

WANTS TAX ON CHURCHES.

Is given as the leading feature of the Sunday discourse of another leader among Chicago's pulpitarians:

M. M. Mangasarian spoke before the Independent Religious society at the Grand opera house yesterday on "The American Church."

"The church is not protected in America as it is in Europe, though it is not as yet completely divorced from the state," he said. "You and I are taxed to pay the bills of the churches. The building in which we hold our services is assessed, while the Methodist church, within a few doors south of us, is exempt from taxation. This gives them a decided advantage over us. They are protected, we are not. You and I are taxed to support the minister of that church.

"Is not that a species of Europeanism? Does it not seem as if America, while endeavoring to divorce the state from the church, has only kept the word of promise to the ear and broken it to the heart? If the liberal people would combine their forces it would not be long before the vast property of the churches would yield an income to the municipalities."

SCORES RICH IN CHURCHES.

Under this heading is given the following protest against the almost universal sway of dollars in ecclesiastical organizations:

Rev. J. Clayton Youker, at the Euclid Avenue M. E. church,

Oak Park, yesterday spoke upon the influence of the wealthy in religious work. He said:

"The monetary minority is largely composed of individuals who by deeds, if not by words, insist that gold and not grace shall dominate in ecclesiastical affairs. Finding its wealth apparently omnipotent in the world of finance, it demands for its dollars, which are often dirty, equal sway in the sphere of religion.

"It insists upon being the dominating power in the individual church organization. So far as the preacher is concerned it arrogates to itself the supreme function of passing upon his ministerial qualifications. It adds that the pulpit shall make no attack upon its pet foibles. If 90 per cent of a church membership wants a preacher returned and the 10 per cent of rich persons do not he cannot return; dollars must count for more than people."

These and a few other pulpit utterances in the same line, or similar lines, that could be gleaned from one only of the Chicago dailies, of the date named, would seem to show that Gold, Grundy and Co. have not yet succeeded in muzzling all the preachers of this mammon-ruled city.

M. H.

The Crusade of Plutocracy.

Among the papers foremost in defense of freedom of press and of speech, as against the crusade for censorship and suppression now so popular everywhere, there is none that deserves more honorable mention than does "The Public," published at 1501 Schiller Bldg. Chicago, Louis F. Post, editor. Its size and shape make it very convenient for propaganda work. Only one dollar per year, weekly. In a recent issue the editor filled several pages reviewing the situation and prospects in regard to freedom of criticism under the rule of plutocracy with which we are now threatened. The following paragraph is a fair sample of this exceptionally strong and able editorial:

"But blind indeed must that man be who sees in this programme only a move against Anarchists. The sentiments of philosophic Anarchists that really make their speeches objectionable to the plutocratic engineers of this conspiracy against free government in America, are cordially shared by every one who opposes the political and economic influences which are everywhere making a few rich through privilege and keeping the many consequently poor. This crusade of plutocracy, nominally against Anarchists, is in reality against all who express these sentiments. It includes, also, such as oppose the policy of conquest, colonialism and imperialism. Indeed it includes all who criticise with any vigor at all the political party which happens to be in power.

"Is this not so? If not, why has the assassination of President McKinley been coolly charged to Bryanism? If not, why is it tr'nced to Bryan's speeches criticising the imperialistic policy upon which our republic has embarked? and the inequitable distribution of wealth which its laws promote? If not, why has it been charged to public men and private men upon no other basis than that they have spoken against conquest, against militarism, against colonialism, against trusts and against other public policies that tend to subvert the principles of liberty and to make the few rich at the expense of the many?

"Let there be no mistake. This movement for the abrogation of constitutional guarantees of free speech and for the creation of a new form of treason—or rather, the revival of an old one,—has for its object larger game than philosophical Anarchists. No effective law to suppress philosophical Anarchists can possibly be drafted which would not be a most powerful weapon for any party in power to use against the opposition."

Readers of Lucifer will do well to send for sample copies, and if possible subscribe for this valiant defender of liberty and justice.

M. H.

Once upon a Time a Constitution followed a Flag for a Considerable Distance, and a Humble Citizen gave it a great deal of attention.

He would neither be Convinced that the Constitution followed the Flag nor that the Flag took the Pace from the Constitution.

Sometimes he thought one way, then Again he Thought the Other, and still Again he did not know what he Thought.

After awhile the Tax Assessor came Around and Explained to the Humble Citizen that in Cases like This it was Necessary to Pay for the Track whereon these Trials of Speed took Place.

Moral—The Humble Citizen can rest Assured that he is Marked for the Gate Money right Along.—Baltimore American.

A Theory of the Determination of Sex Questioned.

I was very much pleased to see in a late number of Lucifer communications from two of my friends: E. F. R. and Aunt Elmina. I agree with Mrs. R. most thoroughly: Nothing contributes so much to making a woman lovable as an independent income. A demonstration of affection from such a woman is always free from the suspicion of any particle of interest other than that which attaches to a man's personality. I wish she had added to her statement "When sex is properly understood and taught we shall have gods on earth," the word practiced, making it stand thus: "understood, taught and practiced," because there are always so many who know better than they do. To be familiar with a theory is doubtless beneficial; but it takes the living impulse of action behind the saw to cut ice.

I entirely fail to see how Schenck has proved Aunt Elmina's theory in regard to the determination of sex, or that the facts sustain the position she takes in a former article as well. Will she kindly explain how it happens that up to a certain stage of development the embryo is always female; and that when male characteristics appear it is never until later? That is to say, how does it happen that if there be no change by further development beyond that stage, the child remains (not becomes) a female?

It seems to me, Auntie, that your conclusion is logical, rather than correct; as is the conclusion drawn in a former letter to Lucifer where your finding is that because female children are produced more frequently when the means of life are easily obtainable, and male children with greater frequency under difficult living conditions, that the female is therefore the superior product, or a later stage of development. Unfortunately the history of the development (or evolution, if you prefer) of the human race, as shown by the scientific observation of the embryo, in no wise supports such a conclusion; and, in fact, directly confutes it. As a matter of logic merely, it would seem that one might more reasonably conclude that the greater number of females born under favorable circumstances or easy living conditions indicates rather nature's method of regulating the consuming power by the relative plenty of food and the ease with which it may be obtained. The reproductive power of a community does not depend upon the number of males it contains so much as upon the number of its females, the "time limit" which nature imposes upon the female power of reproduction being no factor of the male capacity. That is to say, where the means of life are easily obtainable nature's method of meeting the more favorable living conditions is by bringing forth an increased number of females, affording the opportunity for increased racial production or consuming power; and that under conditions of hardship an increased proportion of males is a most effective means of controlling increase of population, as the productive capacity of a community depends upon the female factor as stated above. Have I made this clear?

At the same time, understand, I cheerfully and thoroughly discredit the Biblical account of the crowning act of the creation. Whether created or evolved the female was first, and the male the afterthought. Are you contented with this proposition in place of yours?

L. A. DuBois.

63 West 95th St., New York City.

Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes.

This is the title of a newly published pamphlet by Edwin C. Walker. The contents are:

Brotherhood of Man: The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only;" Definitions of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

With Appendix:

The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization, and the Folly and Cruelty of It All.

Price 15 cents. For sale at this office.

Books Received.

Socialism in the Home, by May Walden Kerr. Number 28 of the Pocket Library of Socialism, published monthly at 50 cts. per year, by Chas. H. Kerr & Co. 56 5th Avenue, Chicago; price single copy five cents.

A Sketch of Social Evolution, by W. Boyd Mackay. Number 30 of the same monthly publication, price of single copy five cts.

Socialism vs. Anarchy, by A. M. Simons, editor "International Socialist Review." Number 31, (September) of the same series. Address publisher, or this office.

* * *

The Temple of the Rosy Cross—the Soul, its Powers, Migrations and Transmigrations. Fourth edition revised and enlarged. By B. T. Dowd, 1901. Eulian Publishing Co., Salem Mass. Cloth and gold; price two dollars post paid.

To those interested in studies of the "occult," this book will prove very interesting. As pointers showing the drift of the author's thought, here are a few specimen paragraphs:

"The belief in a creator who uttered the first curse is a hereditary poison which destroys freedom and even the soul itself. Besides it furnishes an excuse for men to curse, for that which God does, every 'Godlike' person should at least try to do."

"The concept of God's justice as set forth in the legend of creation and fall of man, is a conception unworthy of a savage, though it has been accepted in its literal aspect as absolute truth, and worshipped from time immemorial, until it has become the soul of individuals, families and governments."

"Had Jesus manifested the powers of a God, vanished from the cross, etc., he would have converted the Jewish nation in a day, and they would have worshipped him as a God; but what good would it have done? Lo! the world has been worshipping gods for countless ages, and some portion has been worshipping Jesus ever since his crucifixion, but what good has it done?"

VARIOUS VOICES.

O. P Whitman, El Paso, Ill.:—My wife and I are with you in your work, and we feel this cause ought to have the hearty support of every good, honest, and free thinker. We intend to give you ours as long as we can raise the money to keep up our subscription. We enclose money for which send us Lucifer a year.

H. W. W., Cal.:—No matter when my subscription expired—here is another $5, as a result of the big storm of intolerance and unprecedented brutality since Haymarket event. I inclose $10. Give $5 to "Free Society." I will hereafter give Lucifer, "Free Society" and "Discontent" at least $10 a year. Now is the time that all friends of free speech and free press should support our standard-bearers.

Marion B. Carter, Lockport, New York:—Although my subscription to Lucifer is paid to No. 1073 I wish to avail myself of your premium offer, so inclose $1 for "Nora," and Lucifer another year. I like Lucifer better and better with every number, and wish you success, and better health for the dear editor. May both father and daughter live many years to continue the good work they are doing. I also enclose a few stamps for copies of No. 886 to give to my friends.

J. G. Hunter, Sheridan, Wyoming:—As I see that my subscription for Lucifer, has nearly expired, I enclose two dollars, to pay for same one year and a copy of "Karezza." May be able to do something for Lucifer after awhile. Am strongly in favor of M. Harman taking a rest. He is too valuable to be worn out, and further I have every confidence in Lillian, that she will fill the editorial chair to the full satisfaction of the subscribers. I think by the actions of the officers of the law, in Chicago, that Illinois might as well follow the example of Virginia, and abolish the freedom of speech and of the press, as it seems to be a dead letter in Chicago, at least.

While I am a Socialist, I recognize that the ideal government is Anarchy, but believe that it can be reached quicker through Socialism. I do not consider that the mass of the people have as yet evoluted far enough, to make Anarchy possible. Where can I procure "The Philosophy of Anarchism" by Parsons? Find it very hard to procure subscribers, and would rather pay for a subscription, than hunt up a subscriber.

Similarity of temperament and tastes, pleasant intercourses, services rendered will secure friendship, procure pleasure and obtain gratitude, but not love, which is inspired and is never given as a reward.—Max O'Rell.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

ASTROLOGY!

REDUCED TO ONE DOLLAR A YEAR

Subscription Price in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba	$1.00
Foreign Countries	1.50
Sample Copies	.10

NONE FREE.

SPECIAL OFFER.

For Two Dollars you can have the Sphinx Magazine one year, and a year's forecast written by Mrs. Thompson. The work will be the same that she charges Three Dollars for. This offer is made to introduce the "Sphinx" to new readers. Address

PYRAMID PUBLISHING CO.,
336 Boylston St., Boston, Mass.

A Beautiful Head of Hair. For 25 cents we will send our formula for a preparation to restore natural color; positively prevents its growth stops and prevents its falling out. It is not a dye, but restores the natural color and growth by supplying its proper nourishment. Prepared from herbs that can be procured in any town. Address BOTANICAL COMPANY, Back Bay, Boston, Mass.

SEND the date of your birth and 10 cents and we will tell you your prospects in business and social life for one year. GOLD SEAL SUPPLY COMPANY, 191 Dartmouth Street, Boston, Mass.

"Our Home Rights" Fifty cents a year. 14 Boylston St., Boston, Mass. Advocates reform in social, political and religious life. Send for sample copy, and you will become a subscriber. From the First of January "Our Home Rights" will be enlarged, and the subscription price will be $1.00 a year.

Dr. Pfeiffer the editor, has fasted in the interest of science for 21 days and 21 days, and is an expert in the laws of true living. He gives advice by letters. First letter $5.00, subsequent letters $2.00.

Wanted;— Address of Ladies, free from religion and Mother Grundy-ism, who will correspond with gentlemen likewise free. Gentlemen must send ten cents silver and two cent stamp for List. Arthur C. Everett, N. M., Santa Barbara, General Delivery, California.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp)
Snowville, Va. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 3c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 3c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth. $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker, 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitsGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 20c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2½ Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 42. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 7. E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 890

CROSS AND CROWN.

'Tis weary watching wave by wave,
And yet the tide heaves onward;
We climb, like corals, grave by grave,
That pave a pathway sunward;
We're driven back for our next fray
A newer strength to borrow,
And where the vanguard camps today
The rear shall rest tomorrow.

Tho' hearts brood o'er the past, our eyes
With smiling futures glisten;
For, lo! our day bursts up the skies—
Lean out your souls and listen!
The world is rolling freedom's way,
And ripening with her sorrow;
Take heart—who bear the cross today
Shall wear the crown tomorrow.

—Wm. Lloyd Garrison.

"Purifying" the Tenements.

These paragraphs concerning "tenement house purification" are being put into type in the last days of August, 1901, after a year of religious, political, and so-called moral agitating and crusading, after a year of threatening and raiding, and nearly two months after the new tenement house law was expected to go into effect in New York. "Was expected," I have said, but that statement needs modification; probably no observing man of affairs had any expectation that the anti-vice part of the law would be enforced generally; I do not know even that it was enacted in order to be honestly enforced—I should say, rather that I am morally certain that the impartial application of its provisions dealing with the social evil was neither expected nor desired by the men who put it among other laws of similar character and like ineffectiveness. Putting it on the statute books has opened a new and exceedingly rich field for tillage by official and semi-official blackmailers.

What is the law? One part of it cannot be condemned off-hand; if enforced, undoubtedly it would do much to give to the masses of the poor more securely built and better arranged dwelling places, more healthful homes and surroundings. The object is most commendable, its realization greatly to be desired. But the zealous men and women who have been instrumental in securing these amendments to the building law should understand that those who will occupy the more commodious and sanitary tenements will pay for the improved conditions of existence, that better houses and better neighborhoods mean higher rents. Where shall those go who now are paying for rooms all they can spare for what purpose? Must they not seek cheaper, less wholesome, quarters or cut their expenditures for food, clothing, and other necessaries? Or, will their wages rise as rents advance under the spur of the law? If there is no such corresponding increase of the earnings of the tenants and if building improvements are general, is it not self-evident that this augmentation of the rent-cost of living must result in pushing into pauperism or crime the most helpless members of the poorest class?

If the worker had the products of his labor, should we be confronted by this painful dilemma? What is the part played here by monopoly, rent, trade discriminations, interest, and speculative profits? Will legislatures and tenement-house reformers try to discover a connection between these absorbers of labor products and the terrible conditions they are examining in the crowded sections of our cities? Really, is it inevitable that smoother streets, better sanitation, more parks, and improved houses should be positive hardships to many?

Now to the social-evil features of the law: The hope to extirpate either sexual vice or official corruption by means of the machinery here set up is wholly visionary. On the contrary, the ultimate effect will be an increase of both. The landlords are made directly and financially responsible for the presence of the women. If they do not take the initiative in eviction, notices may be served upon them, liens filed, and receivers of rents and profits appointed. Touching this matter, "The Evening Sun" of July 1, 1901, said:

> All over the East Side and in other parts of the town where there are tenements or where disorderly women are likely to be found, patrolmen were making a house-to-house canvas to-day, warning the women whose characters were well known in the neighborhood to be undesirable that they must get out. Now that the eviction of such persons is "put up" to the landlords, it is thought likely by those familiar with the aspects of the question that something effectual will really be done. ["Something effectual" will be done, no doubt, as in the past.]

"The Times," of the same date, after showing how difficult the enforcement of the sanitary provisions of the law will be, said concerning the parts of the law that attack prostitution:

> In the moral purification of the tenements the work which largely devolves upon the Health Board demands moral courage of a much higher order than that required in enforcing cleanliness and requiring necessary repairs. What is done in this direction will touch a very tender spot which Tammany does not want to have probed, much less surgically explored. The citizen who supposes that vice has flourished in the tenements unknown to the police, or that the abandoned women who have flocked to the apartment houses of the formerly clean and respectable neighborhoods have hidden themselves so effectually that the wardman can not find them for the purpose of blackmail, is credulous indeed. Tammany is understood to have lost much revenue of late from vice which it has found itself unable to protect, and if this source of profit is cut off, the official responsible for such destructive activity will have committed the unpardonable political sin, and his fate, so far as Tammany is concerned, will be that of the scapegoat of the Hebrew ceremonial. President Sexton [Health Board] may have forgotten that the definition of a tenement in the new law includes the better classes of tenement houses, and if he does not know that a great many of his political friends are the owners of such houses, which should be designated by the familiar danger signal of the East Side, the ominous red light, the fact will be borne in upon him with disagreeable directness the moment he begins to serve notices upon owners, to file liens when such notices are disregarded, and to appoint receivers of rents and profits when the liens are not discharged.

It will be observed that both "The Evening Sun" and "The Times" speak as enemies of Tammany Hall. This would not call for comment were it not for the fact that it appears to be taken for granted that the "protection" of vice is a party offense, that Tammany must be overthrown in order that better conditions may prevail, and it is assumed that better conditions would prevail were Tammany permanently out of power. The microscopical atom of truth in this assumption is that Tammany is in a better position to blackmail vice than are its opponents because it is more compact and homogeneous, and is in a more efficient state of discipline, than are their parties and factions. If Tammany could be put out of power and kept out it would be by a more compact and homogeneous and a better disciplined party than is Tammany itself. Let this party come, let Tammany be submerged, let the laws through which Tammany levies blackmail remain on the statute-book, let human nature remain what it is, and the supplanter of Tammany would become very soon as great a stench in the nostrils as the Wigwam is today. And the laws are likely to remain, human nature will not change suddenly in a noticeable degree; so the old dance of oppression and corruption will go on from year to year, as it has through the centuries.

This new law, in so far as it attempts to curtail prostitution by holding the landlords responsible, puts a new and tremendously powerful squeezing machine into the control of the officials. The women are here, the over-breeding swarms that bring them into existence are here, the economic conditions and moral and religious superstitions that drive them into prostitution are here, the masculine demand for them is here, the buildings are here, the owners of the buildings are here, the police and higher officials, who, in a measure, can enforce the law, or who can shut their eyes, are here; and so, in some way, the women and the buildings will get together, the landlords will pay and curse, the officials will receive and smile.

"The Times" refers to "the abandoned women who have flocked to the apartment houses of the formerly clean and respectable neighborhoods." Well, how came they to flock there? The cause of the migration is not forgotten by "The Times," we may be sure. It will not be forgotten while the Rev. Mr. Parkhurst is remembered. Rather, that hegira from the slums bids fair to be his enduring monument. These women were scattered abroad by a mad crusade, just as they or their successors will be scattered again and more widely by this later mad crusade. Such crusades, such statutes as this which went into effect (in imagination) on the first day of July, 1901, are so many evidences of the miserable folly and Bourbonism of mankind, and especially of the folly and Bourbonism of the moralists who sit in the shadow of tradition and the elected persons who sit in the place of authority. "Behold with how little wisdom the world is governed!"

This law, which decrees that the rents of property used for purposes of prostitution shall be seized for the city, seems to be a step in the direction of the avowed socialization of the industry. Among other lawgivers, Solon set an example in the municipalization of prostitution. Dr. W. W. Sanger, in his "History of Prostitution" (p. 43) says:

> Solon, . . . by law formally established houses of prostitution in Athens, and filled them with female slaves. They were called Dicteria and the female tenants Dicteriades. Bought with the public money, and bound by law to satisfy the demands of all who visited them, they were in fact public servants, and their gains were a legitimate source of revenue to the state. Prostitution became a state monopoly, and so profitable that, even in Solon's lifetime, a superb temple, dedicated to Venus the courtezan, was built out of the fund accruing from this source. The fee charged, however, appears to have been small.

In its issue of August 30, 1901, "The Times" says:

> It can not too often be repeated that it is not the hope of the men engaged in an effort to purify the government of this city to extirpate the particular kind of vice the traffic in which gave rise to this latest incident. [A sensational raid.] Their plans are not directed to any such extreme achievement. They are determined, however, if they can, to stop the notorious corrupt protection which the police extend to this and to other forms of vice and lawlessness. The evil to which their energies are directed is not one inherent in the social conditions of great cities. . . . It is entirely practicable to abolish it wholly by the right kind of a change in the elective offices of the city.

That is optimism. But the facts, in brief, are these: A city having anti-vice statutes may—must—do one of three things: One. Let it be known that the statutes are not to be enforced; then no one will be simple enough to pay the police for "protection." Two. Do as New York does, as so many other cities do, pretend the statutes are in force, enforce them here and there and once in a while; then the police can extort pay for "protection" to their hearts' content. This is tyranny tempered by robbery: Three. Suppress every bit of vice in sight; hunt for it everywhere; try to do what "The Times" says the crusaders have no hope of doing, that is to say, endeavor to extirpate sexual vice; send to prison every official who is convicted of bribe-taking. Then at the next election another party will take hold of the city government; Plan No. Two—the present plan—will be tried again, for, so long as the offending laws continue to be fashionable—as advertisements of our amiable intentions—no party in power will think of trying Plan No. One. Yet until we definitely decide to abandon the regime of violence, to stop expending energy upon effects and ignoring the existence of causes; until we get ready to give equal liberty a chance, to reason about social problems, to establish the economic independence of woman—until we become sane and free, city governments will swing from the extreme of Puritanism, with plenty of official corruption under the surface, to the extreme of Tammanyism, with more official corruption, under the surface and elsewhere.

Inasmuch as the crusaders are orthodox moralists, as a class, favoring repression rather than liberty, they are the real defenders of sexual vice, its friends while despising it and its propagators while fighting madly for its destruction.

They only are the effective foes of prostitution and its congeners who intelligently work for liberty and equity in production and distribution, for the economic independence of women, for peace between nations, for thorough study of sexology, for utter frankness in discussing social and moral problems, for normal sex life for all men and women when the need therefor is felt, and for liberty and responsibility in love and parentage. Men and women were before institutions, they make all institutions, and are more than all institutions.—From "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," by E. C. Walker.

Will This Anarchistic Association Be "Stamped" Out?

I have recently become a member of a new Anarchist organization—but I am perhaps the only member who knows that such is its nature. In fact, it is probable that every other member would indignantly deny the imputation of being an Anarchist. Yet the object of the organization is purely Anarchistic—to voluntarily organize and do that which we pay taxes to have done but which our "servants" fail to do.

"The Fulton Street Improvement Association" was called into being for the purpose of defending its members against an order of the city council requiring the property-owners along Fulton street to pay for the re-paving of the street with asphalt. The street is in need of repair but not of re-paving. When the property-owners agreed to the ordinance granting right of way to the Fulton street electric railway the company bound itself to keep the street in repair. But the old adage, "Promises, like pie-crusts, are made to be broken" was as applicable to the promises of the railway company as to many others.

When the objects of the Fulton Street Improvement Association were explained to me in soliciting my contribution, I asked a few questions:

What are the city officials for if not to enforce the ordinances? Since the matter was settled, what have we to do with it?

In reply I was told that the city officials were there to draw their salaries and their sole interest in us was to collect our taxes. If we want anything done we must band together and do it.

"But," I asked, "Do you believe streets would ever be paved if the matter were left to the property-owners? Isn't it really necessary for the council to see that the work is done?"

My neighbor laughed. Why, of course the streets would be paved, and the work would be better and less expensively done, too, if left to the property-owners. A hundred streets in Chicago, he said, have been paved by the people who own the houses on those streets, and the work is well done and will last more than twice as long as when paved by "boodle" contractors. He went on to give me details of the streets and the work, which, though interesting to me, I will not take space to give here. I told him I was very glad to get the information; that I was not very well posted on the subject; but that one of the stock objections to Anarchistic voluntaryism is that no public improvements would be made unless ordered by a centralized government.

Near our home are some decayed places in the street which cause a great deal of hardship, sometimes, to heavily-laden teams. I asked him how we should go about it to get these places fixed—if merely notifying the street commissioner would be sufficient. He replied that it might; it would do no harm to try; "You could go down to the city hall and give them a piece of your mind, anyway." But he added that there was little use in one going down alone; "They'll just laugh at one." Numbers count, and the only reason they listened to the "Fulton Street Improvement Association" was that it went in a body and demanded attention—and received it.

Well, the association has gained its point. The street is not to be re-paved at present, but is to be kept in repair—at the expense of the street car company. Even as I write I look from my window and see men at work replacing the decayed paving with new. But this has cost much time and money, all of which has been voluntarily contributed. If the officials down at the city hall are our "servants" why should it be necessary to spend so much time and money in doing the work for which they are paid? Would an individual employer submit to such negligence by his employe?

It may be said that it was only through the city government that the street car company was finally forced to repair the street. Perhaps. I do not claim to be authority on the subject. But the street car company wants to run its cars on this street, and there have been instances in which street cars have been prevented running on streets whose residents were determined to prevent their passage.

Unless it be worthy of respect, the officers of government, municipal or national, cannot hope to have it regarded with confidence. As long as affairs are mismanaged thinking men will express their disapproval. If it were possible today to suppress every person claiming to be an Anarchist, the facts on which the philosophy of Anarchism are based would remain, and the ideas would be expressed,—whether under the same name or another would be quite immaterial.

* * *

Since the Buffalo tragedy I have used the term Anarchism more frequently, probably, than in the entire fifteen years previous. As a matter of fact I do not like to call myself an Anarchist, it being a term which expresses so many different meanings to different persons. But since the philosophy and its exponents have been so bitterly maligned, we have done what we could to bring about a better understanding. Personally I prefer words which do not have to be explained. I believe in Anarchism because to me it means SELF-CONTROL. The best of people refrain from murder, arson, robbery, and the like, not from a fear of the law, but because there is a law in their own consciousness which is more effective than any statute law. We need a greater sense of personal responsibility, rather than less. We should not delegate responsibility for our actions to pope or policeman, nor should they have power to grant us absolution for our invasion of others. More than bullets or ballots do we need self-knowledge and self-control. L. H.

A Simpleton's Remedy.

Old Lady Finance was breathing hard.

Dr. Pop said she must go to the Government Sanitarium.

Dr. Banks said that she was poisoned by bryanide of silver.

Dr. Prohib said that the drain through the saloon had depleted her system.

Dr. Over-Production said that the trouble was that she was too well.

Dr. Bags said that Honesty, Industry, and Perseverance would make her all right.

They got a trained nurse with a college diploma. The nurse offered her bounties and subsidies to rouse her to activity. Still she was clearly in a precarious state.

Said Merchant, her youngest son: "You've taxed her resources in trying to reduce over-circulation."

Said Farmer, her eldest son: "You've checked her circulation."

Said Wage, her second son: "Your gold cure has created an unnatural craving for stimulants."

Said Dr. Liberty: "Remove those restrictions that are choking her and let Nature make her well" But no one was so ignorant as to permit such a thing as that.—Bolton Hall, in "Life."

Evidence of Returning Sanity.

The constitutional convention of Virginia has reconsidered the action taken in the heat of excitement some weeks ago, when it struck out or compromised the guaranty of the freedom of speech in the state bill of rights. The members are to be congratulated upon their recovered sanity and mental poise. Whatever may be the dangers in the direction of undue license they cannot possibly be equal to what would happen should this nation surrender those dearly bought rights, freedom of speech and of the press, which, with freedom of religion, constitute our most sacred heritage from the fathers and from the very corner stone of our institutions.—"Albany Argus."

Anarchism, far from having outrage and murder as its object, deplores the use of force against the state in any form or at any time, and sanctions it only when freedom of the press has been absolutely suppressed, and all peaceful means of restoring it has failed.—Benj. R. Tucker.

Many married couples would be happy if they could only forget that they belonged to each other.—Max O'Rell.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

890.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To New Subscribers: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Lucifer, Its Subscribers, and the Postal Regulations.

The rulings of the postal department regarding second-class matter (the papers enjoying the rate of one cent a pound) are becoming more and more stringent. These rulings are made, mainly, with the object of keeping out the thousands of tons of advertising matter, heavy books, etc., which have heretofore been admitted under the pound rate, and which help to swell the deficit of the postal department.

We endeavor to comply with all these rulings, but in order to do so we need the co-operation of our subscribers. One of the most important of the requirements is that each paper shall have half as many PAYING subscribers as the total number of papers printed each issue. Lucifer's subscription list more than fills this requirement. Yet the subscriptions of many have lapsed, and we should like to hear from them. We are required to make frequent statements of the number of our subscribers, and the department verifies our statement by asking these subscribers if they pay for Lucifer or if it is sent free. Thus it will be seen that it is vitally important that we should hear from every subscriber whose subscription is in arrears.

Will not you compare the whole number of this paper (890) with the number on your wrapper? and if you are in arrears, either

1. Send us the money for your subscription;
2. Drop us a card saying that you want Lucifer and expect to pay for it later; or
3. Notify us, either by card or through your postmaster, that you do not want Lucifer sent to you.

Every year we send statements to our delinquent subscribers, and this means a heavy expenditure of time, labor, and money. If each subscriber will comply with the foregoing request, it will be a great help to us. It is probable that we may be required to make a new report by the first of the year. We hope our friends will see to it that we are prepared to make a satisfactory statement.

SAMPLE COPIES.

We have a large supply of old copies of Lucifer which we should like to send to persons who may be interested in them. We are always glad to receive addresses to which we may send these sample copies. Lucifer has very few agents, and the only means of increasing our subscription list is through sample copies and the efforts of our friends.

FIVE COPIES OF LUCIFER FIVE WEEKS FOR 25 CENTS.

A short term subscription is more effective than a sample copy. For 25 cents we will send five copies of Lucifer for five weeks, either in one bunch for distribution or to different addresses. In this way friends of Lucifer may aid materially in its circulation.

We hope to make the paper worth the support of its friends, and we hope to hear from all who feel it is worth their support.

L. H.

The Nation's Crime.

Some years ago, in Jackson County, Mo., there was a public hanging. Looking over the crowd of spectators, numbering many hundreds if not thousands, an old physician remarked to a friend,

"This is the saddest sight I ever saw."

"Why so?" was the reply. "Is not the condemned man guilty? and does he not deserve hanging?"

"It is not the guilt or innocence of the man who is to suffer the extreme penalty, that I was thinking of. Do you note that a large part of this vast concourse of people is composed of women? To the eye of a physician this fact means that more murders, and then more hangings, will result from this day's job."

"How do you make that out?" replied the friend.

"Easy enough. Of the women present a score or two, at a low estimate, are expectant mothers. This means that some of these mothers will give birth to children marked with a homicidal tendency. In other words, some of these children will be born murderers. Then, in due time, more work for the hangman."

* * *

The killing of McKinley sent a thrill of horror over the land, followed quickly by a cry for VENGEANCE upon the assassin. That cry, that demand, has had its effect upon thousands, perhaps millions of expectant mothers. Whether these mothers sympathized with the slain McKinley or with his slayer, the natural effect, the inevitable effect, of such sympathy of the mother upon the sensitive plate of the mind of the unborn child, must be DISASTROUS. Such is the teaching of all time.

It will perhaps be argued that inasmuch as these expectant mothers did not witness the murder of the president nor the electrocution of Czolgosz, little or no impression has been or will be made upon their offspring. She or he who argues thus forgets the power of imagination, especially when that imagination is excited and fixed by daily reports in the papers, and by frequent appeals from pulpit and public platform.

The public announcements telling the day and hour when the man Czolgosz was to be put upon the fateful chair and the burning current sent sizzling through his veins and nerves, was itself a CRIME AGAINST POSTERITY, a national crime, the magnitude of which surpasses all power of human calculation.

* * *

The writer of these lines is personally acquainted with at least one parent who got little or no good sleep on the night preceding the electrocution of Czolgosz. Though a MAN, and though condemning the assassin's deed, this parent saw in endless phantasmal procession, not only the distorted features of the condemned man but also those of his OWN CHILDREN who, in some mysterious way, seemed to him connected with the execution and suffering with or for the victim of "civilized" vengeance.

If this father—a man not usually considered hysterical, or even imaginative, could suffer for many hours in this way, what must have been the effect of the published announcement of the electrocution upon the sensitive minds of millions of women, and especially the millions of expectant mothers?

In this view of the matter the crime of the one man Czolgosz—putting the worst possible construction thereon, dwindles into insignificance when compared to the crime committed upon the race of mankind by the millions composing what we call the American Nation—which means of course the rulers and the voting population thereof.

"IT IS FINISHED."

In popular and unscientific estimation the great tragedy is finished. The great spectacular American tragedy of the first year of the new century—the tragedy that began with the public shooting of McKinley on the sixth of September, and ended with the private killing of Czolgosz by the prison officials at Auburn, N. Y., on the twenty-ninth of October following, is now regarded as a thing of the past—a night-mare dream of the past, as it were, nevermore to return.

But is it so? Alas, No!

In the light of science, physical and mental, the tragedy whose chief acts or incidents, thus far, are the shooting of the nation's political head, at Buffalo, and the burning to death of his slayer by electricity some seven weeks later—these are but the beginnings of a tragedy, a national drama, the end of which no mortal eye can see, and no mortal mind rightly estimate.

If the Archists—the governing classes—of this country had been SANE; if they had been as nearly sane as McKinley himself seemed to be when he said, "Let no one hurt him" (or words to that effect), then there might have been some ground of hope that the bloody tragedy of which he was the victim would not be repeated. But "whom the gods destroy they first make mad," seems to be as applicable to the affairs of men to day as when this maxim was first uttered some thousands of years ago.

If the act of Czolgosz at Buffalo was that of an insane man then the act of his slayers at Auburn, backed and authorized as it was by the great majority of the American people, was as much more insane as the numbers, the intelligence and the power of the murderers of Czolgosz exceeded the number, the intelligence and the power of McKinley's slayer.

If, as Lucifer has contended, the shooting of McKinley was a "stupid, idiotic crime," then the burning to death of Czolgosz in what may be called the refinement of barbarism—the "electric chair"—was a crime millions of times more stupid and idiotic.

* * *

What then? As rational human beings, what may we expect?

What shall the harvest be from such sowing?

Is insanity to be cured by more insanity?

Are stupid crimes, idiotic crimes, to be prevented by the commission of crimes incomparably more stupid, more idiotic?

Already the sowing—the Archistic sowing of dragon's teeth—is beginning to bear fruit. Czolgosz was not an Anarchist, in any proper or etymologic sense of the word, but the Archists have so persistently advertised him as such—lionized him as such—that the common people, the ignorant common people, are beginning to think better of Anarchy and Anarchists, are beginning to accept Czolgosz as the type of the savior that is to come—the savior of the working masses, the oppressed masses, from the tyranny of the trusts, and of the government that creates and upholds the trusts.

Already a plan is on foot and widely advertised, to erect a two hundred thousand dollar monument to the memory of Czolgosz.

Already his memory is being honored by admiring parents who call their babes by his name.

* * *

The fact that Czolgosz was denied the right to a last word to a crowd large enough to make it probable that his dying words would be correctly reported to the world, will be regarded as evidence that the officers of the law have been persistently lying to the public, and that they did not dare to let the persecuted prisoner, the oppressed and suppressed prisoner speak for himself.

These and many other facts that could be named, did space permit, make it reasonably certain that the McKinley-Czolgosz tragedy is not yet ended—perhaps scarcely yet begun.

M. HARMAN.

Bloomington, Illinois.

It may surprise our friends to be told that notwithstanding the recent bitter outcry against Anarchism and the fact that we have given more space to that maligned philosophy than previously for many years, our books show that receipts from October book sales are more than for any of the preceding eleven months. And in only three of those months have receipts from subscriptions been greater than in October. This is encouraging, as it shows that our readers are, in the main, thinking and self-reliant men and women who are neither cowed nor carried away by popular clamor. We want to continue to make Lucifer alive to the great questions of the day, and it gives us great pleasure to know that we have the substantial endorsement of our friends.

We are still able to supply orders for September and October issues, except No. 884, and we hope all will soon be put in circulation.

We are again able to fill orders for "The Chicago Conference on Trusts." After quoting therefrom, in No. 883, a portion of Benj. R. Tucker's speech, the supply on hand was soon exhausted, and we have had orders unfilled for several weeks owing to an unavoidable delay in procuring a new supply. The book contains 626 pages, comprising speeches and portraits of the leading speakers at the conference, which was held in September 1899. Doubtless the most interesting to the majority of our readers is the address and portrait of Benj. R. Tucker. Among the other prominent men whose speeches and portraits appear are: William Jennings Bryan, Bourke Cockran, Samuel Gompers, Laurence Gronlund, Samuel M. Jones (Socialist Mayor, Toledo, Ohio), H. W. Pingree (then Governor of Michigan), Louis F. Post (editor the "Public"), and George A. Schilling. Price 50 cents.

A New Book.

"VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES." BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

This compact little booklet contains a whole library of interesting and instructive information upon the great question of sexuality and social morality. Mr. Walker is the most comprehensive all-around writer we have, upon the question of morality and reformation.

I don't quite understand how he makes out vice has any friends. A friend is one who loves, and does the best he can for our welfare and happiness.

Who does this on behalf of vice? So far as I can judge, even the vilest criminal, in his inmost heart, admires truth, justice and right and therefore cannot be a real friend to vice. But as long as language never conveys the same meaning (in full) to any two different individuals, we need a multitude of workers, speakers and writers, and among all, none stand higher than the author of this little volume.

Mr. Walker sums up the whole subject in a nutshell by saying sexual equality and kindness will solve the great problem of human happiness.

For fifteen cents you receive in this book the gleanings of a life-time of study and careful research.

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

The Home Colonists.

BY ED. W. CHAMBERLA'N.

Under the pretense of promoting purity the Comstock law is responsible for more unalloyed devilishness than any other accessory of malignity. It has just been pressed into service to harass and annoy, for the third time, the little colony at Home, Washington.

These frugal, thrifty, inoffensive people have gone as pioneers to a remote place, where they hope to realize their aspirations in the homes they are establishing by their industry.

Many violent people, today, are clamoring that Anarchists should be exiled to isolation. The Home colonists are Anarchists, and they have practically exiled themselves to the wilderness to escape the offensive hypocrisies of these very people who are thus clamoring. It would seem that both parties should be satisfied with the situation, but the malignity of the persecuting spirit has followed the Home colonists to their retreat and attacks them once more with the Comstock law.

The assassination of the president staggered the pulse of the nation. Legally the trial of the assassin presented as simple a case as any prosecuting attorney ever had to try. Witnesses of the act were abundant, the fact of premeditation was clear, no defense could have prevailed but the one which should have prevailed, that of insanity. But a vain prosecuting attorney was not content with this simplicity. He wanted to flourish his importance before public attention, and his weak brain, nourished probably on dime novels and yellow journals, conceived the silly idea of a conspiracy of Anarchists, and he started a crusade against Anarchists in our large cities, exciting a frenzied horror against them, to the great delight of the corrupt police, very much as Jew-baiting crusades were started in several European countries. And in the vindictiveness thus excited the very people who shout for "Law and Order," and who cry out against the blackmailing practices of our vice-promoting police, took up the cry against Anarchists, overlooking the fact that they were thereby serving the worst purposes of the corrupt police.

Among the victims of this hue and cry were the Home colonists, who published a little paper called "Discontent." The meddlesome officials of the postal censorship, jealous of seeing all the credit of persecuting Anarchists go to the police, determined to display their activity to advantage, and so they attacked this little paper by means of the Comstock law, procuring the indictment of three of the colonists upon the entirely false charge of mailing obscene matter published in "Discontent."

In the case of one of the colonists, James W. Adams, the matter pretended to be obscene, of which he was the author, was printed as long ago as last January and was evidently raked up as the most available matter for the purpose of a prosecution which would never have been thought of had the censors not seen a chance to make capital out of a show of great activity in the suppression of Anarchy.

Adams had nothing to do with the mailing of this and so could not be convicted under the law, and no indictment could have been found against him except as a result of perjury before the grand jury. The article itself is in no sense obscene, nor is the other article relied upon for the conviction of the other colonists, Larkin and Govan, obnoxious to the law in any sense. The colonists have reprinted these articles and circulated them widely, so that the falsity and the wickedness of the charge against them may be apparent.

The whole scheme is as wicked an outrage upon the constitutional right of free press as could be devised, and should be resented by every patriotic citizen. The time fixed for trial of this abominable charge is February next. Possibly by that time public sentiment will have so changed that the officials will not have the effrontery to press it, but it is not safe to anticipate any change of heart in those who have so little moral character as to make such an attack and it will be well to watch the proceedings and to furnish these worthy Home colonists with moral and financial support in the struggle which has been so outrageously thrust upon them.

VARIOUS VOICES.

F. Eccleston, Seattle, Wash.:—Please send Lucifer, beginning with Sept. 1, and send back numbers to date. Enclosed are twenty-five cents on subscription. Lucifer is Grand; (big G.) Good luck to you, and success.

J. W. B., Alliance, Ohio:—I notice your advertisement in "Fred Burry's Journal," and enclose twenty-five cents for Lucifer and "The Prodigal Daughter." I am interested in the social problem and if three-fourths of the women were half as much interested we would go on a "strike" until our social freedom was secured.

W. A. W., Caplinger Mills, Mo.:—Through the courtesy of a friend I have been permitted to read several copies of Lucifer, the aim of which I unhesitatingly endorse; for the emancipation of our wives and daughters is of vital importance to the advancement of the human race. I enclose $1 for one year's subscription to Lucifer, with the premium, "Nora," by Ibsen.

Flora W. Fox, Rochester, Minn.:—I enclose $1 to apply on subscription to Lucifer; also stamps for a copy of "The Strassburg Geese." Glad the editor has taken a vacation. The Home, Washington, folks are "catching it," but it does not seem possible they can be convicted. Lois Waisbrooker, "the old war horse" of justice, vim and vigor, is doing good work. She will never rust out, that's a sure thing.

L. M. B., New Florence, Mo.:—Please send Nos. 886, 883, and 888 to enclosed list of names, if these stamps will pay for them. There are plenty of stamps, but like "prosperity" and hell they are mostly for "the other fellow," so what is lacking in stamps please consider made up with good wishes, although you may think good wishes, like thanks, poor "collateral"—whatever that is.

L. P, Milford, Mass.—Many thanks for your accurate description of the ultimate of Anarchy. Up to July of this year I did not realize the awful misery resultant from our present social system—or lack of system. Now I do. Enclosed find seventy-five cents for which please send me "Hilda's Home," "The Prodigal Daughter," and Lucifer for thirteen weeks. It may be that in the coming months the Plutocracy will seek to stamp out Anarchy—but such efforts will fail.

J. L. H., Abilene, Tex.:—Enclosed find small order for pamphlets. I want to say that your answer to a Kansas City subscriber concerning the refusal of the "Freethought Magazine" to longer exchange with Lucifer is the most magnanimous, sensible and unselfish thing I have ever seen in journalism. Oh, how sweet is such a spirit contrasted with the pugnacious and cannibalistic spirit displayed in nearly all the partisan and sectarian papers. It strengthens my hope that the world of mankind will not always be governed by the same desires, appetites and passions that govern the carniverous beasts of the field.

W. B., Cincinnati, Ohio:—I enclose $2 on subscription, and I will have to ask you to stop my paper. This I do regretfully but it is either domestic hell or a discontinuance of my Lucifer and I am tired of the hell. It is astonishing how even intelligent women will hug delusion and slavery. I appreciate your good work, and hope to see it kept up. It is seed sown that will blossom in future years.

[We occasionally receive similar letters from women whose husbands disapprove of Lucifer, as well as from men whose wives dislike it. The disadvantage of an entirely communistic home is here apparent. Where two people have established a communistic home it is not right that either should bring into that home anything which is offensive to the other, no matter how good, in itself, that thing may be. But it would seem to be advisable for each individual to have some spot on earth which should be sacred to him or herself; if not a room, then a desk, or even a little corner of a desk in which literature might be kept without obtruding it on the attention of one to whom it is distasteful. L. H.]

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

As They "Coo" Together.

He—Well, dear, if I am a fool I can't help it.

She—But you can help showing it, dear; other men do.—Life.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.

Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.

Sermon from Shakespeare's Text. William Denton. 5c.

Truth Seeker Annuals for 1886, 1890, and 1891. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.

"Two Gods." Rev. J. E. Roberts. 5c.

State Medicine and Doctorcraft. A. E. Giles. 10c.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.

Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.

Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.

The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.

The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.

Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.

The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.

The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.

A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.

Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick. 20c.

Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.

Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.

Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.

Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Boozer. 10c.

Government Analyzed, Col. J. H. Kelso. 40c.

Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 373 pages, 15c.

The Great Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.

The Gods of Misrule. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.

Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 3c.

Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.

Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.

Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.

From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only;" Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Vibratory Cure for Colds, Cures colds in all forms (as grippe, coughs, catarrh, sore throat, constipation, dyspepsia. Each of these three treatments $1.00. Special for Rheumatism, $2.00. Cure for mental depression sent free with either treatment. Tested six years. 15 lessons in Vibratory Method, $5.00. Teachers $4.00; 3 $1.00 treatments to one address, $2.00. MABEL GIFFORD, D. I. S. Sharon, Mass.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) Snowville, Va. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and have no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. J. M. Crane. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Ycleptt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
#305
v.5, no.44
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 42. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 14, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 891

LIBERTY.

BY JOHN HAY, NOW SECRETARY OF STATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

What man is there so bold that he should say
"Thus and thus only, would I have the sea?"
For whether lying calm and beautiful,
Clasping the earth in love, and throwing back
The smile of heaven from waves of amethyst;
Or whether freshened by the busy winds,
It bears the trade and navies of the world
To ends of use or stern activity;
Or whether, lashed by tempests, it gives way
To elemental fury, howls and roars
At all its rocky barriers, in wild lust
Of ruin drinks the blood of living things,
And strews its wrecks o'er leagues of desolate shore,—
Always it is the sea, and men bow down
Before its vast and varied majesty.

So all in vain will timorous ones essay
To set the metes and bounds of Liberty.
For Freedom is its own eternal law;
It makes its own conditions, and in storm
Or calm alike fulfills the unerring Will.
Let us not then despise it when it lies
Still as a sleeping lion, while a swarm
Of gnat-like evils hover round its head;
Nor doubt it when in mad, disjointed times
It shakes the Torch of Terror, and its cry
Shrills o'er the quaking earth, and in the flame
Of Riot and War we see its awful form
Rise by the scaffold, where the crimson axe
Rings down its grooves, the knell of shuddering kings,
FOR EVER IN THINE EYES, O LIBERTY,
SHINES THAT HIGH LIGHT WHEREBY THE WORLD IS SAVED,
AND THOUGH THOU SLAY US WE WILL TRUST IN THEE.

[If it is just to punish the author of arguments which may incite to violence; if Emma Goldman was justly hounded by the police and imprisoned because it was at first reported that Czolgosz said he was influenced by her words to kill McKinley, why is McKinley's Secretary of State exempt? The foreging lines from his pen are infinitely more revolutionary than anything in Emma Goldman's lecture, "Modern Phases of Anarchism," which it is asserted was heard by Czolgosz. The last three lines have appeared as the motto of "Liberty," a pioneer Anarchist paper, for seventeen or eighteen years. Perhaps Czolgosz read and was "fired" by these lines. It is but fair to add that Hay would now disavow the sentiments here expressed. But such disavowal would be no protection from tactics such as those used against Emma Goldman. In her case the newspapers resurrected sentences alleged to have been used by her which if she ever uttered were spoken nearly ten years ago in the heat of a big strike in New York. No allowance was made for the time which had elapsed, nor the possible change of view, nor was the explanatory context given. If such tactics are justifiable in dealing with one, why not with the other? If the jail is the proper place for Emma Goldman, why not for John Hay? Will our Secretary of State be deported to the proposed island along with the rest of the propagators of Anarchism? L. H.]

To Mothers.

The age of inquiry is the age for instruction. Nature herself indicates when the child should be taught the genesis of its being. When the developing mind is sufficiently unfolded to question, it is entirely competent to receive the truth. It is just as easy for it to understand the truth as a falsehood, and how is it that we have come to meet the very first inquiry of the questioning mind regarding its origin with an evasion or a lie? It is a need of the child and should be truthfully satisfied. The penalty for evading this duty is often severe. But the mother's duty begins earlier than this. She must guide the instincts of the child, form its habits so far as possible, before it can walk or talk, before its intellect is sufficiently developed to understand her words. She can do this by watching and warding off pernicious practice sometimes formed in babyhood. This lesson cannot begin too early.

There is ofter a premature development of the sexual nature by unnatural excitement. Such development is abnormal and the child becomes morbid, diseased. This may occur at a much earlier period than mothers are generally aware, especially those mothers who are ignorant or careless of consequences. Mischief may be done while the child is yet in the cradle, and the foundation laid for a life of self-abuse.

Young children should be so dressed as to forestall these injurious habits. Mothers cannot be too vigilant; this vice creeps in early, and often ruin is wrought while she is wholly unconscious of it.

When the little one begins to inquire, "Where did you get me, Mamma?" the only right way is to answer with the truth. I doubt if there is ever an excuse for a lie.

It is just as easy to say "You grew in mamma's body, dear," as to say "An angel from heaven, or the doctor brought you," or (as I heard when a child at school), "You grew in a hollow tree."

The mother can embellish the story, as all mothers know how, making it as beautiful and poetical as the nature of the child requires. It will instinctively feel its oneness with the mother and refrain from talking of it in the presence of the vulgar. She can tell how he lay like a wee bird with folded wings in a snug little nest close under her heart; how he was wrapped in a blanket softer than silk, where he slept and grew, while mamma warmed him with her love, kissed him with every heart-beat, sharing her life with him until he was grown a perfect baby boy (or girl as the case may be). How eagerly the little heart would respond, how satisfied the questioning mind; how this truth would knit

Per HT937
.L93
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.44

him to his mother! An impression would be made that would be utterly impossible to produce a few years later, when he had been shocked by its recital from the profane lips of one who had come to his knowledge through unchaste teaching.

He will not question further until some time later, years perhaps, when he has come to recognize that there is a cause for all things, and here again the truth should be told, letting him into the secret of the use, and at the same time the danger attending the abuse of this part of his nature.

As the age of puberty approaches, the child should not be left in ignorance of this physical change, but should be taught everything concerning it by the parents or guardians. No feeling of delicacy should stand in the way—it is a false delicacy at best. Bring your children so close to you by your confidence in them that they cannot but render back to you the full measure of their own confidence, for in this way only can you counteract injurious influences. Talk freely, in chaste language, upon this subject, and also purify it in the mind of the child, in whose thought it is so often associated only with debauchery.

Teach this long-neglected but paramount lesson of childhood, this initiation into the sacred mystery of maternity, so reverently as to awaken only veneration in the mind of the child. That this part of our nature has come to be looked upon as low, and spoken of with averted eyes, is due to the fact of its abuse, and abuse has come through ignorance, through lack of proper instruction at a proper age.

Parents have sent their children into the street to learn this most important of all lessons, to learn it from vile lips, often accompanied by a viler practical lesson.

There is great need that mothers awaken to a sense of their responsibility in this matter; that they do their duty in molding the plastic material they hold; then shall we have men and women fit to be the fathers and mothers of a race.

It is high time that our sons and daughters were taught the sacredness of the reproductive function; taught to look forward to paternity and maternity as a crowning honor, if they come to this high office unperverted.

The sense of shame comes from depraved associations in the mind of the child. The very first lesson was unchaste, not to say indecent, communicated as a dark secret, and the same dark secrecy engenders secret vice.

Why should the son be so taught that he cannot look into the face of his mother when the legitimate exercise of the reproductive function is mentioned? Why the daughter blush with shame at the thought of a child in her womb, when she exhibits with pride the child in her arms? It is a false teaching that has brought about the unhealthy state of things. This subject, pure in itself, has been made foul by execrable teaching. Only chaste lessons from pure mothers can cleanse it of the rottenness that has come to it through neglect.

The generative, the creative processes are carried on through the brain and sexual organs. They represent the opposite poles of our being, mental and physical; they act and react upon each other. No abuse of one but impairs the usefulness of the other, and especially is this true of abuse of the sexual nature—imbecility sometimes results from it. Mothers may begin their influence upon the character of the child as soon as it is conceived, and quite as much is it felt upon the sexual as any part of its nature.

She may go back even farther and begin her work of right generation in a preparation for motherhood by magnetizing the tiny nest with sweet thoughts, by a love that reaches forward toward the little one she is about to invite to come and dwell with her, and by all the harmonious influences that she can draw.

If she puts her house in order for the entertainment of an angel, an angel and not a devil will come to dwell with her. We as mothers prepare the dwelling for the spirit we invoke. Shall we lay the foundation in sexual passion? Shall we build the superstructure of selfishness, antagonism and hate?

We weave into the very fiber of the little body that which we habitually hold in thought while this building process is going on, and we continue to build during the period of lactation as well as gestation. With our thought are we constructing an instrument through which the spirit of our child is to make itself known to us. If the key-note is passion, what must we naturally expect?

It is right here we must make our first impression; right here we may stamp purity or passion. Let us begin with ourselves. Let us not fashion in ignorance these instruments that human souls are to play upon. If not in tune, the manifestations must necessarily be discordant.

Let every prospective mother pause often to inquire what cords or discords she is arranging for the fortunate or unfortunate soul that is to find expression through her organism; for through mothers must the race be redeemed. —Mary B. in "Modern Thought."

The State Should Set the Example.

BY MORRISON I. SWIFT.

The state as an instrument of justice was a successful superstition only so long as its deeds of brutality were not confronted and exposed. Nothing has ever given the state as a moral entity or idea (according to philosophers) such a staggering blow as the Boer and Filipino wars. In these wars the state plays the part of a bandit on the scale of the ancient giants before human conscience existed. The state can do anything, and it is just—because the state to cover its crimes says it is just. It uses force, fraud, cowardice, hypocrisy and murder. Every step in South Africa and the Philippines is marked by these sins. War is a training school of vice and crime. It trains not only the soldier but the people at home who send him out, reducing the nation's morals to mere war morals.

And how is this all done? The brutal and selfish element of a nation get within and behind the big thing called state and there work their brutal and selfish will. The decent class, not discriminating, says, "Well, that is our state, and no matter how wrong we must uphold it." This foolishness is the cause of the continued victory of brutality and selfishness in the world. If a villain got into a good man's clothes would the good man be bound to uphold him on account of the clothes? If villains get into the clothes of state and rampage, shall good men uphold the state clothes and villainy committed in them? So long as we revere state clothes, brutality and villainy will have a magic mask.

Now the state-clothes propose to cure Anarchy by suppressive brutality. The state, which has exercised myriad-handed murder in South Africa, the Philippines and elsewhere, will turn savagely upon those who, following its example, have turned its brutal weapons against itself. If anything can be clear it is that this is the wrong way to cure forcible Anarchy. It will merely breed more of it. The wretchedness of society breeds numberless cranks, if nothing else, to joyfully rush into the breach as martyrs if the state plays into their hands.

What is the cure? Let the state set the example. Let the state take off its murder clothes. Let the state stop the devil-wars it is carrying on, where it crowns murder with laurels and bibles.

A great renovation of the world is at hand. Murder in every form, war equally with assassination and capital punishment, have grown intolerable. Moral individuals swearing by the abandoned immorality of a big soulless entity called Stat begin to see their nakedness and feel ashamed. That this portends great transformations of human society and that we are now on the verge of them is evident. It is certain that the political state is near its death. When there is general co-operation among men what role will be left for politics to play? None.

The Cynic Meets with a Congregation of Martyrs.

"I got into a singular environment night before last," remarked the Cynic. "It was a gathering of comeoutters. There was a speaker and he was a Jew—a rabbi of local eminence. The little room was crowded. The rabbi was a man possessed of a few eloquent turns of speech which served with variations to capture the easy flattery of a noisy majority, mainly female, which applauded sense and nonsense with equal fervor. The rabbi was to deal with the Dreyfus case. And, it is true, he alluded to Dreyfus. But I discovered before he had got far on that his main concern seemed to be to assert and reassert the martyrdom of the Jew. There he stood for an hour turning his question inside out and outside in, upside down, left and right, making in fact two score picturesque exhibitions of the one idea. Before he was through we were quite persuaded that he was a martyr lacking only the objective fire to roast him into immortality. Yet he looked wonderfully well clothed and well fed and seemed to enjoy his martyrdom. In fact the joyousness of his grief became finally so evident that I swallowed all my salt tears and swore inwardly that it would take as much as a dollar and a quarter to bribe me to deprive him of his thorny crown. I was amazed, too, with the result. Instead of being allowed to have his martyrdom all to himself two or three Christians who followed him in the discussion exploited their own sorrows. They also were victims and the Jew this time was the persecutor. The usurious Jew was the shadow of Christendom. He robbed nations of liberty, gave disrepute to religion and mingled more percent than ethics with his bargains and contracts. The rabbi evidently feared a loss of some prestige. He several times interrupted his brother martyrs with questions intended to reduce the distinction of the opposing martyrdoms. A very short man with very long hair, a Jew, at one moment took hurried possession of the floor in order to deplore the 'blasphemy' of a debater who had been among the critics of the rabbi. The chairman hereupon rose to make an explanation, advising the Jewish pietist that the hall in which they were met was dedicated to blasphemy as well as to faith—that the gods were often held at arm's length on this spot by bold dissenters. The chairman added playfully that he had always assumed that the gods could and observed that they did maintain their own in such encounters. Then the martyrs resumed, one after another. The Jews rehearsed the crimes of the Christians and the Christians reciprocated with lurid pictures of Jewish transgression. Here was a forum converted into a confessional. The atmosphere became impregnated with the martyr spirit. I could see that everyone present felt stewing within them a lively sense of their own wrongs. I had never supposed myself a martyr. I had always felt my fate fixed with the social average. But so pungent and subtle were the distillations of this incense that I, too, suddenly became aware of the presence of men banded against me and realized that I played hare to the general hound. I was, in fact, almost on my feet, ready with a speech designed to portray the pitfalls encountered by my innocence, when something occurred to stay my aroused ambition.

"The pale chairman rose. He announced that he had a few remarks to make. He made these remarks. The rabbi's adherents were chagrined. The riff-raff on the edges of the meeting applauded. All the velvet and the broadcloth was for the rabbi. All the rags were for the chairman. The chairman's little speech was this: 'We seem to have resolved ourselves into an experience meeting. I have heard the voices of the martyrs. These are the martyr Jews, victims of a Christian theological dynasty. These are the martyr Christians, victims of Jewish usury. It curs to me to make a confession myself, confessions being in order. If the martyrs are to have their crowns here and now I must put in a claim for mine. You have been told what Jews must suffer being Jews, and what Christians must suffer being Christians. I can go the martyrs one better. I am a child of a father who was a Jew and of a mother who was a Christian. I am therefore the victim or the proud subject of two martyrdoms. I have always been assured by Jews and by Christians alike that I am a confused or a dubious mix. This has been repeated to me so often from both sides as to incline me to accept Huxley's description of the half breed as one who inherits the vices of both parents and the virtues of neither.'

"There was a solemn pause when the chairman had resumed his seat. The martyrs shuddered. Velvet went below par. Rags were at a premium. Women whispered their horror to each other, the angry growled, the frivolous tittered, the irreverent cried: Hear! Hear! There seemed to be no one to take up the fiery thread after the chairman had put ice on those flaming craniums. The rabbi made a speech to formally conclude the sitting. But it was only an anti-climax. And when he had spoken his last word, and the ladies had perfunctorily clapped their gloved hands, the chairman declared an adjournment. Whereupon the audience arose. But before we had crowded into the aisles our attention was arrested by the orotund voice of a giant Hebrew near the door, who lifted himself ponderously to the full stature of his seven feet and gave solemn utterance to this astounding profanity: 'I shall not keep you long. I wish to add only a few words. I want to say to the chairman that he may be the result of a mix. But he musn't let that worry him. For to judge from what I have seen here tonight, the result of that particular mix was a damned good one!' This unexpected sally was greeted by a surprised laugh and aroused some lost good humor. It also restored some wanderers from martyrdom to manhood. I myself departed as I had come—a simple cantankerous human busybody. I had narrowly escaped a great disaster. I had nearly confessed myself an ass. I resolved to keep all my martyrdoms well under cover until martyrdoms are rare and the martyr is worth something more than the man. As martyrdoms go today I don't think any martyrdom I own would pass me up town on a street car or buy me an apple off the stand yonder."—Horace Traubel, in Conservator.

Our Fair Civilization!

On August 25, 1901, this dispatch was received by "The New York Herald" from Dunkirk, New York: ". . . . a young Fredonia lady, coming of very respectable people, became the mother of a ten-pound girl in a woods about a mile distant from her home, Wednesday afternoon. The girl, aware that she was about to become a mother, stole off to a wood near Leona, intending to commit suicide. Her courage deserted her and she wandered about the forest.

"Friday, in a heavy rain-storm, she became a mother. In the meanwhile, searching parties had been sent out to find the missing girl. They came upon her late Friday afternoon, hiding under the roots of an overturned tree, sleeping, her infant at her breast. After remaining for two days and two nights exposed to such hardships, rain and hunger, and giving birth to a child, the young woman is in a precarious condition. The child will live."

This story told with the quaint defiance of the rules of construction which is so characteristic of the rural narrator, is full of pathos and startling suggestiveness. All the material, intellectual, moral, and religious forces of our vaunted civilization are at work in this country, yet a young woman is so conscious of and terrified by the veneered barbarism about her that she flees to the woods to commit suicide because her promised motherhood has received no sanction save that of nature, which is the matrix of all that live. How bad must have been the instruction given to this poor girl that, in the sweetest, the most solemn crisis of her life, she did not dare to trust those nearest to her by blood and who should have been nearest to her in understanding, sympathy and helpfulness! There have been uncountable millions brought up on the falsehoods that have wrecked this young girl's happiness, if they have not ended her life. Is it strange that prostitution flourishes in spite of preachments, crusades, and elections?—From "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," by E. C. Walker.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

891.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Anarchy in the Family.

As never before, perhaps, Anarchy is now on trial at the bar of public opinion.

The assassination of William McKinley by an alleged Anarchist is mainly responsible for the increase of interest now felt in the question, "What is Anarchy?" and "Who are Anarchists?"

In our issue of two weeks ago we republished from the "Chicago Chronicle" the report of a sermon by a prominent Methodist minister, in which the speaker eulogized Emma Goldman and the Chicago Socialists, calling them "advanced thinkers" and chiding his hearers for condemning doctrines they had never taken time to investigate.

Two days after this report appeared in the "Chronicle" that paper printed an editorial entitled "Anarchy in the Family," of which the following is an exact copy:

A Chicago minister described Anarchy Sunday last as only "advanced thinking."

An object lesson in this species of advanced thinking has just been enacted in a squalid resort. It carries to every home the practical significance of the philosophy which declares that there ought to be no government in the nation, no government in the household, no government by any human being over passion.

"Freedom" to do whatever anybody pleases without any regard to the rights of others is the essence of Anarchy.

All the vocabularies invented by sophistry to gild this destructive creed cannot cover up its truth. Applied to the country, it sends a democratic representative ruler tragically to his grave. Applied to the family, it lured a mother away from her husband and little children to live for months in shame with an "advanced thinker" who had betrayed his family.

In complete fulfillment of the creed of Anarchy these two preached and practiced that there shall be no government of individual passion. The wretched woman died a victim to Anarchy, leaving her babes to grow up as best they may, to learn in time the tale of perfidy from whose effects their seared recollections will never wholly recover.

The cowardly wretch who conspired with the weaker Anarchist to blight two families helped her to die, but was cautious enough of his own miserable carcass to preserve it for further indulgence in his advanced thinking.

To this piteous close Anarchy brings those who see in "no government" an ideal system for the human race to adopt.

* * *

By common consent it is the family life of human beings that, more than anything else, makes character. If, then, the influence of Anarchy on the family be bad; if it causes women and men to be unreliable, dishonest, unmindful of the rights and privileges of others in the intimate relations of the home, this fact should condemn Anarchy in the estimation of well organized and rightly cultured minds.

The family is the unit and type of the larger aggregations, whether political, military, educational, financial, industrial or what not. Hence the pre-eminent or fundamental importance of the family relation in human life.

But let us see. Let us compare the term Anarchy with its parent, ARCHY—in its various combinations or compounds, and see which represents ideas most favorable to the formation of habits of right thinking and acting, in the family, as well as in all other relations of life.

First: ARCHY is a Greek word meaning "rulership," from ARCHEIN "to rule;" ARCHON being the Greek term for "ruler." From these words we have such combinations in English as

(a) Mon-arch, a king, or single ruler.
(b) Hier-arch, a priestly ruler.
(c) Olig-arch, one of few rulers.
(d) Patri-arch, a ruling father.
(e) Arch-bishop, a ruling bishop.
(f) Arch-angel, a ruling angel.
(g) Arch-fiend, a ruling fiend, etc., etc.

Secondly: AN-ARCHY, without a ruler; ANARCHIST, one who opposes rulership; one who neither commands nor obeys, but who wants every one to be his or her own ruler, own governor, so long as he or she does not invade the equal right of others—which invasion would necessarily be the denial of Anarchy, the defeat of Anarchy.

The Century Dictionary defines Anarchy: "A social theory which regards the union of order with the absence of all direct government of man by man as the political ideal; absolute individual liberty."

In dealing with a matter so important, "let us be honest, let us be just"—honest with ourselves as well as with others; just to ourselves as well as just to others. To do this it will be necessary to lay aside inherited prejudices. We have all inherited a horror of the words Anarchist and Anarchy, just as we have inherited a horror of the words "infidel," "atheist," "skeptic," etc., and are by this horror disqualified for honest investigation, or just judgment.

Laying aside these inherited prejudices let us ask, in the light of the foregoing scientific definitions, whether Archy or Anarchy would be the more favorable to the practice of justice, truth and righteousness in the family.

In the past history of the human race the family has been mainly patriarchal—the father and husband being the ruler and head of the family. Most savage tribes put the patriarchate as a fundamental part of their religious systems, as when the Hebrew hierarch makes his god to say to the woman, "Thy desire shall be to thy husband and he shall RULE over thee," and as when Paul—the chief law-giver, chief hierarch, of the reformed Hebrew religious system—himself a "Hebrew of the Hebrews," re-affirmed the old patriarchate by the command, "Wives, submit yourselves to your husbands as unto the Lord," and by declaring that woman was made for man, not man for woman, and that "man is the head of woman as Christ is the head of the church," etc., etc.

Among the primitive tribes the patriarchal rule was absolute. It included the power of life and death over the wife, or wives, and children, by the masculine head of the family.

Out of the patriarchate very naturally grew the other archies already named—the rule of one man or a few men in the state, and of one man or a few men in the church. Family government being the type and basis of all other governments instituted by man, we have in the patriarchate the logical explanation of the failure of all democracies and republics, so-called. All attempts at "government by the people, of the people and for the people" have quickly degenerated into monarchies—more or less thinly disguised; degenerated into hierarchies and oligarchies, simply because the unit, the type, of these so called governments of the people has always been the old patriarchate in the family.

Under the most enlightened human governments today woman is still denied citizenship, and, vastly more important, she is still denied the ownership and control of her own person; denied the rulership of her own creative powers and functions.

Naturally and rationally womanhood, motherhood is incomparably the most important factor in the family. Woman should be the central magnet of the home, the family, but under the patriarchate woman is subordinate to man in the home; her "bed and board" belong to him, and she is made to be primarily and chiefly a breeder of subjects for the state—a breeder of slaves and serfs for the use of the archies, the monarchy, the oligarchy, the hierarchy; and secondarily she must be herself the slave and serf of her own particular lord and master—be a minister to his comfort and pleasure.

* * *

In the light of the foregoing comparison between Archism and Anarchism the statements made and inferences drawn by the editorial writer in the "Chronicle" are seen to be evidence of gross ignorance or of unscrupulous disregard of truth. The "object lessons" spoken of by this editor as showing the result of Anarchistic teaching are, on the contrary, the legitimate and necessary result of archistic interference in the private and personal affairs of women and men. The "wretched woman" referred to, did not die a "victim to Anarchy" but died a victim of her own adhesion to Archistic and irrational standards of virtue and goodness, and also a victim to the heartlessness of others whose standards of right and wrong were probably like those of the Pharisee who thanked his god that he was "not as other men."

Anarchy teaches government—self-government in all things, including "government of passion," not because a monarch in the skies or a theocrat on earth has so commanded, but because human experience has shown that unrestrained sex passion results in invasion, and because invasion is the defeat of Anarchy, the suicide of Anarchy.

When man abuses and neglects woman and her children he is logically carrying out the teachings of Paul who said that woman was made for man, not man for woman, and also the teaching of Genesis—one of the standard authorities of Christian archists—"thy desire shall be to thy husband and he shall rule over thee."

* * *

Anarchy is the determined and consistent foe of ignorance and credulity, because experience shows that through ignorance and credulity the Archists of all lands succeed in securing obedience to their selfish demands and commands. Especially do Anarchists insist that children shall be taught all that is known concerning their own reproductive powers and functions, because it is through ignorant reproduction, uncontrolled or haphazard reproduction, that monarchs and hierarchs obtain the necessary supply of subjects, of subjects so poorly endowed by nature that they need rulers and governors.

* * *

On the first page of this issue is found an article written several years ago, and read at a "Mother's Meeting" in a western city. This article outlines the kind of teaching that Anarchists insist shall take the place of the ignorance and credulity upon which all Archists rely for a continuance of their power and privileges.

OBSCENITY LAWS.

In the so-called "middle ages" the battles for human liberty and equality were fought on religious lines mainly. Kings and priests and nobles tried, by the terrors of laws against heresy, to keep their subjects in ignorance, and dependence upon authority for their hope of heaven in the next world, and in this way tried hard to keep the ignorant masses quiet under the robberies of their cunning rulers—church and state. Now that the right to religious freedom and knowledge has been wrested, in the main, from the Archists these crafty diplomats have changed their tactics. Now the battle for liberty and equality is waged on social or "moral" lines. To keep the masses in ignorance and subjection freedom of speech and of press in regard to sex and reproduction is made unlawful, especially so the discussion of methods of limiting the size of families, and for more than a quarter of a century in the United States there has probably been no year that has not witnessed the prosecution and imprisonment of one or more persons, generally editors and publishers, under what are called the postal censorship laws.

At the present monient three men, publishers of a little paper called "Discontent" printed at Home, Washington, are under bonds of one thousand dollars each, charged with sending obscene literature through the public mails, with intent to corrupt public morals. That this charge is simply a dishonest pretext to cover an attempt to suppress and break up an experiment in sociology and economics, which, if successful, would serve as an opening wedge to destroy the invasive power of Archistic government, is very plainly to be seen by any one who cares to acquaint himself or herself with the facts.

* * *

To all who are interested in object lessons bearing upon the general question of "Anarchy in the Home" I would earnestly recommend the reading of the paper "Discontent," published weekly at Home, Washington, at fifty cents per year; also the reading of a monthly paper published at the same place, by that tireless worker for the emancipation of womanhood and motherhood, Lois Waisbrooker. For more than thirty years Mrs. Waisbrooker has been writing and lecturing upon this and kindred reforms. She is now seventy-five years old, but seems as full of zeal and energy as ever. She has herself had experience with the modern inquisition, having been prosecuted and put under bonds for her diligence in trying to show the necessity of a higher and better education for the on-coming generations than that allowed by priest, parson and Mother Grundy. The name of Mrs. Waisbrooker's paper is "Clothed with the Sun." Send for a trial subscription, only twenty-five cents for six months, also for a catalogue of her numerous books and pamphlets.

M. HARMAN.

Bloomington, Illinois.

Fear.

The Spirit of the Plague entered the gate.
One waiting asked, "How many wilt thou slay?"
"A thousand," spake the Spirit, "is my quest."
The Plague made end. The Spirit left the gate.
The Watcher cried, "Ten thousand didst thou slay?"
"Nay, one!" the Spirit said. "Fear killed the rest!"

—R. R. Bowker.

News-Notes and Comments.

Commenting on General Wade's order prohibiting the use of the Spanish forms "Don," "Senor," "Senorita," etc., in southern Luzon, the "Pittsburg Dispatch" says it is "One of those things that were better left undone. It serves no useful purpose and can only irritate. Besides time will work the transition to American style without military forcing." General Wade is evidently determined that the natives of Luzon shall not be allowed to forget their subjugated condition. "And thus the star of Empire takes its way!"

* * *

Captain A. S. Rowan who achieved considerable notoriety as the bearer of "a message to Garcia" at the beginning of the war with Spain is now stationed on the island of Bohol, in the Philippines. He writer home that the situation is extremely discouraging, and that there is no prospect that the war will ever end. Probably many more soldiers in the Philippines who enlisted with enthusiasm to help an oppressed people escape from Spanish rule are now disgusted and discouraged by their enforced enactment of the part of Spain in the Philippines.

* * *

"Free Society" is again admitted to the mails at second class rates, after being excluded on a technicality since the release of its publishers from jail. The paper has been printed every week, just the same, and now the five numbers are sent to its subscribers. The delay has been annoying; but such attempts at suppression serve to propagate an idea and strengthen the persecuted paper and publishers. I do not agree with the theory of Communist-Anarchism advocated by "Free Society," but I think that every one who believes it desirable and practicable should have the opportunity to advocate it and live it. Only through freedom of speech and experiment can we hope to improve our condition.

* * *

Here is some news of interest to our vegetarian friends. An English woman, a missionary in China, wrote to her friends a letter from which the following is an extract:

"Soon after our return a young widow from the capital of the province came to our Bible woman. This widow had been a vegetarian for many years and had been living in a temple. That day she took her rice with Mrs. Chang, but not before she had the gospel from the old woman. I am glad to tell you she very soon decided to give up vegetarianism, and I have since seen her eating fish and pork with as much relish as the others. Oh, that there were more like this dark soul hungering for the truth!"

This appeared in London "Truth," the editor of which, Henry Labouchere remarked that the missionary "apparently looks upon the development of a taste for fish and pork as a most important outward and visible sign of inward and spiritual grace." This method of "carrying the gospel to the heathen" is of a piece with the introduction of opium, rifles and bayonets, with the Bibles. No wonder the Chinese would like to exclude the "outer barbarians." L. H.

The Largest Photograph in the World

Of the handsomest Train in the World. The Alton Limited. A pamphlet of finely finished pictures and a history of how the big picture came to be taken, can be had by sending a two cent stamp to Geo. J. Charlton, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago & Alton Ry., Chicago Ills.

The Stern Realities.

Auntie Black (watching young colored couple)—What dey'd like is ter go aroun' an' take in all sorts ob amusements like befo' dey wuz married.

Mrs. Brown—And they can't afford it?

Auntie Black—Dat's it. Dey're findin' out dat ma'age ain't no cake walk.—Puck.

How It Looked.

Wife—I've gotten so that I don't care if you are not at home more. I have resources of my own.

Husband—You don't mean to say that you have learned to quarrel with yourself?—Life.

VARIOUS VOICES.

M. G. P., Fall Brook, Cal.:—Enclosed find $3.25, for which please send Lucifer to me one year, and the accompanying list of books. Long may Lucifer shine to enlighten a benighted world!

A. G. Lengberg, Grove City, Fla.:—You will find twenty-five cents enclosed for which please send me "Vice. Its Friends and Foes," and samples of Lucifer to list of names sent herewith. Lucifer is very good of late, and I wish to see its circulation increased.

Arthur Wastall, Bilbao, Spain:—Am here enroute for Seville, Tangiers, and newly explored Niger river gold fields of West Africa. Your birthday double number was a literary feast I much enjoyed; it should be widely circulated. Trust you have escaped the persecution to which "Discontent," "Freedom," and other radical organs have been recently subjected. Hope to soon connect again with America's advance thought journals.

Geo. W. Argo, Sioux City, Iowa:—Find enclosed $1.25 subscription for Lucifer and copy of "Prodigal Daughter." The sample copy just received proves that Lucifer, the Light-Bearer has been improved and is a better and stronger paper now than at any time in the past. I notice that Flora W. Fox of Rochester, Minn., is not only a subscriber but an occasional contributor to your valuable paper. Mrs. Fox is a grand, noble woman and her writings are always worth reading.

S. B. Benedictsson, Selkirk, Manitoba:—I herewith send you names of Icelanders that I consider worthy a few copies of your splendid paper, and enclose 50 cents to pay for same. I find no better paper now. I used to think lots of "Freethought Magazine," but am surprised by its misrepresentation of Anarchism. I consider Lucifer the text book of a true civilization. If I was to be electrocuted tomorrow I would still believe and say that Anarchism is the most noble ideal I have ever heard.

N. W. Lermond, Thomaston, Maine:—I read every word in every issue of Lucifer—that shows that I am somewhat interested in the principles you are advocating. In fact, I am a strong believer in freedom in marriage, or of "love in freedom." Your last issue is particularly a strong number and I wish you to send sample copies of it to the enclosed addresses—for which I enclose stamps. Many years ago, long before I ever saw a publication on "free love," I used the same argument you use in this week's Lucifer, to wit: That the animals of the forest and the birds of the air, in their sexual relationship and conduct, are far superior to man in all his boasted "civilization." May you be spared for many a long year to continue your noble battle for truth, justice and freedom.

James Beeson, Hytop, Ala.:—I am in receipt of a copy of Lucifer of Sept. 28 which I must say is grand in sentiment and the enunciations of the principles upon which our republic was founded. That we have drifted far out of the ways of our Revolutionary fathers goes without saying; but not until very recently was the English policy of imperialism advocated in both public and private affairs without shame or excuse. I can't speak too highly of the article on the McKinley burial display, because it shows to what depths of moral and political degradation we, as a people, have descended. We are now nothing more—nothing less—than hero worshippers, and no better than our ancient prototypes, who were not only hero worshippers but creators of the gods also. There are now plenty of Alexanders—imitators of the great marauding thief—who would be willing to be worshipped as gods before they die.

On Nov. 11 there will be an election held here in Alabama for the sole purpose of ratifying a constitution which will disfranchise many native born white men; and this too by men claiming to be Democrats. This election will take place on the 14th anniversary of the legal murder of the Chicago Anarchists, of whom one was a native Alabamian. Shame on the memory of men who would disgrace the name of Albert R Parsons by voting away their own birth right! But, they, say, it takes many kinds of people to make a world.

If the voters of this State had been asked to vote on such a constitution fifty years ago they would have responded with their rifles and shot guns, but now it is almost a foregone conclusion than the degenerate sons of ante-bellum sires will ratify this bunglesome product of tools of the money power, whereby they sign away the political equality so much boasted of by all native Americans.

The Real Cause.

Miss Gabbey—I suppose it was the kisses he stole from Mrs. Gidday on the porch that evening that started all this scandal.

Mr. Short—Not at all. It was the gossips who saw the kisses stolen.—Philadelphia Press.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.

Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.

Sermon from Shakespeare's Text. William Denton. 5c.

Truth Seeker Annuals for 1886, 1890, and 1891. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.

"Two Gods." Rev. J. E. Roberts. 5c.

State Medicine and Doctorcraft. A. E. Giles. 10c.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.

Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.

Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.

The God Exposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.

The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.

Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.

The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.

The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.

A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.

Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel X. Wacht. 10c.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Wahtiok. 20c.

Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.

Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.

Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.

Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Hooser. 10c.

Government Analyzed, Col. J. H. Kelso, 40c.

Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 371 pages, 15c.

The Giant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.

The Gods of Mlerule. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.

Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 3c.

Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.

Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.

Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.

From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 15c.

From Pandemonium to Elysium, James Thierry, 15c,

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Personal: An experienced nurse will take into her own home an invalid or elderly person requiring special attention. The best of care given. Pleasant room and excellent board. Best of references. Address Lillian Harman, 700 Fulton St., Chicago.

Wanted: Children to board and educate, by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spotting of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office,

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Vibratory Cure for Colds, Cures colds in all forms (la grippe, coughs, catarrh, sore throat, constipation, dyspepsia. Each of these three treatments $1.00. Special for Rheumatism, $2.00. Cure for mental depression sent free with either treatment. Tested six years. 15 lessons in Vibratory Method, $5.00. Teachers $4.00. 3 $1.00 treatments to one address, $2.00. MABEL GIFFORD, D. I. S. Sharon, Mass.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER. Snowville, Va.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 466 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 25c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to noninvasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETWEEN BARRIERS—Through regulating reproduction by conscious conception. L. M. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.50, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,057 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 288 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitsGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 20c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 367 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f 808
V.5, no 45
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 45. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 21, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 892

INDIVIDUALITY.

Should one man, ten men, fifty thousand laugh
Because thy thoughts breed folly in their minds,
Fear not. Think on. Such laughter is but chaff,
Mere dross of reason wasted by the winds.

Should one man, ten men, fifty thousand cry
"Thy words are false. Forbear thou to condemn!"
Fear not. Say on. Time's self shall justify:
Thy words shall live, and give the lie to them.

Should one man, ten men, fifty thousand curse
These acts of thine that counter to their will,
Fear not. Act on. Have courage! Which is worse,
To die for truth—or live—to die for nil?

—W. L. Bultitaft.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill."

BY COUNT LEO TOLSTOI.

"Thou shalt do no murder."—Ex. xx. 13.

"All things therefore whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them."—Matt. vii. 12.

When Kings are tried and executed like Charles I., Louis XVI., Maximilian of Mexico, or killed in a palace conspiracy like Peter III., Paul and all kinds of Sultans, Shahs, and Khans, the event is generally passed over in silence. But when one of them is killed without a trial, and not by a palace conspiracy, like Henry IV., Alexander II., Carnot, the Empress of Austria, the Shah of Persia, and just now King Humbert, then such a murder causes great surprise and indignation among Kings and Emperors, and those attached to them, as if these persons were the great enemies of murder, as if they never profited by murder, never took part in it, and never gave orders to commit it. And yet the kindest of these murdered Kings, such as Alexander II., or Humbert, were guilty of the murder of tens of thousands of persons killed on the battlefield, not to mention those executed at home; while hundreds of thousands, even millions of people have been killed, hanged, beaten to death or shot, by the more cruel Kings or Emperors.

Christ's teachings cancels the law "An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth"; but those men who have kept to that law and still keep to it, act upon it by punishing and carry on wars; and not only "an eye for an eye," but give orders to kill thousands without any provocation by declaring war; they have no right to be indignant when the same law is applied to themselves in so infinitesimal a measure that hardly one King or Emperor gets killed to a hundred thousand, perhaps a million ordinary people killed by the order or with the consent of Kings and Emperors.

Kings and Emperors are surprised and horrified when one of themselves is murdered, and yet the whole of their activity consists in managing murder and preparing for murder. The keeping up, the teaching and exercising of armies with which Kings and Emperors are always so much occupied, and of which they are the organizers, what is it but preparation for murder?

The masses are so hypnotized that, though they see what is continually going on around them, they do not understand what it means. They see the unceasing care Kings, Emperors, Presidents bestow on disciplined armies, see the parades, reviews and manoeuvers they hold, and of which they boast to one another, and the people eagerly crowd to see how their own brothers, dressed up in bright-colored, glittering clothes, are turned into machines to sound of drums and trumpets, and who, obedient to the shouting of one man, all make the same movements; and they do not understand the meaning of it all.

Yet the meaning of such drilling is very clear and simple. It is preparing for murder. It means the stupefying of men in order to convert them into instruments for murdering.

And it is just Kings and Emperors and Presidents who do it, and organize it, and pride themselves on it. And it is the same people, whose especial employment is murder-organizing, who have made murder their profession, who dress in military uniforms, carry weapons, (swords at their side), who are horror-struck and indignant when one of themselves is killed.

It is not because such murders as the recent murder of Humbert are exceptionally cruel that they are so terrible. Things done by the order of Kings and Emperors, not only in the days of old, such as the massacre of St. Bartholomew, persecutions for faith, terrible ways of putting down peasant riots, but also the present executions, the torture of solitary confinements and disciplinary battalions, hanging, decapitation, shooting and slaughter at the wars, are incomparably more cruel than the murders committed by Anarchists.

It is not on account of their injustice that these murders are terrible. If Alexander and Humbert did not deserve death the thousands of Russians who perished at Plevna, and of Italians who perished in Abyssinia, deserved it even less. No it is not because of their cruelty and injustice these murders are terrible, but because of the want of reason in those who perpetrate them.

If the regicides commit murder under the influence of their feeling of indignation evoked by witnessing the sufferings of the enslaved people, for which sufferings they hold Alexander II., Carnot, or Humbert responsible, or by the personal feeling of desire for revenge, however immoral such person's conduct may be, still it is comprehensible; but how can an organized body of Anarchists by whom, it is now reported, Bresci was sent out, and by whom another Emperor was threatened, how can it, quietly considering means of improvement of the conditions of the people, find nothing better to do than to murder people, the killing of whom is as useful as cutting off one of the Hydra's heads?

Kings and Emperors have long established a system resembling the arrangement of the magazine rifle, i. e., as soon as one bullet flies out another takes its place. "Le roi est mort—vive le roi!" Then what is the use of killing them? It is only from a most superficial point of view that the murder of such persons can seem a means of saving the people from oppressions and wars, which destroy their lives.

Ref
9L937
v.5
1901/02
no. 45

We need only remember that the same kind of oppression and war went on quite independent of those who stood at the head of the Government, whether it was Nicholas or Alexander, Louis or Napoleon, Frederick or William, Palmerstone or Gladstone, McKinley or anyone else, to see that it is not some definite person who causes the oppression and the wars from which the people suffer.

The misery of the people is not caused by individuals, but by an order of society by which they are bound together in a way that puts them in the power of a few, or more often one man: a man so depraved by his unnatural position of having the fate and lives of millions of people in his power that he is always in an unhealthy state, and suffering more or less from a mania of self-aggrandisement, which is not noticed in him only because of his exceptional position.

Apart from the fact that such men are surrounded from the cradle to the grave by the most insane luxury and its usual accompaniment of flattery and servility, the whole of their education, all of their occupations, are centered on the one object of murder, the study of murder in the past, the best means of murdering in the present, the best ways of preparing for murder. From their earliest years they learn the art of murder in all possible forms, always carry about with them instruments of murder, dress in different uniforms, attend parades, manoeuvers, and reviews, visit each other, present orders and commands of regiments to each other. And yet not only does nobody tell them the real name of their actions, not only does nobody tell them that preparing for murder is revolting and criminal, but they hear nothing except praise and words of admiration from all around them for their actions.

The part of the press which alone reaches them, and which seems to them to be the expression of the feelings of the best of the people or their best representatives, exalts all their words and deeds, however silly and wicked they may be, in the most servile manner. All who surround them, men and women, whether cleric or laymen, all these people who do not value human dignity, vie with each other in flattering them in the most refined manner, agree with them in everything, and deceive them continually, making it impossible for them to know life as it is. These men might live to be a hundred and never live to see a real, free man, and never hear the truth.

We are sometimes appalled by the words and deeds of these men, but if we only consider their state we cannot but see that any man would act in the same way in such a position. A reasonable man can do but one thing in such a position, i. e., leave it. Everyone who remains in such a position will act in the same manner.

What must indeed be going on in the head of some William of Germany, a man of limited understanding, little education, and with a great deal of ambition, whose ideals are like those of a German "yunker," when any silly or horrid thing he may say is always met with an enthusiastic "Hoch!" and commented on as if it were something very important by the Press of the whole world? He says that the soldiers should be prepared to kill their own fathers in obedience to his command. The answer is, "Hurrah!" He says the Gospels must be introduced with a fist of iron. "Hurrah!" He says that the army must not take any prisoners in China, but kill all, and he is not placed in a lunatic asylum, but they cry, "Hurrah!" and set sail for China to execute his orders.

Or Nicholas, who, though naturally modest, begins his reign by declaring to venerable old men, in answer to the desire they express of being allowed to discuss their own affairs, that their hope for self-government is a senseless dream, and the organs of the Press that reach him, and the people whom he meets, praise him for it. He proposes a childish, silly and untruthful project of universal peace at the same time that he is ordering an increase of the army, and even then there are no limits to the laudations of his wisdom and his virtue. Without any reason, he senselessly and pitilessly offends the whole French nation, and again hears nothing but praise. At last he starts the Chinese slaughter, terrible by its injustice, cruelty, and its contrast with his project of peace; and he gets simultaneously applauded from all sides, both for his own conquests and for his adherence to his father's policy of peace. What must indeed be going on in the heads and hearts of such men?

So that it is not Alexanders and Humberts, Williams, Nicholases and Chamberlains who are the cause of oppression and war, even though they do organize them, but those who have placed them and support them in a position in which they have power over the life and death of men.

Therefore it is not necessary to kill Alexanders and Nicholases, Williams and Humberts, but only to leave off supporting the social condition of which they are the product. It is the selfishness and stupefied state of the people who sell their freedom and their honor for insignificant material advantages which supports the present state of society.

Those who stand on the lowest rung of the ladder, partly as a consequence of being stupefied by a patriotic and falsely religious education, partly for the sake of personal advantages, give up their freedom and their feeling of human dignity to those who stand higher, and who offer them material advantages. In a like position are those standing a little higher. They, too, through being stupefied, and especially for material advantages, give up their freedom and sense of human dignity. The same is true of those standing still higher; and so it continues up to the highest rungs, up to the person or persons who, standing on the very summit of the social cone, have no one to submit to, nor anywhere to rise to, and have no motive for action except ambition and love of power. These are generally so depraved and stupefied by their insane power over life and death, and by the flattery and servility of those around them which is connected with such power that while doing evil they feel convinced they are the benefactors of the human race. It is the people themselves who, by sacrificing their human dignity for material profits, produce these men, and are afterwards angry with them for their stupid and cruel acts; murdering such people is like spoiling children and then whipping them.

Very little seems needed to stop oppression and useless war, and to prevent anyone from being indignant with those who seem to be the cause of such oppression and war.

Only that things should be called by their right names and seen as they are; that it should be understood that an army is an instrument of murder, that the recruiting and drilling of armies which Kings, Emperors and Presidents carry on with so much self-assurance are preparations for murder.

If only every King, Emperor and President would understand that his work of organizing armies is not an honorable and important duty, as his flatterers persuade him it is, but a most abominable business, i. e., the preparing for and managing of murder; if only every private individual understood that the payment of taxes which helps to equip soldiers, and above all, military service, are not immaterial, but highly immoral actions, by which he not only permits murder, but takes part in it himself—then this power of the Kings and Emperors which arouses an indignation, and for which they now get killed, would of itself come to an end.

And so the Alexanders, Carnots, Humberts and others must not be killed, but it ought to be proved to them that they are murderers; and, above all, they should not be allowed to kill men; their orders to murder should not be obeyed.

If men do not yet act in this manner, it is only because of the hypnotic influence Governments for self-preservation so diligently exercise on them. Therefore we can contribute towards stopping people killing kings and each other, not by murder (murders only strengthen this hypnotic state), but by awakening from it.

And it is this that I have tried to do in these remarks.

One Qualification for It.

"Shure, Mrs. McGoogin, an' is it thrue that yer mon's got a position on the p'lace foorce?"

"Yis, indade, Mrs. O'Hoolihan. An' phwy not? He was afther gittin' too fat t' worruk."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

In Our Book Department.

One of the latest and most important of the new books is "Fields, Factories and Workshops; or Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work," by Kropotkin. The author presents an exhaustive array of facts. The scope of the work is outlined in the chapter headings, as follows:

Chapter I. The Decentralization of Industries. Division of labor and integration—The spread of industrial skill—Each nation its own producer of manufactured goods—The United Kingdom—France—Germany—Russia—"German Competition."

Chapter II. The Decentralization of Industries (continued). Italy and Spain—India—Japan—The United States—The cotton, woollen and silk trades—the growing necessity for each country to rely upon home-consumers.

Chapter III. The possibilities of agriculture. The development of agriculture—Can the soil of Great Britain feed its inhabitants?—British agriculture—Compared with agriculture in France; in Belgium—Market gardening; its achievements—Is it profitable to grow wheat in Great Britain?—American agriculture; intensive culture in the states.

Chapter IV. The possibilities of agriculture (continued). The doctrine of Malthus—Progress in wheat growing—East Flanders—Jersey—Potato crops, past and present—Immigration—Major Hallett's experiments—Planted wheat.

Chapter V. The Possibilities of Agriculture (continued). Extension of market gardening and fruit growing: in France; in the United States—Culture under glass—Kitchen gardens under glass—Hot-house culture: in Guernsey; in Belgium.

Chapter VI. Small industries and Industrial Villages. Industry and agriculture—The small industries—Different types—Petty trades in Great Britain: Sheffield, Leeds, Lake District, Birmingham—Petty trades in France: weaving and various others—The Lyons region—Paris, emporium of petty trades.

Chapter VII. Small Industries and Industrial Villages (continued). Petty trades in Germany: discussion upon the subject and conclusion arrived at—Petty trades in Russia.

Chapter VIII. Brain Work and Manual Work. Divorce between science and handicraft—Technical education—Complete education—The Moscow system; applied at Chicago, Boston, Aberdeen—Concrete teaching—Present waste of time—Science and technics—Advantages which science can derive from a combination of brain work with manual work.

Among other matter of interest the Appendix contains: French Imports; Growth of Industry in Russia; Iron Industry in Germany; Machinery in Germany; Cotton Industry in Germany; Mining and Textiles in Austria; Cotton Factories in India; Irrigated Meadows in Italy; Imports of Vegetables to the United Kingdom; and Market Gardening in Belgium.

The book is illustrated, and contains 270 pages. Swan, Sonnenschein & Co., London, publishers. For sale at this office. Price 40 cents; postage 6 cents.

* * *

"Marriage in Free Society," by Edward Carpenter, is a daintily bound, handsomely printed booklet treating of the relations of the sexes as they exist today and as they will (it is to be hoped) exist in a more civilized future. It is difficult to make a selection—the entire work is so good—but we will give the closing paragraphs:

If it be objected that such private contracts, or such facilitations of Divorce, as here spoken of, would simply lead to frivolous experimental relationships entered into and broken-off ad infinitum, it must be remembered that the responsibility for due rearing and maintenance of children must give serious pause to such a career; and that to suppose that any great mass of the people would find their good in a kind of matrimonial game of General Post is to suppose that the mass of the people have really never acquired or been taught the rudiments of common sense in such matters—is to suppose a case for which there would hardly be a parallel in the customs of any nation or tribe that we know of.

In conclusion, it is evident that no very great change for the better in marriage-relations can take place except as the accompaniment of deep-lying changes in Society at large; and that alterations in the Law alone will effect but a limited improvement. Indeed it is not very likely, as long as the present commercial order of society lasts, that the existing Marriage-laws—founded as they are on the idea of property—will be very radically altered, though they may be to some extent. More likely is it that, underneath the law, the common practice will slide forward into newer customs. With the rise of the new society, which is already outlining itself within the structure of the old, many of the difficulties and bugbears, that at present seem to stand in the way of a more healthy relation between the sexes, will of themselves disappear.

It must be acknowledged, however, that though a gradual broadening out and humanizing of Law and Custom are quite necessary it cannot fairly be charged against these ancient tyrants that they are responsible for all the troubles connected with sex. There are millions of people today who never could marry happily—however favorable the conditions might be—simply because their natures do not contain in sufficient strength the elements of loving surrender to another; and, as long as the human heart is what it is, there will be natural tragedies arising from the willingness or unwillingness of one person to release another when the former finds that his or her love is not returned. While it is quite necessary that these natural tragedies should not be complicated and multiplied by needless legal interference—complicated into the numberless artificial tragedies which are so exasperating when represented on the stage or in romance, and so saddening when witnessed in real life—still we may acknowledge that, short of the millennium, they will always be with us, and that no institution of marriage alone, or absence of institution, will rid us of them. That entire and unswerving refusal to 'cage' another person, or to accept an affection not perfectly free and spontaneous, which will, we are fain to think, be always more and more the mark of human love, must inevitably bring its own price of mortal suffering with it; yet the Love so gained, whether in the individual or in society, will be found in the end to be worth the pang—and as far beyond the other love, as is the wild Bird of Paradise that comes to feed out of our hands unbidden more lovely than the prisoner we shut with draggled wings behind the bars. Love is doubtless the last and most difficult lesson that humanity has to learn; in a sense it underlies all the others.

Sent from this office on receipt of 25 cents.

* * *

We have recently received from England a supply of Socialistic and Communist-Anarchist pamphlets, which we expect to keep in stock. The titles are:

Monopoly, or How Labor Is Robbed. By William Morris. Illustrated. Price 5 cents.

Useful Work versus Useless Toil. By William Morris. Price 5 cents.

Anarchist Morality. By Peter Kropotkin. Sixth edition Price 5 cents.

The Commune of Paris. By Peter Kropotkin. Price 5 cents.

The Socialist League. A short account of the Commune of Paris. By E. Belfort Bax, Victor Dave, and William Morris. Price 10 cents.

Chants for Socialists. By William Morris. Contains: The Day Is Coming; The Voice of Toil; The Message of the March Wind; No Master; All for the Cause; The March of the Workers; and Down Among the Dead Men. Price 5 cents.

The State: Its Historic Role. By Peter Kropotkin. Price 10 cents.

Evolution and Revolution. By Elisee Reclus. Price 5 cents.

God and the State. By Michael Bakounine. With a preface by Carlo Cafiero and Elisee Reclus. Price 25 cents.

The Man Who Pays the Tax.

When the cannon's thunder ceases
And the foe is overcome,
And no more the army marches
To the beating of the drum,
Oh, the Bond will not have perished
In the fury of the strife,
But the Bond will have been funded
And will have eternal life.

Soon the foe will yell for quarter
And the butchery will cease,
And the silence of the mortar
Will proclaim the reign of peace,
And our armies will have conquered
All the oriental blacks;
But the Bond will cry, 'No quarter"
To the man that pays the tax

Oh, the fools that rive! shackles
On the men of other lands!
They are only bloody binding
Their own children's children's hands.
Who will fall beneath the burdens
Of the army on their backs,
For the Bond will give no quarter
To the man that pays the tax.

—Selected.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

892.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Socialism and Anarchism.

In last week's Lucifer the leading article treated of definitions and comparisons of and between the two opposing systems or cults scientifically named Archism and Anarchism, or Archy and Anarchy.

In this article it is purposed to treat of "Socialism" in its relation to the two cults just named, the moving cause to such consideration being, in part at least, the statement in a leading Chicago daily that the Socialists of Chicago have decided to make the fight against Anarchy their fight. Under the head "Coming Into the Open" an editorial in the "Chicago Chronicle" of Nov. 7, says:

> The essential connection between Anarchy and Socialism as now advocated is frankly acknowledged by the Socialists organized in this city.
>
> At a meeting held Sunday the Chicago Socialists decided "to make the fight against Anarchy their fight."
>
> True, ideal, Socialism is the exact opposite of Anarchy.
>
> The gospel of Anarchy is single. It is abolition of government—freedom for every human being to do as he pleases without regard to the rights of any other human being. Necessarily this single gospel means that the physically strong shall do what they please with the physically weaker. At the start, therefore, it reduces woman to the place she is held in among savage men. Free love is one of the avowed tenets of Anarchy. At that point, however false, Socialism, as now preached, is at one with Anarchy.
>
> The Chicago Socialists are resolved that no laws shall be passed detrimental to the advocacy of another form of government "or of no government."
>
> The ballot box is the place to propose change in the government. But your Anarchist does not believe in a ballot box. If he could lay aside his gospel for a day and submit to the ballot box the question "Shall all government be abolished?" he would discover that the number of idiots, fools, fanatics and maniacs in the United States is surprisingly small.
>
> The Socialists of Chicago have cleared the air by coming out into the open and declaring the cause of Anarchy their cause.

It will doubtless be noticed that Lucifer quotes frequently from the Chicago "Chronicle." The main reason for this is the fact that the "Chronicle" is the oldest of the great Chicago dailies, published in English, that calls itself "Democratic;" also because during the late "Anarchist" scare it was the only leading party organ of this city that took ground against the proposed enactment of laws intended to "stamp out" Anarchistic literature and to banish or deport all who claimed to be Anarchists.

Is it because the "Chronicle" lost prestige with its plutocratic masters by its advocacy of fairness and justice for the persecuted Anarchists, that it now "out-Herods Herod" in its misrepresentation and abuse of Anarchy and Anarchists?

In our quotations from this democratic authority we have been careful to avoid the imputation of unfairness by giving partial or garbled statements from its columns. We have given its editorial broadsides in their entirety. If the "Chronicle" had treated others in like manner, if it had been willing that its readers should see what the doctrines of Anarchism really are, would it not have quoted the exact language of some recognized teacher of that cult, or at least have referred its readers to the books or papers published by such recognized teacher?

Evidently the Archistic organs are unwilling that their readers should read and judge for themselves. As in all the past the Archistic tyrants and robbers of the masses of the people know that their power and privileges depend upon the ignorance and prejudices of their victims. To tell the truth is fatal to the game of tyrants, whether of state or church.

Having shown in last Lucifer what the word anarchy means, and what its scientific or philosophic defenders teach we shall omit a repetition of that statement here; the main purpose of this article being to show what Socialism—scientific Socialism, is, and wherein its objects are identical with those of Anarchism.

* * *

Quoting from the New American Cyclopedia, edited by Charles A. Dana and George Ripley, "Socialism is the name given to the philosophy or doctrine which teaches that the social relations of mankind are susceptible of a more precise, orderly and harmonious arrangement than that which obtains in existing society."

The word socialism is derived from the Latin SOCIUS "a companion," and this again is said to be derived from the word SEQUOR "to follow," or "to seek." Hence, by etymology those who are seeking the better way, the more precise, orderly and harmonious arrangement of human relations, may be rightly called Socialists.

But in the larger or more general sense, all are Socialists who do not wish to live alone. Even the veriest hermit owes his existence to Socialism, for without the association of two persons no hermit could come into life on the human or mortal plane. Take, for instance, the individual known as Archbishop Corrigan whose utterances against Socialism have been much commended by the editor of the "Chronicle." This man is himself a Socialist of a very pronounced type. What could he do, and what would he be, without the Socialistic help he receives from thousands of his parishioners, also from thousands of Protestants and from those who are members of no church at all?

In the "Chronicle" of Nov. 12, this man is quoted, approvingly quoted by the editor in an article entitled "Socialism and Labor," as saying:

> "In endeavoring to transfer the possessions of individuals to the community the Socialists strike at the interests of every wage-earner. They deprive him of the liberty of the disposal of his wages, and thus of all hope and possibility of increasing his stock and of bettering his condition of life."

When Archbishop Corrigan voluntarily pays his taxes, his equal share of the government taxes on his cathedral, his parsonage, his nunneries, his other school buildings etc., his criticisms of Socialists will perhaps be listened to with more respect.

But when and where does he get his authority for saying that Socialists would deprive the laborer of "the liberty of the disposal of his wages"? That this is what the Archbishop and the other Archists of church and state are now doing, forcibly depriving the laborer of his wages, can easily be shown, but since there are said to be "just fifty-seven kinds of Socialists" it would be well always, in his "sermons to the laboring classes," that this distinguished beneficiary of church-state Socialism should tell what kind of Socialists he is talking about; and be well to be very sure also that he quotes correctly their own words before holding up Socialistic doctrines for public reprobation.

IDEAL SOCIALISM.

"Ideal Socialism is the exact opposite of Anarchy." This statement is no doubt true—from the standpoint of the "Chronicle" and of Archbishop Corrigan and of the other Archists to whose interests the "Chronicle" seems devoted. It has been truly said that every man creates the god he worships. The god of the ancient Hebrews was, like his creators—vain, jealous, cruel, revengeful, bloodthirsty, deceitful, grasping, unscrupulous. The god of John Calvin, of Jonathan Edwards, of the popes of Rome, and of most professed Christians, is simply the ideal, the personification of the characteristics of their creators—meddlesome, invasive, self-seeking, cruel, revengeful, hence we find Christian missionaries the loudest and most insistent in their demands that vengeance be inflicted on the Chinese, the Turks and others who have resisted the attempts of said missionaries to supplant and overthrow their own cherished religious ideals.

* * *

Just so with ideals of Socialism. The state of society that would fill the ideal of the falsely called Democrat and the PSEUDO-Republican of the present day, is a society in which the few rule and rob the many according to law—as they do now; the only change they desire being such modification of our present laws as would make perpetual the privileges now enjoyed by the rich, such as exemption of the property of all corporations of capitalists from taxation, after the example set by church corporations; also a permanent increase of the regular army added to such changes generally as would give our present rulers all the perquisites and privileges enjoyed by European monarchs and titled aristocrats—as was lately suggested by ex-President Cleveland when he said, if only monarchy can protect us against Anarchy, then the "American people are prepared for the departure," or words to that effect.

* * *

But while the majority of clergymen seem to agree in denouncing the ideal of Socialism that would make common cause with Anarchism there are a few notable exceptions, as when Heber Newton, of the Protestant Episcopal church, New York, is reported in a recent sermon from his pulpit:

> "Anarchism is in reality the ideal of political and social science, and also the ideal of religion. It is the ideal to which Jesus Christ looked forward. Christ founded no church, established no state, gave practically no laws, organized no government and set up no external authority, but he did seek to write on the hearts of men God's law, and make them self-legislating."

THE BALLOT BOX.

"The ballot box is the place to propose change in the government."

It is a wise maxim which says, "Never bet your money against a gambler's own tricks." The ballot box is simply a game in which the owners of the machine—the monarchists, hierarchists etc., hold all the winning numbers, cards, chips, or what not.

These Archists say, in effect, to the self-rulers—the Anarchists and Socialists, "Heads I win; Tails you lose!"

This is so plain that he who runs may read; as when the "Chronicle" man himself says, "The Chicago Socialists are resolved that no laws shall be passed detrimental to the advocacy of another form of government or of 'no government.'"

The very evident meaning of this is that freedom of speech should not be permitted to the extent of advocating another form of government, or the abolition of the present form of government.

Thomas Jefferson, the reputed founder of the Democratic party in the United States, in the Declaration of Independence claimed it as the fundamental or inalienable right of every people to change their form of government, or to abolish it entirely. Evidently such doctrine is no longer tolerated by the professed followers of Jefferson.

* * *

With the ballot box in the hands of those who make it a crime to advocate or vote for a change in the form of government, why should Anarchists and Socialists go to the polls and vote? To do so is more foolish even than to bet one's money against a faro bank, where the winning numbers are always held by the bankers.

Besides the certainty of losing his vote when voting against the Archists' own game the voter stultifies himself by tacitly agreeing to submit to the verdict of the game, and thus becomes a party to his own enslavement.

* * *

Anarchists and Socialists do not wish to abolish government, as a general proposition. They are very willing that Democrats and Republicans shall have all the government and all the rulers they want, provided they do not impose their government upon those who prefer to be their own rulers, just as agnostics and freethinkers are willing that Archbishop Corrigan shall have his present princely revenues so long as he does not compel non-Catholics to contribute their money for the maintenance of those revenues by means of our partialistic, paternalistic and invasive taxation laws.

This ruling bishop himself uses Anarchistic arguments against our State-Socialistic government when protesting against laws which compel Catholics to pay taxes for the support of public schools.

* * *

So long as the ballot box is owned by and controlled by Archists no self-respecting Anarchist or Socialist whose motto is equal rights for all can be blamed for shunning "the polls" on election days as he would shun a faro bank or moral pest house.

M. HARMAN.

AT HOME. Till further notice the address of the editor will be 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

DOES YOUR subscription expire before No. 892? See your wrapper. If you are unable to send money now, please let us know whether you want us to continue sending Lucifer to you, or not.

Please send in your orders as early as possible if you want extra copies of this issue for distribution. Two cents each, to any address. Postage extra if you want papers sent before regular mailing day.

THE FOURTEENTH ANNIVERSARY of the legal murder of the five "Chicago Anarchists" was observed as usual in Chicago on Nov. 11. The "Record-Herald" estimated the attendance at 1200; but the newspapers usually underestimate the size of such meetings. Voltairine de Cleyre made the principal address.

Emma Goldman Defines Her Position.

In Lucifer No. 889 was printed a report that at a meeting of the Manhattan Liberal Club I deplored the assassination of McKinley. This is a misrepresentation, for at that particular meeting there was no particular occasion to either deplore or applaud the assassination, consequently I made no such statements. Besides, in my article on the Buffalo tragedy in Free Society of Oct. 6 I plainly and emphatically stated my position, and instead of retracting I could only add that I have since come to the firm conclusion that Czolgosz was a man with the beautiful soul of a child and the energy of a giant. I have observed with great sorrow that the majority of Anarchists have utterly failed to comprehend the depth of that soul, that was put to death by organized authority on Oct. 29.

Methinks that Anarchy is the philosophy of life, and as such it includes every branch of human knowledge pertaining to life. If this be so, and I know of no Anarchists who would deny it, Anarchists ought to be students of psychology and honestly endeavor to explain certain phenomena, not only from a politico-economic but also from a psychological standpoint. Had they done so, they would not have joined the thoughtless rabble in its superficial denunciation of Leon Czolgosz as a lunatic and a villain. Do not we know that every act which ignorant minds have failed to explain, have ever been stamped as insane or villainous?

Surely it does not behoove thinking people to adopt such methods in their search for a cause for certain acts. Besides, is it not time to perceive that the act of Sept. 6, like many previous acts, was but the result of the elements pent up and stifled in the human heart through a false and pernicious system and bound to leap through the heavy walls of organized authority sooner or later?

Of course I believe that each individual has a right to his opinion, but I do not wish to be a party in the vain endeavor of some of our Anarchists to bow before respectability by sacrificing their ideas to its altar.

It has taken all my time for the past fourteen years to deplore human misery in all its awful forms, so I have not a moment left to deplore the assassination of one, who has ignored all rights of the people, and bowed before the dictum of a privileged few; then, too, I am kept busy regretting the fact that so many even in the radical ranks have lost their manhood and womanhood at the sight of Government and Power let loose, and have denounced the man, who was so pitiful in his loneliness and yet so sublime in his silence and superiority over his enemies.

New York, Nov. 11. EMMA GOLDMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

F. H. Bergman, Chicago:—Find enclosed $2 for subscription and books. Your Lucifer is a brave little paper and deserves the support of all liberty-loving women and men.

W. B. T., Little Rock, Ark.:—Plese send me three copies "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes" for the enclosed 50 cents. Judging from synopsis of contents it will be good reading for a whole lot of people.

A. L. V., Hannibal, Mo.:—I send names of a few friends to whom please send copies of Lucifer. I admire the outspoken sentiments of Lillian and the editor in regard to Anarchism, and am certain they should convince any thinking person.

S. B. Benedictsson, Selkirk, Manitoba:—I am working in an unfertile field, and the name Lucifer is dreaded by most people; but I have succeeded in getting a subscriber for Lucifer and enclose a dollar for same. Please send "Nora," as premium.

W. G. Markland, Highland Park, Tenn.:—Please place the enclosed $1 to Leon's credit on subscription. Lucifer is highly appreciated in our circle; but the consensus is "Socialism first." This makes it difficult to get subscribers. Can't be helped just now.

Mrs. Katherine Buck, Elkton, S. Dakota:—Enclosed find 50 cents for pamphlets. Lucifer and Helen Wilmans' "Freedom" are the delight of my life. I am sure you are teaching the truth and are very brave to do so; but what a pity so few people will receive it.

T. F. Burns, Mt. Pleasant St. Plymouth, Mass.:—Enclosed find $2 to continue my subscription and pay for enclosed list of books. "Man is the noblest work of creation, the masterpiece of God," says man. "The female is the superior," says Aunt Elmina. Wonder what the monkey thinks about it?

James Thierry, Otter Lake, Mich.:—Why do not the apostles of Philosophical Anarchism, Mr. Benj. R. Tucker and Mr. V. Yarros, come forward and explain to the befuddled masses the nature of a much abused philosophy, that must be voluntarily realized for the benefit of all terrestrial organisms, without exceptions?

Laura H. Earle, Germantown, Pa.:—We have positively exulted in Lucifer's recent editorials on the state of the public mind just now; and on Archism vs. Anarchism. We are in thorough sympathy too, with Mr. Harman, in his appreciation of "The Public" of Chicago, which we have found invaluable for several years past.

Arthur C. Everett, Gen. Del., Santa Barbara, Cal.:—Please credit enclosed on my subscription, and insert my "Wanted" ad. again. I have better returns from my ad. in your paper and the "Freethought Ideal" than from all the other papers combined in which it has appeared. Lucifer is like California wine—grows better with age. I like Lucifer's attitude in defense of free speech.

Geo. W. Faulkrod, Suffolk, Va.:—I enclose $1 to apply on my subscription to Lucifer. I think its editors stands at the head of the class, even though H. L. Green would like to banish them to his island in the Pacific. I was sorry to see that article in the "Freethought Magazine." I always thought Mr. Green a true advocate of free speech and free press; but my faith in him in that respect has been shaken. He would not only send Lucifer and all Anarchists in this country to his island, but if Paine and Jefferson were here they would have to go too.

Aurin P. Hill, 13 Elizabeth St., Boston, Mass.:—You are an old man and should take a reasonable view of things. One person holds more land than one person can cultivate. This is selfish on the part of the holder thereof. Lucifer has a dearth of ideas because one mind is overworked. Several persons pay the expenses of Lucifer and a few hold all the space on its pages. It seems to me that a wiser system and more justice would prevail if one page of Lucifer were used for short letters from the people who are for or against the objects for which Lucifer is established.

Chas. L. Govan, Home Wash.:—We have sold more literature since the excitement over McKinley's death than all together that we have sold since we commenced to carry pamphlets and books, and to people we had never heard of before. I sold pamphlets today to the German Lutheran preacher who has taken it on himself to try and convert us. He was our friend when the Tacoma papers were trying to incite a mob to come out here. He told them if they did succeed in doing so he would lead a company against them. He is well-meaning and has a keen sense of justice. He preached tonight in our school house.

Our trip to Spokane was not an unenjoyable one, though we went as prisoners. We were treated by all with the greatest consideration. The deputy took us into a sleeping car and we had a good night's rest. The deputy said to me: "Govan, you ought to pay me for bringing you to Spokane, for you have gotten you ideas before more, and a different class of people in these three days than you would with 'Discontent' in ten years. You have done good propaganda." The Spokane people treated us as fairly as possible. Larkin and I visited the Seventh Day Adventist mission and discussed Anarchy in their reading room, with the person in charge, who was a very manly fellow. Larkin is a good reasoner and he put in some good licks, which his hearers will not soon forget. All in the room dropped their papers and listened. If those fellows in Tacoma who thought they could scare us, could only see our nice new print shop which we commenced the day of our arrest and have just completed, they would think we don't scare as easily as they think. Money for the defense is coming in slowly. We ought to be able to carry the case to the highest courts if necessary but it takes money which we radicals have not.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.

Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry, 10c.

Sermon from Shakespeare's Text. William Denton. 5c.

Truth Seeker Annuals for 1888, 1889, and 1891. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.

"Two Gods." Rev. J. E. Roberts. 5c.

State Medicine and Doctorcraft. A. B. Giles. 10c.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.

Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull, 5c.

Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c.

Orthodoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.

The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.

The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote, 5c.

Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.

The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.

The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.

A Victim of Comstockism. Being the history of the persecution of Geo. E. Wilson, by the agent of the Western Society for the Suppression of Vice. 10c.

Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick, 20c.

Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 88 pages, 10c.

Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.

Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.

Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Bonser. 10c.

Government Analyzed, Col. J. H. Kelso. 40c.

Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 271 pages, 10c.

The Gilt and Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.

The Gods of Miracle. A tale of Gods and of Men. 318 pages. 25c.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.

Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 5c.

Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls, 5c.

Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.

Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.

From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: The address of an indepent woman who would do light housekeeping—requiring only a small portion of her time—for room and board in a pleasant home in Chicago. For particulars address M., care Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago

Personal: An experienced nurse will take into her own home an invalid or elderly person requiring special attention. The best of care given. Pleasant room and excellent board. Best of references. Address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago

Wanted:— Address of Ladies, free from religion and Mother Grundy who will correspond with gentlemen likewise free. Gentlemen must send ten cents silver and two cent stamp for List. Arthur C. Everett, N. M., Santa Barbara, General Delivery, California.

Wanted: Children to board and educate, by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) SNOWVILLE, Va. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnefille portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of localities connected with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES.—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. A. K. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, fabricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lea. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR-E
f# 808
V.5, no.46
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 46. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, NOV. 28, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No 893

THE CAPTIVE.

BY L. H. EARLE.

"My bonds accurst," says Love
"I cannot burst" says Love,
"In village, town and plain,
By stream and rolling main,
Release I seek in vain,"
Says Love.

"They make my name" says Love,
"The butt of shame" says Love,
"Target for every wrong,
Denied by every tongue,
I still must suffer long"
Says Love.

"My hands and feet" says Love,
"With chains discreet" says Love,
"They guard, as all may see,
Romance must feigned be,
And so they call me free"
Says Love.

"But in my dreams" says Love,
"It ever seems" says Love,
"My savior giveth ear.
My freedom draweth near,
And I am Freedom's seer."
Says Love.

"Who Is the Somebody?"

"Somebody gets the surplus wealth that labor produces and does not consume. Who is the Somebody?" Such is the problem recently posited in the editorial columns of the "New York Truth." Substantially the same question has been asked a great many times before, but, as might have been expected, this new form of putting it has created no small hubbub. "Truth's" columns are full of it; other journals are taking it up; clubs are organizing to discuss it; the people are thinking about it; students are pondering over it. For it is a most momentous question. A correct answer to it is unquestionably the first step in the settlement of the appalling problems of poverty, intemperance, ignorance and crime. "Truth," in selecting it as a subject on which to harp and hammer from day to day, shows itself a level-headed, far-sighted newspaper. But, important as it is, it is by no means a difficult question to one who really considers it before giving an answer, though the variety and absurdity of nearly all the replies thus far volunteered certainly tend to give an opposite impression.

What are the ways by which men gain possession of property? Not many. Let us name them: work, gift, discovery, gaming, the various forms of illegal robbery by force or fraud, usury. Can men obtain wealth by any other than one or more of these methods? Clearly, no. Whoever the Somebody may be, then, he must accumulate his riches in one of these ways. We will find him by the process of elimination.

Is the Somebody the laborer? No; at least not as laborer; otherwise the question were absurd. Its premises exclude him. He gains a bare subsistence by his work; no more. We are searching for his surplus product. He has it not.

Is the Somebody the beggar, the invalid, the cripple, the discoverer, the gambler, the highway robber, the burglar, the defaulter; the pickpocket, or the common swindler? None of these to any extent worth mentioning. The aggregate of wealth absorbed by these classes of our population compared with the vast mass produced is a mere drop in the ocean, unworthy of consideration in studying a fundamental problem in political economy. These people get some wealth, it is true; enough, probably, for their own purposes; but labor can spare them the whole of it, and never know the difference.

Then we have found him. Only the usurer remaining, he must be the Somebody whom we are looking for; he, and none other. But who is the usurer and whence comes his power? There are three kinds of usury: interest on money, rent of lands and houses, and profit in exchange. Whoever is in receipt of any of these is a usurer. And who is not? Scarcely anyone. The Banker is a usurer; the manufacturer is a usurer; the merchant is a usurer; the landlord is a usurer, and the workingman who puts his savings (if he has any) out at interest, or takes rent for his house and lot (if he owns one), or exchanges his labor for more than an equivalent—he, too, is a usurer. The sin of usury is one under which all are included, and for which all are responsible. But all do not benefit by it. The vast majority suffer. Only the chief usurers accumulate: in agricultural and thickly settled countries, the landlords; in industrial and commercial countries, the bankers. Those are the Somebodies who swallow up the surplus wealth.

And where do the Somebodies get their power? From monopoly. Here, as usual, the state is the chief of sinners. Usury rests on two great monopolies—the monopoly of land and the monopoly of credit. Were it not for these, it would disappear. Ground-rent exists only because the state stands by to collect it and to protect land-titles rooted in force or fraud. Otherwise credit would be free to all, and no one could control more than he used. Interest and house-rent exists only because the State grants to a certain class of individuals and corporations the exclusive privilege of using its credit and theirs as a basis for the issuance of circulating currency. Otherwise credit would be free to all, and money, brought under the law of competition, would be issued at cost. Interest and rent gone, competition would leave little or no chance for profit in exchange except in business protected by tariff or patent laws. And there again the State has but to step aside to cause the last vestige of usury to disappear.

The usurer is the Somebody, and the State is the protector. Usury is the serpent gnawing at labor's vitals, and only liberty can detach and kill it. Give laborers their liberty, and they will keep their wealth. As for the Somebody, he, stripped of his power to steal, must either join their ranks or starve.—From Benj. R. Tucker's "Instead of a Book."

X
Per HX937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.46

The Movement in Favor of Ignorance.

BY C. L. JAM'S.

I am glad to learn that "later articles in Lucifer's columns" will deal with the questions how to effect "a change of ideals" and "abolition of the old barbaric systems or institutions," though I had an impression that this description would apply to pretty much any article in Lucifer's columns—always excepting those which represent the Movement in Favor of Ignorance (They proposed no change, except backwards, and no abolition of anything except recent inventions). But I submit the new series should not begin by being unjust to the promoters of positive discovery. Why do not men like Havelock Ellis and Lombroso apply the Bertillon measurements to high class criminals? Because the high class criminals, such as Lord Kitchener, Joseph Chamberlain, and Edward VII. won't let them! You know little of their inquiring spirit if you doubt that they would like to apply these and every similar psychological searchlight to the entire human race! And "why be so very careful to take the Bertillion measurements of men and women, boys and girls for petty offenses, such as stealing a ham of bacon or a sack of flour?" You must ask the police that, not the scientists. It is the police who do it; and their answer would be ready. They do it to assist the rich in keeping the poor subject (which is their business), by facilitating identification of those poor who presume to kick. For the scientist, these prison statistics are merely data, which he can get, as he cannot the measurements of Kitchener, Chamberlain, et al. If you think Lombroso and his school are not so "impartially, that is really, scientific in their investigations" as to investigate high class crime with such means as they possess, you know very little about them. One of Lombroso's most famous books, "The Man of Genius," is entirely devoted to those the world considers great; he has little to say about the qualities which made them so (this being a well-worn subject); but he gives special attention to their vices, crimes, insane-like traits, diseases, and very particularly all he can learn of their physique. A ponderous work by one of his disciples is devoted to "Collective Crimes"—conspiracy, riot, etc., etc., up to crimes of national magnitude, such as slavery and war; moral that man acting collectively is always at his worst,—the morale of a mob, army, nation etc., being determined every time by its oldest lowest element.

The Anarchistic spirit of degeneration-rtudies can be understood only by those who have read them; but of their Anarchistic effects something may be told. They have got the laws against "unnatural crimes" totally repealed in Italy—cut down to mere regulations against public nuisances, in France. In America, they have brought such penologists as Drahms to favor "dismissal with warning" for all first offenses of a minor sort. The contempt these writers unanimously express for sacred property, politics, common-law jurisprudence, and above all the established sexual code, is extreme, and has this great advantage over other Anarchistic agitation, that it does not appear as the utterance of zealots, but impartial philosophers of the positive school, who never express themselves without facts and figures for everything they say.

* * *

When Harry Clinton Goodrich trots out those "statistics the world over" which "prove more deaths by vaccination than where there is none" I promise to give them very particular attention. Meanwhile, I hope he will excuse my saying that I doubt his being able to find the pigeon-hole in which he put them. And while he is looking, I will give him a few figures on which to meditate. The Philadelphia Municipal Hospital for Infectious Diseases, treated 4,777 cases of small-pox between 1570 and 1893. The following is a table of showing the relation of these cases to vaccination:

Class.	Ground of Classification	Cases	Deaths	Percentage fatal.
I.	Not Vaccinated.	1,513	881	58.92.
II.	Said doubtfully to be vaccinated.	249	146	59.10.
III.	Vaccinated in infancy.	2,997	459	17.60.
IV.	Remember vaccination, long ago.	74	15	20.27.
V.	Lately vaccinated.	57	25	43.86.

(These were doubtless first vaccinated after exposure to small-pox).

The ratio of cases to cases, if we call class I., 100; is, in class II., 16 plus a fraction which we'll omit; for simplicity's sake; in class III., it is 12 and a fraction; in class IV., 4 (fraction); in class V., only 3 and a fraction. Compounding these ratios with those of deaths to cases; and omitting fractions, as before; we see the figures, as far as they go, show the chance of death from smallpox in class I. to be more than five times what it is in class II., nearly eighteen times what it is in class III., sixty-eight times what it is in class IV., more than forty-two times what it is in class V. But, in truth, the figures do not do vaccination justice; for the total number of persons in the different classes can be estimated no more closely than this, that, in all civilized countries, class III. is much the largest.

Henry C. Roberts is respectfully informed that I hate to have the editor of Lucifer make himself ridiculous, first because I respect him highly, secondly because whatever tends to set people of ordinary information laughing at him, is an injury to the cause of woman. If he wishes to know further why I fear the publication of the editor's experience as a medical practitioner would have that effect, I refer him to that statement in Lucifer, No. 889, that McKinley was killed by Czolgosz "and the medical doctors." Is the editor of Lucifer aware that twenty years ago a wound through both walls of the stomach would have been certainly fatal in an hour or two? Does he know that McKinley lived a week with such a wound? Is he aware that McKinley's recovery was expected on Wednesday following the Friday when he was shot? Does he know the reason it was expected is that hundreds as badly wounded as McKinley do recover every year? Is he aware that the disappointment of McKinley's physicians is almost unanimously attributed, neither to the nature of the wound nor of the treatment, but to the patient's advanced age and bodily weakness? I cannot believe he does, for that would convict him, not of criticizing the physicians as individuals—neither he nor I can at all judge whether their treatment were the best,—but of a most uncandid sneer at science in general and its recent progress. I must then, believe he does not know all these facts. But that means he does not know as much about medicine and its recent history as any ordinarily careful reader of the newspapers. And one who does not, can only make himself absurd by writing about it—a suggestion which I hope the editor will not take unkindly, since my whole object in making it is to dissuade him from becoming absurd. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful."

It may be the mistake of my life to believe in observation and experiment. Perhaps the "progressive hygienists," whose knowledge of the subject dates from the Peloponnesian war; or the Catholic exorcists; or Mrs. Eddy's disciples; or "Indian doctors"; or natural bone-setters, "who never saw the inside of a vivisection hell"; or Seventh Sons of Seventh Sons; are indeed the surgeons and physicians of the future. But I am not in the least afraid. The Movement in Favor of Ignorance causes many deaths. It gives great encouragement to Comstockery and Popery. It makes a few individuals ridiculous, who are capable of better things. But it can no more stop the progress of inductive science now, than it could the motion of the earth in Galileo's time.

Do It Yourself.

You can and you must do your own work.

It makes no difference how convincing the argument nor how fascinating the offer of assistance, there is no power outside of yourself on the earth or in the sky that can infuse into you lasting health or success.

You must evolve your own health and prosperity from the depths of your own consciousness or you will never know the meaning of happiness.

You may find occasional aids along the road. A friend or a stranger may temporarily inspire or relieve you, but unless you take hold of this power and make it an individual working principle, it is of small benefit.—Eleanor Kirke.

The Determination of Sex, Again.

BY ELMINA D. SLENKER.

Our friend DuBois fails, I think, to understand the reason why the female is the superior animal (see Lucifer No. 889). Nature always aims to produce perfection, consequently evolving a female because it is nearer a master-piece than a male,—the male being an uncompleted female.

Schenk says: "Beginning with silk-worms they produce a preponderance of male moths when ill-fed, and the same with other animals or insects.

"Savage tribes in times of great want show an abnormal increase of males. He proves that sex is regulated by the albuminous feed of the mother, and in forty-one cases in thirty-nine he produced females and two failed because the mothers did not follow the instructions."

We see that while nature strives to produce all females, there are so many hindering causes, that left to her own efforts, there are more failures than successes. Under a proper heredity and correct fostering conditions, every organized existence, flower, bird, animal or human being, would culminate in a female. Nor am I at all sure that the "Crowning Act of Creation" was a female, for in all probability it was so imperfect as to be an arrested development, and consequently a male, and through the course of future evolutions conditions became such that a female was the result.

To produce a male, Schenk had to throw obstacles in the way, and thwart nature's processes, and therefore he never failed if a male was desired, but while "doing his level best" to produce a female there was never a surety of success. It is always easier to grow inferior than superior productions.

We read the natural history of ants and bees, and find that among these busy, intelligent, industrious insects the male performs a very inferior part—indeed, in some cases, it seems as if his sole office was to impregnate the female and then die. Of the male, or drone bee, it is said that only one of a thousand does this, and the rest are entirely useless, and all are finally killed off by the females as parasites upon the industry of the colony. The workers are undeveloped females, each one of whom, if fed in the larva state upon a peculiar food, might have become queens and mothers in full. The eggs laid by an unimpregnated bee are all drone eggs; and finally, when she becomes old and feeble, her eggs are once more drone (male) eggs—worthless and useless! The males of most wild animals are killed off as useless to preserve; one strong, robust specimen being sufficient for a great number of females. Of our domestic animals we preserve mostly females, and so of our fowls. The female flowers are the most long-lived, the male ones only blooming long enough to scatter the impregnating dust, and then withering and dying; while the female nourishes the embryo and matures it, and perfects the seed for future generations.

The female spider spins all the webs—and finally, if annoyed by the male, simply eats him up and goes on with her labors! Even of bedbugs the male is a little spider-like thing, hardly worth destroying or even hating.

Who that loves his mother does not agree with the poet that "a mother is the holiest thing alive." She must lead, guide and instruct, govern, rule and control. In the language of Walt Whitman:

"The threads that were spun are gathered,
The weft crosses the warp.
The pattern is systematic.
The preparations have every one been justified.

The guest that was coming, she waited long, she is now housed,
She is one of those who are beautiful and happy.
She is one of those that to look upon and be with is enough."

Asked and Answered.

"Professor," said Miss Gidday, "you've made a study of human nature. Now, at what age would you say the average man of intelligence is most likely to marry?"

"Dotage!" promptly replied Prof. Oldbache.—Philadelphia Press.

Defense Against Torture and Murder.

C. L James is still harping on his old favorite theme, "The Movement in Favor of Ignorance."

It was Josh Billings I think, who said, "It is better not to know so much than to know so much that isn't so;" to which wise aphorism should perhaps be added, it is better not to see so much than to see so much that is brutalizing while adding nothing to useful knowledge.

I have never witnessed a prize-fight, a legalized murder, a battle—in which men shoot and stab and carve each other in the name of patriotism and religion; nor have I ever witnessed the torture and murder by inches of our half-human brothers in the name of medical science, and no bribe that I now think of would ever induce me to witness any of these demoralizing and dehumanizing exhibitions.

If it could be proved that vivisection is necessary to the advancement of medical science, then I would say that only the wisest, most mature, most philosophical and most truly humane of physicians should be subjected to the terrible ordeal of witnessing such experiments. The effects of the dissection of dead bodies, and of necessary surgical operations on living human bodies, is bad enough upon the minds of the young, as is well known; but after having given the subject considerable attention I fail to see that vivisection is ever necessary to the advancement of medical knowledge, and am constrained to believe that Philip G. Peabody of Boston, who has devoted much attention to the matter, is in the right when he says:

"Vivisection is a cowardly, unmanly crime. It has never yet given to the world any discovery of value; it never can, in millions of years, give to the world any discovery of a value at all commensurate with the harm it has done. This harm is not alone the torturing of animals, awful as that is; it is the making wicked and vicious the thousands of men, especially young men, who practice it, and to whom we must, in the presence of illness and death, look for aid and sympathy; also the turning aside of the minds from the legitimate direction of research—directions in which they might possibly find something of real value."

I could quote language equally strong against this Movement in Favor of Cruelty and Murder, from medical doctors themselves, but, as said in my leading article for this week I rely upon the laity for progressive reform, and if Bro. Peabody—who is a faithful friend and paying subscriber of Lucifer—can head a successful revolt against this form of barbarism, as did his fellow townsman—the merchant whose name I now forget—against that other form of barbarism, witch-burning, he will deserve to have his name enrolled as one of the benefactors of his race.

The following testimony in regard to the value of the medical superstition in general, falsely called medical science, from the pen of another distinguished Bostonian, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, is pertinent in this connection:

"The disgrace of medicine has been that colossal system of self-deception, in obedience to which mines have been emptied of their cankering minerals, the entrails of animals taxed for their impurities, the poison bags of reptiles drained of their venom, and all the inconceivable abominations thus obtained thrust down the throats of human beings suffering from some fault of organization, nourishment, or vital stimulation."

"Mankind has been drugged to death, and the world would be better off if the contents of every apothecary shop were emptied into the sea, though the consequences to the fishes would be lamentable."

Having largely exceeded my usual allowance of space for this issue I must close by referring Friend James to the article entitled "The Doctors and the Laity," for answer to his talk in regard to vaccination. As vaccination is now up for discussion and settlement, as it has scarcely ever been before, I shall probably have more to say upon this form of medical superstition next week, and will then answer some other points raised in the article on second page, headed "The Movement in Favor of Ignorance."

M. HARMAN.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

893.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

The Doctors and the Laity.

To learn from experience and observation is the art of living.

Not man alone but dumb beasts do this. The horse, for instance, learns from observation, not by the artificial training of a master, to open gates, lay down bars, etc.; that is, learns by observation to adapt himself to his environment.

The Darwinian philosophy of life—development by experience and adaptation to surroundings, has supplanted the old doctrine that man alone reasons. We now know that the reason of man and the instinct of the brute are one and the same.

Instinct may be defined as the unconscious memory—or rather the impressions stored away in the unconscious memory of all past experiences of the RACE or type of animal to which the individual belongs.

TRADITION.

Instinct, then, is closely allied to, if not identical with, what we call tradition; the only difference being that instinct is the result of unconscious or subconscious remembrance of past racial experiences unverified by later and individual knowledge, whereas tradition is the result of CONSCIOUS remembrance of racial experiences not verified by later and more reliable knowledge founded on personal or individual experience.

* * *

In conformity with these fundamental premises or postulates, let us briefly consider the object lesson lately forced upon the attention of the so-called civilized world by the act of Leon Czolgosz at Buffalo, New York. In a recent editorial, the writer of these lines said that William McKinley "was killed by Czolgosz and the medical doctors." A little explanation is necessary to right understanding of this statement.

In the first place it would be well to say that our modern institutions, medical, political, religious, etc., are based largely upon an artificial division of mankind into two general classes, the doctors or professionals on the one hand and the laity or non-professionals on the other. The doctors are of three kinds mainly—doctors of medicine, doctors of law (civil law) and doctors of divinity, otherwise called theology.

Each of these classes or divisions of doctors have interests in common, and these interests are more or less antagonistic to the interests, the welfare, of the laity or non-professional masses. Take for example the medical doctors. The interest, the welfare, of the layman is, first of all, good health. But if everybody were well the medical doctor must starve. Said an old man to his nephew just graduated from a medical college:

"Tell me the truth, Bob, once in your life—if you could have your wish, would you choose to have everybody well this coming summer, or would you prefer what is called a sickly season?"

"Honestly then, Uncle, since you put it that way, while it seems hard to say it you will find your answer in the Lord's prayer—'Give us this day our daily bread.' In order that the physician may have bread somebody must be sick!"

In like manner the lawyer and the judge of civil law. It is to the interest of the layman that there should be no quarrels, no thefts, no murders nor crimes of any sort. But where would the lawyer get his fees or the judge his salary if there were no litigation?

So also of the doctor of divinity. It is to the interest of the layman that there should be no sins, no vices, no wickedness and no misery consequent upon these; but who would be willing to pay the salary of the "minister" if there were no sinners—no drunkards, no gamblers, no prostitutes, no liars, no swearers, etc? In order that the doctor of souls should have bread there must be sinners—souls that need physic.

* * *

Such being the natural antagonism between the interests of the doctors, the professionals, and the interests of the laymen, the common masses, it is to be expected that the first care of the doctor is to see that there is a demand, a necessity, for his profession. Without such demand the supply would be useless.

The medical doctor, for instance, must convince the people that they cannot get well when sick without his assistance. To convince them of this he must make the healing art as mysterious as possible, so that none but a professional can know how to treat the sick. To make the healing art mysterious and difficult a foreign and dead language is used; much stress being laid also upon the knowledge to be gained in colleges, attendance upon which is beyond the reach of the common people, especially knowledge gained in foreign medical colleges; also upon knowledge to be gained from the reading of foreign authors and especially ANCIENT authors.

* * *

All these things—the mystery, the deference to precedent, the honor given to ancient and foreign authority, naturally and inevitably cause the medical profession to lean toward and upon TRADITION more than upon the discoveries of modern experimenters.

This was well illustrated in medical treatment of William McKinley. The surgeons had probably done their part fairly well. Accidental but well known cases such as that of Alexis St. Martin, more than half a century ago, had shown the doctors that a large hole in the stomach (a badly neglected gun-shot wound) is not necessarily fatal. In McKinley's case the bullet holes were small and the stomach nearly empty, making it a comparatively easy matter for an IMMEDIATE operation to close the wounds and put the patient on the road to rapid recovery. The daily bulletins of the surgeons testified to his excellent bodily condition, predicting that their patient would be at his office before the lapse of many weeks.

And such prediction, without reasonable doubt, would have been the history of this famous case if the work of the surgeon had not been defeated by that of the medical doctor. But then as now, the honor, the dignity, the prestige, the mystery, the reverential awe that should ever shield the profession from the comprehension of the vulgar multitude could not, must not, allow McKinley to get well without medicine—without the administration of the traditional drugs with Latin names, MERCURY and DIGITALIS. To permit the distinguished patient to recover without poisons of some sort would be treason to doctorcraft, whose very existence depends upon the ignorance of the masses, coupled with their superstitious reverence for the learning necessary to administer deadly poisons with healing effect.

But this was not all. The robust constitution and splendid health of the patient—as testified by the doctors themselves—might have withstood the shock of the pistol balls and the scarcely less deadly drug, had it not been for the work of another superstitious tradition, namely, that a strong man recovering from wounds must have nourishment, must have solid food, or he will die of starvation within a very short time. In cases such as that of McKinley, as experience shows, no nourishment AT ALL is needed—except that which has been stored away in the bodily tissues for emergencies when the citadel of life is invaded—not until the breach in the castle walls has been sufficiently repaired to allow a part of the vital forces to be detailed to the work of digestion and assimilation of food.

* * *

In the similar case of Garfield it was the criminal blundering of both surgeons and medical doctors that killed the patient, or rather that prevented his recovery from the nearly fatal ball of Guiteau's pistol. The repeated searchings for the ball prevented the "healing by first intention," and the administration of alcoholic stimulants instead of assisting the heart to do its work, hastened its final collapse.

DOCTORS OF LAW.

If, in the McKinley case, the doctors of medicine showed their devotion to the traditions of their craft the same can be truthfully said of the doctors of law.

If evolutionary investigations have proved anything, and if the experiences of the ages is worth anything, it has been conclusively proved to all minds open to rational conviction that punishment for crime is unscientific, irrational, inefficient—or rather that it defeats its own object. That crime is the result of ignorance, of bad heredity or of unfortunate environment, or of a combination of two or more of these causes, and that therefore both praise and blame are irrational, unscientific. That it would be quite as rational to punish a man for being sick, lame or otherwise unsound (insane) physically as it would be to punish him for the commission of crime—an act which shows him to be mentally sick (insane), mentally lame, else so ignorant as to render him irresponsible.

Regardless of all the discoveries of scientific investigators, blind to the teachings of all time which show that the fear of death does not prevent killing, the law doctors in the McKinley case showed that they had not got beyond the traditions of their craft—the primeval barbaric law which says, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed."

DOCTORS OF DIVINITY.

And so likewise the doctors of theology, in their treatment of the Czolgosz-McKinley case. They too, as well as the doctors of medicine and of law showed their adherence to old-time tradition instead of the teachings of modern science. They too were loud if not brutal and savage in their demands for the punishment of Czolgosz. They, too, still believe in punishment as a cure for crime. With the lawyers they demand the LEX TALIONIS, the law of retaliation or revenge.

Their text book of theologic traditions says. "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment"—Matt. xxv. 46; also "the fearful and unbelieving, and the abominable and murderers, and whoremongers and sorcerers and idolaters and all liars, shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone; which is the second death"—Rev. xxi, 8, together with much more of like tenor.

These "Reverend" gentlemen hastened to show to the world that they had more confidence in their collection of crude traditions of an obscure, non-progressive, ignorant, undeveloped and barbaric people than they have in the deductions of reason, of modern science and of larger human experience.

True to their "Bible" training and true to the customs of the Christian church when in power, they demanded that Czolgosz be burned to death in the "electric chair"—instead of the old fashioned and unscientific fire of fagots and turpentine—as a preparation for eternal burning in the next world.

* * *

THE REMEDY.

This article is already too long, but it will be very incomplete without some attempt at suggesting a better way than dependence upon our tradition-ruled doctors—of medicine, law and theology. Briefly as possible I would say that progress must come—if it comes at all—from the laity and not from the professional doctors, teachers or leaders. A careful examination of history will show as I think, that all real humanitarian progress has come from the laity, the common people, and not from the professional doctors.

For instance: The strong-hold of the persecutions against "witches" so-called was the Bible tradition or command: "Thou shalt not permit a witch to live." Medical doctors believed in witchcraft. Sir Matthew Hale, to this day a leading authority with lawyers, English and American, believed in laws against witchcraft. John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, said that to deny belief in witchcraft was to deny the Bible. Jonathan Edwards, the chief Presbyterian authority in this country, was a leader in the New England witch-burning craze. Millions were burned, hanged, drowned and otherwise put to painful deaths in obedience to this Bible-enforced superstition, and we would be today, perhaps, burning "spirit mediums" as witches if a revolt against witch-burning had not come from the laity. It was a merchant of Boston, not a professional doctor of any sort, that led the revolt that put an end to witch-burning in this country.

In like manner the revolt against the African slave trade. While the doctors of law and medicine almost without exception, and especially the clergy, were arrayed on the side of the slave-trader and the slave-driver the revolt against this relic of barbarism was led by the non-professional Quakers and by such laymen and laywomen as Mrs. Foster, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison.

* * *

Looking for causes, it is not hard to see why the learned professions take sides with the enemies of freedom and justice. The learned professions are naturally clannish, exclusive, power-loving, hence it is to be expected that they would ally themselves with the purse-holders of the race—the rich, the aristocratic, and especially with the law-making and law-executing members of the body-politic. On the principle that self-preservation is the first law of nature we can expect nothing else than that the learned doctors should be conservative of the old and established, and that they should oppose radical innovations of all sorts, especially such innovations as would deprive them of their own traditional power and privileges.

* * *

The tendency of the three "learned professions" being to combine for the preservation of their traditional privileges the only way by which the laity can secure justice and equality of rights is to combine against the professionals. One of the immediately important needs of such combination is the assault on personal liberty by means of

COMPULSORY VACCINATION LAWS.

The ages-old fight for religious liberty is not yet won, as witness the Sunday laws and the compulsory taxation laws for the support of churches, etc., yet in most respects the laity have compelled the law-makers to respect the right of each to be his own priest, the right of each to freedom of religious conscience. We are not now obliged in Illinois to confess belief in a god in order to be a competent juror, or witness in court, as was the case in some states till very recently, but we are still obliged to have our children's blood poisoned by vaccine PUS, in order to have them admitted to equal participation in the public school.

This is a case of combination between the law doctors and the medical doctors for the benefit of the latter fraternity. One of the medical superstitions is that disease can be cured or prevented by introducing a poison into the blood, through the stomach or by injection into the veins. Law doctors have turned over the care of the bodies of the laity to the medical doctors, as in former times they gave to the doctors of divinity the care of their souls. As a prevention of the contagious disorder called smallpox children must now be inoculated with cowpox or vaccine virus, the penalty for non-compliance being deprivation of the privileges of the State Socialistic public school. The following "special telegram" informs us that a revolt against compulsory vaccination has been begun in New Jersey. The dispatch is headed

VACCINATION CAUSES DEATH.

Camden, N. J., Nov. 18:—The latest victim of tetanus resulting from vaccination is William Bauer of East Camden, who died in terrible agony. Aroused by the eight recent deaths from this cause, the physicians will make an investigation.

The school board will be asked to repeal the order for compulsory vaccination, as parents are withdrawing their children from school to avoid its danger. The parents declare that their children shall not be submitted to the danger of tetanus and the authorities threaten action under the compulsory school law.

Smallpox has resulted in but one fatality, while tetanus, developing as the direct result of inoculation with the virus, has already claimed eight victims and the many thousands of recently vaccinated children are panic stricken.

When it is remembered how great is the influence of FEAR in causing bodily disorders of any kind we may reasonably expect that to the physical injury done to these thousands of children by the infusion of the vaccine PUS into their veins will be added many serious if not fatal complications on account of the fright to which these innocents have been so cruelly subjected.

A similar telegram from Atlantic City, N. J., of same date, says. "Bessie Kessler, aged 9, died today of lock-jaw. She had been recently vaccinated. This is the third death from lockjaw here in the past two weeks."

It has often been urged, and will doubtless be maintained in this case by the physicians who are to make "investigations," that although vaccination is occasionally followed by disastrous results the testimony of statistics is overwhelmingly in favor of the use of vaccine as a preventive of the awful scourge known as smallpox.

To this it may be replied that statistics are of little value when manipulated by interested parties. But admitting for the argument that honest statistics do show that the usual effect of vaccination is to render the patient "immune" from the contagion of genuine VARIOLA these statistics were not designed to show and NEVER CAN show the injury done to the general health, the constitutional vigor and chances for longevity, by the insidious foe thus admitted to the citadel of life.

If the revolt begun in New Jersey against compulsory vaccination of children shall become as general and as successful as were the revolts started by a few of the laity against witch-burning and the slave trade, then the sacrifice of a dozen lives, or more, of children to the Moloch of superstitious medical-doctordom will not have been in vain.

M. HARMAN.

Does Your Subscription Expire Before 894?

Again we ask all whose subscription to Lucifer is in arrears to let us hear from them. This is not, necessarily, a "dun" for money; for though we need the money we do not wish to stop sending the paper to any one who wants to receive it and who will pay at some future time.

We are anxious to begin the new year with a subscription list of people every one of whom, if asked by the Post-Office Department if he or she is a "paying subscriber," will, we can be sure, answer in the affirmative.

I am sending out statements to all in arrears. Our friends can lighten my labors materially by replying promptly, or, better still, by not waiting to receive a statement from me.

If you want the paper, and cannot pay now, a card stating this fact will be sufficient. If you want your copy discontinued, a simple refusal to take it from the post-office is enough.

Shall we hear from you?

L. H.

VARIOUS VOICES.

N. H. Drake, New Glasgow, N. S.:—Find enclosed $1. renewal of my subscription to Lucifer. May your efforts for the uplifting of the weak and the defense of the oppressed, prosper.

Mrs. E. A. Magoon, 7 Chatham Pl., Worcester, Mass.:—Although in my 75th year of earth-life, there is much I would like to do to make this life enjoyable for others. Owing to the sudden taking leave of the mortal by my son, my companion in home making, I am obliged to dispose of my home in Ohio to spend the remainder of my life with my children settled in other states. Will your exchanges, new publications, as well as old friends, please make a note of my address.

Sada Bailey Fowler, 2325 Master St., Philadelphia, Pa.:—My work for social freedom has been for months past and continues to be a quiet one. Through the thought power I am bringing together the most advanced women whose souls are overflowing with the love and peace spirit. We are promulgating the truth so long proclaimed by our Light-Bearer that woman is queen in the realm of love and we are preparing mothers for their beautiful labor of love, and developing and healing by the mighty thought power.

E. Stern, 4344 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.:—Twelv deaths from lock-jaw in St. Louis, and more are expected. Th victims were diphtheritic patients who had been treated with anti-toxin. In Ladiesburg Maryland, John J. Liggett, a regular medical practitioner has treated upwards of 250 cases of diphtheria in the past seven years, without losing a single patient. The remedy employed is extremely simple. Flower of sulphur 10 grains, pulverised willow charcoal 36 grains, sufficient water to make an ounce; to this is added an equal quantity of simple syrup, making two ounces of the mixture. This remedy is given every half hour, retained in the mouth for a time, and then swallowed. Before taking the medicine an antiseptic gargle should be used. The patients are kept in warm rooms. It is to be hoped that physicians will write to Dr. Liggett, ascertain his experience, and use the treatment. My attention was called to the matter, and upon writing to Dr. Liggett, I received the most courteous consideration. He utterly disclaims credit for the marvelous results achieved in his own practice, frankly admitting that he had but modified another physician's prescription, obtaining better results. Called into consultation by other physicians, he states that the treatment outlined has invariably proved efficacious. Would it not be in order for your readers to call their physicians' attention to this subject. Like a true disciple of the healing art, Dr. Liggett exacts no fee for diffusing knowledge of the treatment, which he has used with such remarkable success.

The "Chicago Philosophical Society" will hold weekly meetings at 26 East Van Buren St., for the purpose of discussing all the questions now before the people. T. J. Morgan will speak next Sunday evening at Hall 218 at 8 P. M. on "The Historical Basis of Socialism." Absolutely free discussion—all welcome.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: The address of an indepent woman who would do light housekeeping—requiring only a small portion of her time—for room and board in a pleasant home in Chicago. For particulars address M., care Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago

Personal: An experienced nurse will take into her own home an invalid or elderly person requiring special attention. The best of care given. Pleasant room, and excellent board. Best of references. Address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Wanted: Children to board and educate, by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp)

ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

Snowville, Va.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time-worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.

Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.

Sermon from Shakespeare's Text. William Denton. 5c.

Truth Seeker Annuals for 1886, 1890, and 1891. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.

Church and State. The Bible in the Public Schools, the New Party. 5c.

Spiritual Songs. Mattie E. Hull. 5c.

Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c

Orthotoxy False, Since Spiritualism is True. William Denton. 5c.

The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.

The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.

Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.

The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.

The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.

Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wachl. 10c.

Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in economics. William A. Whittick, 20c.

Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 65 pages, 10c.

Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.

Five Lectures on the History of Religion. C. L. James. 10c.

Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c.

Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.

Protection or Free Trade? Henry George 371 pages, 15c.

The Giant Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.

The Gods of Misrule. A tale of Gods and of Men. 316 pages. 25c.

Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke. 5c.

Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 5c.

Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.

Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.

Is Spiritualism True? William Denton. 5c.

From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 460 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-book. 30c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controuling conception. [illegible] Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Martian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Leo. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
#808
V.5 no.47
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 47. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 5, B. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 894

THE WIDE-SWUNG GATES.

The Genius of the West
Upon her high-seen throne,
Who greets the incoming guest
And loves him as her own;
The Genius of these States
She hears these modern pleas
For the closing of the gates
Of the highways of her seas.
"Fence not my realm," she says, "build me no continent pen,
Still let my gates swing wide for all the sons of men."

The Genius of these States,
She of the open hand,
Stands by the open gates
That look to every land;
"Come hence" (she hears the groans,
The distance-muffled din
Of millions crushed by thrones),
"Come hence and enter in.
Shut not my gates," she says, "that front the inflowing tide,
For all the sons of men still let my gates swing wide."

"And in my new-built state
The tribes of men shall fuse,
And men no longer prate
Of Gentiles and of Jews—
Here seek no racial caste,
No social cleavage seek,
Here one, while time shall last,
Barbarian and Greek—
And here shall spring at length, in narrowing caste's despite,
That last growth of the world, the first Cosmopolite.

"A man not made of mud
My coming man shall be,
But of the mingled blood
Of every tribe is he,
The vigor of the Dane,
The deftness of the Celt,
The Latin suppleness of brain
In him shall fuse and melt;
The muscularity of soul of the strong West be blent
With the wise dreaminess that broods above the Orient

"Here clashing creeds upraise
Their warring standards long,
Till the ferment of our days
Shall make our new wine strong.
Let thought meet thought in fight,
Let systems clash and clinch—
The false must sink in night,
The truth yields not an inch.
No thought let loose, ungyved, can long a menace be Within a tolerant land where every thought is free."

The Genius of the West
Upon her high-seen throne
Thus greets the incoming guest
And clasps him as her own.
The Genius of these States
Puts by these modern pleas
For the closing of the gates
Of the highways of her seas.
"Fence not my realm," she says, "build me no continent pen,
Still let my gates swing wide for all the sons of men."

—Sam Walter Foss, in "Songs of War and Peace," 1899.

Per gL937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.47

The Fulton Street Improvement Association.

In No. 890 Lillian Harman adopts the Baconian method of citing facts and figures, and then drawing inferences from them. But this method must be applied with great discrimination. It is dangerous to take one case, and deduce a whole philosophy from it.

No doubt the municipal administration of Chicago is very bad, but it so happens that Chicago is universally known to b an ill-governed city. New York and Chicago are populated by collections of people from all parts of the earth, without a com mon language or a common civic spirit, many of them desperately ignorant, and brought up under the worst European govern ments, while nearly all are there for one reason only, the desire for gain. What is the worth of any generalization drawn from such instances?

In the first place, the difficulty could only have arisen under bad municipal laws. In British Columbia, where we have the referendum in municipalities, it would be impossible. With us no municipality can borrow on the credit of the city, or grant a franchise to any street railway or other company, unless the ordinance is voted on by the rate-payers, and endorsed by a three-fifths majority. As for a local improvement, it can be prevented at once by a majority of the property owners on the street petitioning against it. So, if Mrs. Harman had had the privilege of living in British Columbia her article would not have been written.

Mrs. Harman complains of "boodle" contractors. It is true, Chicago is cursed by them, but not London, or Glasgow, or Paris, or Berlin. The London County Council has existed for twelve years; it carries out all its public works without any contractors at all; neither the word "boodle" nor any synonym for it has ever been used about the Council or any man who ever sat on it. I know councils on this continent, too, which never had a member who was otherwise than a model of integrity.

Mrs. Harman tells us that "one of the stock objections to Anarchistic voluntaryism is that no public improvements would be made unless ordered by a centralized government." Not necessarily by a centralized one. London is about three times as populous as Chicago, and I believe it covers less area, but besides having the County Council for central matters, it is divided into twenty-nine smaller municipalities for local matters. Switzerland is more populous than Chicago, and has a much larger area, but is so subdivided for local government that in some cantons all the people can meet together and make their own laws. It is only a question of convenience, but not of essential principle, whether the administrative area shall be large or small. But if Mrs. Harman will strike out the word "centralized", then I agree in substance with all the rest. I nave tried Anarchistic voluntaryism in public improvements time and again; I have seen it tried time and again; I have always found it utterly wanting; I have never met a man who has seen it tried as much as I have and has not found it utterly wanting. Every western town starts with Anarchistic volun taryism. The first streets are cleared, and the first sidewalks laid, by Anarchistic voluntaryism. I have lived in towns before incorporation, and have often been chosen to go round for voluntary subscriptions, having always been considered a good collector for that purpose. But I would sooner be city scavenger than go through that work again. I am too well acquainted with the man of large property who quietly hangs back and leaves the generous man next door to improve the property of both. As for getting a uniform street grade by voluntary agreement, the idea is too ridiculous even to enter the mind of a lunatic. If one side of a street is higher than the other by nature, the people on the upper side will always build too high in order to avoid excavating, while the people on the other side are almost equally certain to build too low to avoid propping. If the street itself runs up and down a hill, it will be impossible to get a straight sidewalk; for every one wants the sidewalk to be level in front of his own door; and the result is a succession of platforms and stairs instead of a continuous slant. Then comes a great cry for incorporation; the city is incorporated; at last the streets are graded, and the sidewalks laid; at last there is a force which will make the people on one side excavate, and the people on the other hoist their buildings; at last it is possible to walk on the sidewalk in winter without falling down a flight of steps and getting a broken leg. I have seen all this too often to be mistaken. As I read in an article the other day: "Theory is a good card, but facts are trumps."

But Mrs. Harman says:—"If the officials down at the city hall are our 'servants' why should it be necessary to spend so much time and money in doing the work for which they are paid? Would an individual employer submit to such negligence by his employe?" Mrs. Harman expects too much. Of course it is easier for an individual employer to control his servants than it is for any association of persons, whether voluntary or compulsory. When one man objects to his servant, he has only to dismiss him. When a member of a partnership objects to a servant, he can call the partners together, and if a majority agree, he can have him dismissed. When a share-holder of a transcontinental railway or a bank objects to the conduct of a servant of the company, he can write to the directors, but, although he has the glory of belonging to a voluntary association, he will very likely find that his wishes do not count for much. If one of the directors is the offender, he can try to have him dismissed at the next annual meeting of shareholders, but he will not always be successful. And now, just what is the difference between the shareholders of a voluntary joint stock company and the shareholders of the compulsory association called the City of Chicago? In both cases the directors are chosen for a year. In the voluntary company all the shareholders vote, but each share carries a vote, so that the poor shareholder is utterly swamped. In the city each male, rich or poor, has just one vote. The one is absolutely governed by a majority of shares, the other by a majority of people. In both cases the majority must be got, and he who is in a minority must submit. Mrs. Harman complains of the time and money involved in getting the directors of the City of Chicago to do what she wants. Let her take a share in any joint-stock company on the continent, and see if she has not to spend more time and money in getting the directors to do what she wants. After all, Mrs. Harman got what she wanted. She was lucky. Few shareholders in voluntary corporations or co-operative societies can say as much. But it took a number to get it. The directors would not listen to one. Bravo for the directors; if the directors of any company or society, voluntary or compulsory, wasted their time in listening to individual kickers, the company would not last long. But the directors of the City of Chicago are willing to listen to a hundred kickers out of two millions, and that is more than the directors of most voluntary companies will do, unless the hundred are very large shareholders.

In short, a state or municipality is only the most democratic of joint-stock companies or co-operative societies. In all others, each has a voice in proportion to his money; in this, poor and rich have an equal voice, although not equal intelligence to use it well. A municipality has one disadvantage; it has more stupid and ignorant shareholders than a company; and the wise have often to suffer for living in a stupid world. But the democratic state does more for its poor members after all than the oligarchic company. The latter is mainly dominated by the few who have the biggest share; the smaller shareholders are crushed with a cynical disdain rare in democratic governments; the majority are always playing the game of freeze-out with the minority; and majority rule is enforced in colder blood than in any state or city.

What then does Mrs. Harman hope for? Does she hope to carry on the affairs of the world without any co-operative action at all? Does she expect to see railways running from Atlantic to Pacific, owned and operated by individuals? Or does she admit that these things cannot be done without forming co-operative societies of some sort whether they be voluntary associations called companies or compulsory associations called states? If so, does she think that she will ever have the good luck to belong to one company in which she will have her own way? Does she think she will escape majority rule? Nay, more, does she think she will ever be so fortunate as to be connected with any railway enterprise, any mining or smelting enterprise, any iron foundry or other business involving the union of members, in which she will find it possible to have as much say in the management as she has already had in the management of Chicago with its two million shareholders.

"But," Mrs. Harman will say, "under voluntaryism I should at least be able to mind my own affairs. I could at least pull up the street in front of my own house, dig trenches in it, place barricades on it, and mend it at my own sweet will." Yes, but is that your own business? What if the neighbors on the street do not want it disturbed? And suppose it were Dearborn street? Even if all the property owners on Dearborn street wanted to tear it up and alter it, have the million other persons who use that street no say in the matter? Have they not the right to appoint a committee of directors to look after their interests? Every sensible person in the world wants to let people look after their own business. But when the business in question is also the business of a vast number of other people who have an equal right to be consulted, then the trouble begins. Somebody must give in when opinions differ; and there must be a way of deciding who it is to be. From the time of Aristotle until now a majority vote has been considered best, on the principle that it is better to disappoint forty-nine than fifty-one. But this is only a device; invent a better if you can. But do not shirk the question by pretending that it is possible for each of one hundred or two million persons to do whatever he likes in matters which equally concern all.

Mrs. Harman has written many articles against the state; but all mean simply this, that the state does bad things, and should be abolished. But is that wonderful, seeing that the state is elected by men, and that men do bad things? Does the state do worse things than the men who elect it? If it does, that would indeed be a strong argument. But does it? In the south men are burnt at the stake without trial, by voluntary organizations; the electors of the south pretty generally approve of this. Do the governments elected by these men do anything worse than burn men without trial? But look how justice miscarries. Yes, but does it often miscarry worse than when, almost on the day of President McKinley's death, a mob of Southern electors took a man named Davis and hanged him, drowning his voice when he tried to speak; and then, when he was dead, they found he was guiltless? The law is often unjust to women. Yes, but is it as unjust as the men and the women who elect the law-makers? Surely Mrs. Harman does not expect grapes from thorns.

But Mrs. Harman is in the way of truth, though she has not yet passed through its gates. She is studying facts. I hope she will go on. I hope she will not stop short at protesting to city councils, but will also take round the hat to try and get streets paved by voluntary subscription. I know she is too candid to suppress the truth, so I hope she will tell us at an early date whether she would rather tackle individual rate-payers or a municipal council, and whether she thinks more time is wasted in collecting voluntary contributions or in making occasional protests to the city authorities. I also hope she will take a share in the most liberal-minded corporation of a million shares she knows of in the world, and then let us know whether it is easier for one individual in that company to get his own way than it is in Chicago with two million shareholders.

R. B. KERR.

Had I enjoyed the privilege of a residence in British Columbia, Mr. Kerr tells me, my remarks regarding the Fulton Street Improvement Association would not have been written. Perhaps not. But it happens that we have here theoretically exactly the protection claimed for the British Columbians. A majority of the property owners in Fulton street consented to grant a right of way to the street car company upon the company agreeing to keep the street in repair for twenty years. After using the street seven years, it was badly in need of repairs, and some one, presumably at the instance of the company requested an ordinance requiring the repaving of the street by the property-owners. ("Two or more property-owners" may legally make such request). Notice of this was sent to all property-owners, and the "Fulton Street Improvement Association" came into being to try to induce the Council to compel the railway company to carry out its agreement. It cost considerable money, and the time of fifty or more men, to hold meetings and make several trips to the city hall. If for similar legislative requirements the British Columbians get better service, it is because their municipalities are smaller and its officials easier of approach. The larger the organization, the more unwieldy, as a rule.

If no improvement is to be made until the man who is willing to do the "heavy looking on," while his neighbor does the work, is induced to do his share, a system different from any yet in operation will have to be devised. As it is, the men practically owning a large proportion of the property are not taxed for public improvements. How is the Man Behind the Mortgage to be made help bear the burdens?

I might not be a successful solicitor of contributions for street improvements. I am sure I should be a failure as a solicitor of funds to pay the ministers' salaries, build churches and monuments, sustain schools, universities, and hospitals, and send missionairies to foreign countries. Yet billions of dollars are raised for these purposes by voluntary contribution every year. The sum needed for street improvements, large as it is, is a mere bagatelle in comparison with sums voluntarily raised for these and many other purposes that could be named.

In regard to the irregularities of sidewalks, etc., I am inclined to think that more depends on "the lay of the land" than on the form of municipal government. My most vivid recollection of Kansas City, Council Bluffs, and other Missouri River cities, is of a continual going up and down stairs. And yet their street improvements are controlled by the City Councils. Even on Mr. Kerr's native heath I did not find the streets so altogether lovely. I cannot distinctly remember whether I encountered any stairs on the streets of Edinburgh, but I am sure I devoutly wished, on several occasions, that the city dads had provided elevators.

It may be that there are no "boodle" contractors in London. It may be that the men who do the work receive only fair wages for that work, and the property owners pay only a fair price for it. But the fact that Mr. Kerr has heard no accusation does not prove that there has been none. Nor would even the fact that no protest is ever made prove that there is no occasion for protest.

Mr. Kerr thinks I was lucky to get what I wanted. I am not sure that I said I got what I wanted. As a matter of fact, I should like to have the street paved with asphalt instead of cedar blocks. But I confess to a feeling of aversion to an assessment of $10 a foot for the work. Where I got my money's worth was in the Anarchistic arguments unwittingly used by the agent for the association, when he said that the work could be and had been done better and cheaper when done by a contractor employed by the residents themselves than when done by the city.

It is easy for a wise man to ask more questions in three columns than I can answer in one. It is impossible, in the space to which I have limited myself, to answer all the questions Mr. Kerr asks, or touch all the points he raises so I have merely commented on the remarks immediately concerning municipal control. Burning and hangings in the south and elsewhere, and other questions relating to the lawful and unlawful cruel treatment of men by big or little mobs, I am compelled to pass over at this time. But I must say this: The action of the men who hanged Davis, "drowning his voice when he tried to speak," was as wrong as that of the men who burned Czolgosz to death with electricity, drowning his voice when he tried to speak. Both bodies of men probably believed they were doing their duty. Czolgosz believed he was doing his duty when he killed McKinley. McKinley believed he was doing his duty when he helped reward Funston for treacherously approaching Aguinaldo as a friend, and then capturing him. Truly, we "cannot expect grapes from thorns," nor respect for human life from a people who are taught to honor and reward professional betrayers and murderers, active or passive, whether those murderers be called presidents, generals, or assassins.

L. H.

It Seems to Me.

BY ADELINE CHAMPNEY.

At the risk of "stirring up the animals" again, I would add one word to the medical controversy which lately raged in these columns. The one essential difference between the regular schools and the various "natural" methods—suggestive, dietetic, exercise or hypnotic treatments—is in this: The former are concerned with the study of diseases and ways to cure them, while the latter are engaged in a study of health and the means to retain or restore it. This is the essence of the modern systems of "healing" which, with more or less scientific basis and more rather than less success, are gaining a hold on the confidence of the people. Put it to your common-sense,—which is the more rational method?

* * *

If some of these readers who complain that Lucifer's columns are monopolized by a few would send in good, sound, readable articles, concise and to the point, I think they would not fail to be given space. I find our editor very hospitable and quite liberal in the matter of accepting contributions.

* * *

Sometimes it seems to me that too many of us radicals are trying to "eat our cake and have it." Instead of studying the psychology, physiology and philosophy of love and sexual relations, learning to know our own natures and to understand our needs, and then directing our lives rationally—what are we doing? Hunting here, there and everywhere for a system, a form of ceremony or agreement, or an established code of sex-ethics that shall take the personal responsibility off our shoulders and remove the necessity for self-control and self-direction, but leave us free to follow our desires without consideration and without consequences.

It can't be done. Freedom is not to be attained by getting a divorce, nor by refusing to marry, nor by running away from responsibility. Freedom is to be won through the attainment of knowledge and the exercise of wisdom. Without self-control and self-direction, no permanency of happiness in love is to be found. You can't shift the responsibility onto a marriage bond, or a free contract.

Lunatic Asylum.

Physician—Mrs. Sharptongue was here today, and wanted her husband sent home and placed under her care.
Superintendent—Did you let him go?
Physician—No. He said he would rather stay here.
Superintendent—Hum! The man must be sane.—Tit-Bits.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

894.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Thanksgiving.

The Parsees, or followers of Zoroaster, worship the sun as the fountain of all life. They give thanks to the sun as the preserver of life and the giver of all earthly blessings; and yet these Sun-worshipers are not ignorant of the fact that on the arid plains of Persia and Central Africa this same sun kills without mercy, not only man and beast but nearly all vegetable life as well.

The Anglo-Saxon mind looks with pity if not with contempt upon the Sun-worshiper and his crude, illogical and unscientific faith, but how much more rational is our own national religion than that of the Sun-worshiper?

The Anglo-Saxon will say that the sun is simply a vast store-house of light, heat and electricity, that is, simply a tremendous battery of physical force or energy but utterly devoid of conscious intelligence, utterly wanting in the feelings or sentiments known as sympathy, pity, love, benevolence, malevolence or hate.

Sun-worship is simply Nature-worship in a crude or primitive form, and it is by no means hard to show that the modernized religion or cult known as Christianity is nothing more nor less than Sun-worship, Nature-worship, in a somewhat different garb, but no less irrational, illogical and unscientific than is the religion of the Parsees or Zoroastrians of Persia and India.

It is generally maintained that we as Americans have no national religion; that people of all religions and of no religion stand on equal footing. In support of this view the Constitution of the United States is referred to as a wholly non-religious document, a document that expressly says Congress shall make no law establishing a national religion, or interfering with the free exercise thereof; also the treaty with Tripoli, signed by George Washington, is quoted as saying that the government of the United States is in no sense a Christian government. If this view of our national government be the correct one; if ours is a non-religious or purely secular government, how, or by what authority does the chief officer of that government call on all the people to observe the last Thursday of November of each year as a day set apart for religious exercises?

Why should the usual and regular delivery of the mails, and other normal functions of the government, be suspended on that day if not in obedience to a religious observance, tradition or superstition?

A few questions in reference to the National Thanksgiving in which law-abiding citizens of all creeds and of no creed were called upon to participate, will perhaps not be out of place:

How much cause for thankfulness to a supposed overruling Providence had the surviving victims of the Wabash horror—the railway wreck that occurred on Thanksgiving eve near Seneca, Michigan?

Since January last, so says the "Chicago Tribune," no less than "twenty-six [railway] wrecks of more than ordinary magnitude" have occurred—all within the year for the blessings of which we are called upon to give thanks. Why were not the conductors and engineers of these ill-fated trains warned of danger ahead, if there be "an eye that never sleeps," and that ever guards the welfare of those who "put their trust in God"?

Among the victims of these wrecks, were there none who put their trust in the care of an overruling Providence?

The God to whom we are expected to give thanks is supposed to be the Divine Father of all men, of whatever land or clime, race or color. How much cause for thanksgiving have the people of the Transvaal, or of the Philippine Islands, for the blessings received within the past year?

Many other queries of like character will occur to the thoughtful observer of current human history, but it is needless to fill our limited space with questions that show the absurdity of the custom of National thanksgivings, which, after all is said, for and against, seem to be mainly observed as occasions for excessive indulgence in the pleasures of the palate. Many millions of dollars that might be spent in relieving the wants of the unfortunate and destitute, are every year worse than wasted in vicious if not criminal luxury on these Thanksgiving feasts.

* * *

But while the victims of wars, of mobs, of wrecks—by land and water, also of drouths, floods, fires, hurricanes, etc., etc., have little cause for thankfulness there are a few at least in this country who have no reason to complain of what the past year has brought to them. For instance:

Theodore Roosevelt, the man who issued the national proclamation, has much reason to thank the pistol of Czolgosz, and the bungling of the medical doctors who had charge of the wounded president.

The heads of the Billion Dollar Steel Trust, and the heads of the similar tariff-protected monopolies, should certainly be thankful to the robbed and toiling millions whose labor has earned their enormous profits; thankful also to the robber government whose land laws, money laws, tariff and transportation laws have enabled the feudal barons to increase their wealth at a rate never known before, perhaps, in the annals of this world.

The salaried officers of government, civil and military, the payment of whose salaries in gold-standard legal tender, is assured whatever calamities may overtake the producers of all wealth. Drouths and floods may destroy the crops; reduction of wages, strikes and lockouts, may cut down the income of the wage-earner to the starvation point; defalcations, embezzlements and money panics may rob the depositors in banks of all they possess, but the government bank, backed by enforced taxation, is always good for the prompt and regular payment of the salaries of office-holders, state, national and also municipal.

* * *

Yes, the office-holding class—military and civil, have much reason to give thanks that they are so well cared fo by their dupes, the non-elect masses. Mem: Is it any cause for wonder that men are so hungry for office? That they are ever ready to barter truth, honesty, honor, principle, friendship, love—EVERYTHING for office, with its sure and regular payment of salary, added to its many perquisites and opportunities for increasing the salary in ways that the ignorant and stupid taxpayer knows nothing of!

M. H.

Two Opinions of Lucifer's Work.

To show how Lucifer's work strikes different minds I herewith insert two letters received at this office within the last few days. The first is written with pencil but in a fairly readable or business-like hand, and is as follows:

EDITOR LUCIFER:—I have now received two sample copies of your abominable paper. Will you have the consideration to discontinue all sample copies to my address?

If my own heart was so corrupt, debauched, depraved, that I no longer had respect for the laws of God or man, (as yours must be) I would keep my mouth shut, and not "Prate" about it on a contemptible little sheet and send it broadcast over the land and into homes where nobody wants to see its dirty face.

I should be pleased sir, to sign myself respectfully yours but since I have no more respect for you than I would have for a little yellow dog, it is quite impossible.

MRS. N. M. CLEVENNDERFER.

To this letter the following answer was sent:

MRS. N. M. CLEVENNDERFER: We have two excellent reasons for not wishing to send Lucifer where it is not wanted. First, we do not believe in forcing anything, no matter how good we may believe it to be, on any one against his or her will. Second, Lucifer costs time, thought and money, and we do not wish to waste any copies where they are unread and unappreciated.

Your name does not appear on any regular list of ours, and I do not recollect having seen it anywhere. If the paper was stamped it did not come from our office. If it was marked "sample copy" and had no postage stamp, it was mailed here. If you receive another copy, please return it to us (in original wrapper). Enclosed find stamp for that purpose. We may thereby know where it came from, and prevent any more copies being sent you.

I respect your right to your individuality, your thought, and your manner of expression, though I do not admire nor would I like to emulate the latter. Yours sincerely,

LILLIAN HARMAN.

The chirography of the other letter referred to, shows the writer to be a man of strongly marked characteristics, as any reader of character can readily see. It is as follows:

Boston, Mass., Nov. 22, 1901.

TO THE EDITOR OF LUCIFER. SIR:—Lucifer is surpassing itself; it has always been able but the last few numbers have shown an ability that is really wonderful. Every number is a gem, and contains food for thought worthy the profoundest mind.

With every habit and tradition and association of my parentage and education exactly opposed to the views favoted by you, I find myself absolutely turned about by the power of your logic, with the wisdom of your management. I am glad to say that every friend of mine who has been induced to subscribe to Lucifer by me, is greatly pleased with it; all have the honesty to admit, with me, that we are educated by it.

I wish you and Lucifer the greatest prosperity. If every one read Lucifer with a receptive mind this world would be worth living in.

You may use this letter as you please.

Yours truly, PHILIP G. PEABODY.

This letter is written with pen and ink on a sheet bearing the printed caption or business card—"Philip G. Peabody, Counsellor at Law; Smith Building—Room 61—15 Court Square."

Lest any reader should infer that the letter of Mr. Peabody was inspired by the complimentary notice of him in last week's Lucifer I would say that the letter and the notice were written about the same time, and there is no connection whatever between the two.

We are in receipt of many letters similar to that of Mr. Peabody and but few like that of Mrs. Clevenndorfer, but enough to show that the work of Lucifer excites emotion widely different in the minds of different people. M. H.

Lucifer Leaflets.

Lack of time and of means to devote to that purpose has hitherto prevented the issuing of leaflet literature on Lucifer's special lines, except to a very limited extent. Many calls have been made for such leaflets and some promises have been made, but hitherto very few of these promises have been fulfilled.

To meet this demand, in part at least, it is now proposed to LIST the leading articles that have appeared in the paper for some months or years past—especially editorials and other articles bearing upon the live subjects, the public events, that have shaken our so-called civilization from center to circumference, within the past three months—to list these articles and advertise them as though they were detached and separate from the paper in which they appeared.

Having a surplus left over of the issues referred to, this plan will save the trouble and expense of issuing in regular leaflet form, while the purchaser will get not only what he asks for but much other matter on the same or similar lines, thrown in.

Pursuant to this plan we have listed the leading editorials in ELEVEN numbers of Lucifer, to which is added the name of one leading selection—as follows:

1. Another National Tragedy. The Medical Doctor Question. Also, Marriage Legal and Free—"When Love is Liberty and Nature Law."
2. The Lesson of the Hour—William McKinley and Leon Czolgosz. Also, Anarchism and the Trusts, by Tucker.
3. Sentenced to Die. Also, Two Epochs in Man's Progress, by Proudhon.
4. Free Unions and Parental Responsibility. Also, Individualistic Anarchism Opposed to Force.
5. Archism versus Anarchism. The Social Side of Anarchism. Also, Freedom in Love, by Heinzen.
6. Government Against the People. Also, the Goal of Anarchism.—Tucker.
7. Cowardly Murder—Assassination and Electrocution. Also, Rumous Effects of Slave Labor, by Rachel Campbell.
8. The Nation's Crime. Also, Purifying the Tenements.—Walker.
9. Anarchy in the Family. Also, To Mothers.
10. Socialism and Anarchism. Also, Thou Shalt not Kill, by Tolstoi.
11. The Doctors and the Laity—The Cases of McKinley and Garfield. Delusion and Crime of Vaccination. Defense Against Torture and Murder.

Any one of these will be sent, while the supply lasts, on receipt of three cents, or the whole eleven for 25 cents. Postage stamps of any denomination received as payment.

LUCIFER'S COMING OF AGE.

We have also some copies left over of the Anniversary Double Number, containing, besides much other valuable matter, nearly ten columns of condensed history of the first twenty-one year's of Lucifer's life—written by the editor and by Edwin C. Walker, who was for some years associate editor of Lucifer, and who contributed much to making it a cosmopolitan or international educator.

The price of the double number is five cents each, or, while the supply lasts it will be sent free to any one who sends 25 cents for a three months trial subscription to Lucifer.

THE CHICAGO SOCIETY OF ANTHROPOLOGY meets every Sunday. Dec. 8 it will meet in Hall 913 Masonic Temple. John Z. White will speak on Robert Burns.

THE VACCINATION DISCUSSION, including the medical doctor question, has been unavoidably postponed till next issue of Lucifer.

The Home Colony.

Colonization in some form has engaged the attention of philanthropists in all ages. At the present time a number of experiments are on trial. Why so much time, energy and money has been wasted in fruitless efforts to harmonize warring factions is an unanswered question.

Today on Puget Sound, thirteen miles west of Tacoma, is a colony that has not been a disappointment to its promoters. Their experiences in a Socialist colony paved the way for the inauguration of a scheme that bids fair to be a success in the broadest sense of the term.

The Mutual Home Association was chartered Jan. 27, 1897, at the instance of O. H. Verity, G. H. Allen and L. P. Odell, whose worldly possessions were their wives, twelve children, a few household goods, a few vegetables, and $20 in cash. This $20 was paid on a contract for twenty-seven acres of stumpy land with the agreement to pay $250 at stated intervals. Transportation for their families and lumber to build their shanties had to be obtained on credit. Today we own 211 acres of land with twenty-six houses, eleven of them two story with five to ten rooms, and outbuildings, a printing office of two stories, and publish "Discontent." This paper is the product of voluntary contributions—as was the first print shop. It is not an official organ of the association. "Clothed With the Sun" is published here by Lois Waisbrooker. We have twenty-four men, twenty three women, and forty children.

The title to the land is vested in the Association. To become a member no certificate of character is needed. The presumption is the would-be member knows his own business, so there is no "red tape." All that is necessary is to pay the Secretary $2 for one lot or $4 for two lots, and select any unchosen lots, to do with as one sees fit. The only way to lose equity in said lot is to give or sell it, or refuse to pay taxes. Removal does not alter the status of the member, for upon return he is entitled to all former privileges. Possibly the harmony that prevails may be accounted for by the fact that we have neither by-laws, rules or regulations, and no smelling committees to do the dirty work for elastic conscience; no one to preserve the peace and dignity of the state, and no need of any. We have neither church or saloon, though no one would prevent any one building these twin evils. When we need public improvements we voluntarily give of our time and means, hence own our school-house and float.

Enormous crops can be raised and the best (not largest) vegetables I ever saw. Vegetables require fertilizing to do well. No fertilizers are used to produce immense crops of fruits. The tendency is to overbear. It costs from $50 to $100 to clear a lot (one acre); lumber (delivered), first class dressed, $16 to $18. Rough, $9. Shingles, $1.50 per thousand. Much has been said about the rainy season. It rains often, very often in winter. However according to U. S. Reports the rainfall in twenty-eight states and territories is greater than in Washington.

The winters are mild, seldom ice half-an-inch thick. Roses bloom out of doors until January. The nights in summer are always cool enough to sleep under blankets. Our location overlooks a beautiful sheet of water. Clams of various kinds are abundant. In my opinion no place on earth is as desirable (all things considered) for those who do not have to struggle for the necessaries of life, or to raise children The precepts and examples of self-reliance cannot be otherwise than salutary.

Home, Washington. JAS. W. ADAMS.

To the Press-Writers' Association.

COMRADES: In view of the present atttempt to establish a press censorship in America, is it not incumbent upon the members of this association to make a strong, united effort to thwart such attempts?

Would it not be good policy for us to drop all other discussion for a time, and concentrate on this one issue:

THE MAINTENANCE OF FREE SPEECH AND FREE PRESS IN AMERICA

With free expression of opinion taken away what else remains worth battling for?

Free government without free speech and free press is unthinkable. Only through the freedom of expression and experiment has the world advanced.

What is the meaning of all this furore about "Stamping out Anarchy?" In his masterly article on "Landmarks of Liberty," Louis F. Post in "The Public" answers well this question. He shows that it is only an imperialist scheme for suppressing free discussion—that is all.

In every age those who have held back the car of progress have been the ignorant dupes of unreasoning conservatism, and the present is no exception.

Comrades, why can not we unitedly use our influence to repel this avalanche of suppression and brutality? On a soil which has for more than a hundred years been consecrated to free speech and free press, shall we tamely submit to this new tyranny in the interest of ignorance and capitalistic greed? I say NO!

Let us show the reactionaires at the head of this movement that the fundamental principle upon which this government was founded must not be brushed aside. Let us do battle for liberty and human rights at any cost. HENRY E. ALLEN.

Berwick, Ill., Nov. 24, 1901.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Jennie Wade, Memphis, Tenn.:—Your paper is to me the elixir of life, for life would not be bright without it. Enclosed find one dollar to renew subscription. I want to thank you for continuing to send it after my time had expired.

Jas. W. Adams, Home, Wash.:—An essay read by me at our Literary Society last winter containing a quotation from the "Prodigal Daughter" was published in "Discontent." An indictment of Comrades Govan, Larkin and myself, and our arrest, followed. As an illustration of how press censorship suppresses, comrades in the east have printed 7,000 copies of the essay. Any one wishing a copy will please send name and address to me.

F. B. M., Wash.:—Please apply enclosed on my subscription. I do not see how I could get along without Lucifer. Its course during the so-called "Anarchist" excitement was admirable. An old soldier who wore the blue for five years, I blushed for my country—the boasted land of the free and home of the brave. I would not give the knowledge gained from Lucifer's columns for the wealth of Rockefeller. My late wife obtained a divorce last September. The blow would have been terrible to me had I not learned "Why love dies," though in her case it never was born; but I did not know that for many years. The world is certainly on the verge of great events, and Lucifer is doing its share of the work in preparing the minds of present and coming generations for the inevitable change. I find a great many who really sympathize with the Lucifer philosophy.

Paul L. Sautter, Phila., Pa.:—I heartily endorse the stand that Lucifer has taken in regard to Anarchism, and hope you will continue to do good work with tongue and pen for the abolition of all forms of tyranny and oppression. I believe Anarchism is an ideal state of society which will not be realized for many years to come; no permanent improvement in social institutions is possible until the people are prepared for that state by mental evolution. The ideas of government and authority are considered as entities by millions of minds, just as God, the supreme ruler and punisher, and a future state of rewards and punishments are also held as realities by these same millions. I believe the solution of the problem is taught by Lucifer—in Free Motherhood and the right to be born well. When this is realized that women can decide when they shall be mothers and can propagate off-spring under the most favorable conditions, selecting the most magnificent men, in their estimation, for their consorts, we may hope that the human race will arrive at that state of perfection where Anarchism is possible and will finally prevail.

Bachelor, New York:—A lady in Boston recently sent me several copies of your admirable little paper. I have read your editorials with interest; also enjoyed Lillian Harman's trenchant articles. As I board in a conservative family, I don't care to have publications of an unorthodox character addressed to me. Later I expect to enroll myself as a regular subscriber for Lucifer.

I was much amused by the article, "Women and Modesty," by Dorothy Dix, in your issue of Oct. 12. It called to mind an incident in my experience some time ago. A gentleman, his wife and I attended an amateur theatrical performance, in which half the actors and actresses were church members, and all of them "highly respectable." The play was a reproduction of one given in 1883. It was credibly rendered for amateurs, and the toilets of the ladies were pretty and appropriate, as you doubtless remember, the very "low-neck" and extremely "full back" fashion was in vogue at the period mentioned. I don't think I ever saw those features more pronounced at the opera in 1883-84 than they were at this amateur theatrical entertainment. On our way home my friend's wife (who is a very zealous Episcopalian) asked me how I liked the performance. I said I enjoyed it ever so much, and thought the costumes of the actresses were most charming. She said she thought them very pretty, too. In the exuberance of my enthusiasm I innocently remarked that it was one of the "most voluptuously beautiful displays of bust and bustle I ever beheld." My lady friend appeared to be quite shocked; she said I must not describe the ladies' attire in that frank way. I meekly begged pardon, and asked to be set right. She said I ought to say "the decollete features were very attractive and the backs superbly amplified." I thanked her for acquainting me with the distinctions in the terms employed. At the same time I could not help thinking that if Christian women think it naughty to describe a certain fashion "frankly," isn't it just a wee bit worldly for them to exhibit themselves in a society drama thus arrayed—reasoning from their own point of view.

In the Matter of Delaying.

"Delays are dangerous," said the cautious man.

"Not always," said the sad-eyed individual. "If a man delays about proposing, he may change his mind.—Town Topics.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.
Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.
Sermon from Shakespeare's Text. William Denton. 5c.
Truth Seeker Annuals for 1876, 1880, and 1891. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote, 5c.
Christianity no Finality. William Denton. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Parrington, 5c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Value and an Invariable Unit of Value. An important discovery in mine. William A. Waltlick, 20c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 96 pages, 10c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 5c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Bonner. 10c.
Government Analyzed, Col. J. R. Kelso, 40c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George 371 pages, 15c.
The Great Delusion. Otto Wettstein. 5c.
Life and Career of Charles Bradlaugh. Geo. Jacob Holyoke 5c.
Practical Co-operation, E. C. Walker. 5c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls, 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER
Snowville, Va.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Bonnemy painting exhibited in London; containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Romeuille portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the house he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., source; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edges. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various ills to which flesh is heir. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and surest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Émile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER. TARIES—Through regulating reproduction by conscroling conception. L. K. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 page. Price, $1.
DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $2.50, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 388 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $3.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yelept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 173 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
#808
v.5, no.48
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 48. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 12, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 895

LOVE'S DESIRE.

I ask not for possession of thy heart;
Thou art no chattel to be bought and sold,—
No precious plaything wrought with curious art,
For all to covet and for one to hold,
I ask not if the magnet of desire
Will draw at last thy spirit near to mine:
Not this my dream, but ever soaring higher
To merge at last my spirit's life in thine.

I ask no boon, no guerdon save the right
To give my love, my life, myself to thee.—
Bound to thy soul with chains of golden light,
Blest in my bondage, freer than the free.
I ask for freedom to obey love's call;
I ask for nothing, yet I ask for all.

—Edmond Holmes.

JOHN MOST AND FREIHEIT.

A Little Peep Behind the Scenes—An Ungarbled Translation—Most Describes His Experience at Blackwell's Island.

Frederick W. Mitchell, in "Truth Seeker."

The case of John Most involves such a clear question of the freedom of the press that no Freethinker can afford to overlook it. There is something interesting about the personality of this man. He and his famous weekly, Die Freiheit, are well known by name to two continents, but it is only a select few who can judge both understandingly.

Herr Most, like many of the radical Anarchists, was born a Catholic. He has served terms of imprisonment in Germany, England, and the United States, always for what are recognized to be political crimes, with one exception. This exception will not lower him in the eyes of the majority of readers of this paper, whatever they may think of any form of Anarchy. Augsburg, where Most was born, is a Bavarian city, and there Catholicism is particularly bigoted and intolerant. The youthful Most rebelled against going to confession, and the priest, a licentious and choleric fellow, attempted to give him corporal punishment. The priest got the worst thrashing he ever had in his life. Young Most was sentenced to jail, and registered a vow that he would never enter a church as long as he lived, which oath he has solemnly kept.

Most is a well-educated man. He is an omnivorous reader, and has made a special study of history. On this subject he has often lectured both in English and German. In the popular mind Herr Most is so thoroughly identified with the extreme Anarchists that the yellow press with one accord determined to exploit him after the Buffalo affair last September. It is said that all Most assignments given to reporters on the "Journal" and the "World" were marked respectively in the corner "P. F." and "C. S.," which meant that an interesting "story" or interview with Most could be prepared in the office, as it invariably was. P. F. means "pure fake" and C. S signifies "color strongly."

Die Freiheit (Liberty) contains about one-third as much matter as the "Truth Seeker." Herr Most writes a most peculiar style in German. He excels in lurid invective. His paper can be understood and appreciated only by one who adds to a knowledge of German a knowledge of New York life and both German and American slang. Nobody understands and relishes pure High German better than John Most, but it suits his fancy to get up the greater part of the Freiheit in a strange macaronic tongue that is very puzzling to a newly-arrived German, be he ever so learned.

Most's most important Agnostic publication is Die Gottespest (The Religious Plague), first issued in Leeds, England, and afterwards translated into English. It has also appeared in Italian. It is distinctly original in thought.

As is well known, three sycophantic judges, toadying to a supposed public sentiment, lately condemned Most to Blackwell's Island. The main features of this case have been fully explained in "The Truth Seeker," but it will be interesting now to hear, without fake, from Most himself on the subject. Accordingly an article by him is here translated honestly. To secure Most's conviction it was necessary to garble the translation of an article in a most clumsy manner. But the article here given is transcribed from Freiheit with an attempt to produce the flavor of the original with no alteration, no subtraction, and no addition. It illustrates typically just how dangerous and "incendiary" Freiheit really is, and, what is more important, it shows us authoritatively the status of the Most case.

It may be added incidentally that Herr Most not infrequently permits himself a freedom of expression worthy of Martial, Zola, or Boccaccio.

Herr Most speaks as follows:

MY CASE.

I had hardly dispatched my last epistle out of the depths of the "Tombs" to the living when a deputy sheriff presented himself, bringing some iron bracelets, with an invitation that I and three 'colleagues" should take a ride in the Black Maria to that island noted for its black wells. As a matter of fact my last day of grace had not yet arrived, but they proposed to practice some of their "swift justice" on me, better known as railroading.

Then and there I found that the barbering mania continues to play a leading role, so much so that one would think the whole matter of discipline depends on whether a man grows hair on his face or is shaved to a billiard-ball smoothness. Accordingly, after the description, characteristics, etc., were duly entered, there bobbed up a would-be barber to annihilate my mane with a species of razor which later on proved to be rather a saw.

Now, I do not wear this hirsute covering exactly as an adornment, but as a means of concealing a most repulsive nakedness. (Recall that yarn about the "zigzag-brained disciples of the zigzag-mouthed prophet," as a contemptible penny-a-liner

Per
L937
3rd ser.,
v.5
1901/02
no.48

put it.) So, as I was expecting a stay of proceedings, I endeavored to be exempted from this flaying process—well-known to me by a former experience.

"Well, I guess not!" answered the hall-keeper. "All the hairy people have to be shaved clean here. If a Chinaman came here it would be simply off with his pigtail."

(In fact, a few days later this procedure did occur with a Mongolian, although they only clapped three months on him for illicit opium selling.)

I appealed to the head keeper, and he went to the warden—Fallan is the name of this worthy—but the decision came back: "No exceptions." Then they proceeded to flay me, which left me looking as if some Boxers had been getting in their work under the impression that I was a missionary.

Then I was bathed, vaccinated, weighed—even the length and width of ears being solemnly documented—photographed, etc., and finally thrust into the famous zebra uniform and into a cell that was seven feet long, six and a half feet high, and four and a half feet wide. Next morning I learned that I had been pronounced competent to work at the drive-wheel in the blacksmith shop. Furthermore, there was nothing for me but to reconcile myself to the same wretched old routine that I went through and described fourteen years ago in the "hell of Blackwell's Island," where in the main nothing is changed.

Everything is done there by command, accompanied by continual abuse and insult. A man is not permitted to do a thing or refrain from doing a thing without being expressly ordered. At command he must open the door, shut it, wash himself, empty his slop-pail, sit down, stand up, etc. Then the lock-step—heaven, will you give me a gun! During the first days you feel an unutterable, impotent rage at all these humiliating, debasing, petty vexations; nothing meaner, nothing viler is to be met with in any prison in the wide world. Later on you come to the "goldsmith's apprentice's" way of thinking—to resist would be simple suicide, for the least attempt at insubordination means loss of meals, dark cell, and so on.

In the workshop, there and there alone, you begin to realize that you are almost a human being after all, and incidentally you can study a variety of things; more particularly your companions in misfortune, the majority of whom are there for petty offenses, for otherwise they would have been sent to the state prison in Sing Sing or Auburn.

There is one fellow who must sojourn here a year for "entering a house without ringing." Another gets a year and $500 (which means for him 500 extra days) just because the wiseacre cops merely suspected that he was bent on burglary, and they found suspicious tools in his pockets, and so on.

The hardest lot is that of the "backsliders;" for the most trivial offenses they seldom get less than a year and a nasty fine to boot, which latter is nothing more than glaring class legislation, for these wretches are compelled by their poverty alone to stay longer in prison. And worse yet, these people have to languish here for nothing and less than nothing all the longer, for no other reason than that they have already been here. Take my case, for instance. Strictly speaking, you are punished for "sins" that you have already expiated. Justice, thou art a crazy beast!

Day by day my Island life was passing away, slowly very slowly, but surely; more and more I was getting reconciled to the idea of serving the whole sentence inflicted on me by three judicial cranks; but meanwhile my counsel, Hillquitt Brothers, and comrades, far and near, were hard at work raising the funds to take the necessary measures toward getting me out. And after a sixteen-day session, Supreme Court Judge McLean handed down a decision on the appeal together with a stay of execution; and, thanks to bail of $1,500 furnished by friend and comrade Altinger, the Freiheit continued to appear.

Now observe that this legal decision made out the police judges who had condemned me to be, to a certain extent, jackasses; and it proved that their sentence, based on a never before applied and absolutely meaningless section of the code, was a high-handed, unconstitutional abuse of authority.

If this document were final in its bearing, it would be equivalent to an acquittal. It means, however, as it says, only an approval of the appeal, which must positively be acted on at the very next session of the Supreme Court to be held in December; otherwise McLean's decree would be ineffective.

Accordingly, every document bearing on the case, with the arguments of the lawyers for appeal, must be arranged in printed form in the shortest possible time—a distinctly American way of doing things which makes it impracticable for poor devils to attempt an appeal on account of the enormous preliminary expense. Our comrades will realize that I am in pressing need of their material assistance, after as well as before my trouble.

Seven higher judges have now to review the trial and decide by a majority vote whether my sentence is to stand or not. In case of an unfavorable decision, an appeal can still be taken to the Court of Appeals at Albany—the great law-dispensing Albany. Should the judgment of the seven wise men, however, be favorable to me and to the liberty of the press, that would really mean nothing more than the granting of a new trial; but as such a decision would at the same time plainly indicate the inapplicability to me of the section referred to, there would be no legal basis for any new trial, and the whole thing would have to be dropped.

Meanwhile I wander about within the limits of my golden chain, and my fate depends on the lottery of justice—perhaps, forsooth, on good or bad digestion of one of the lottery managers. A puzzling situation!

American Press-Writers' Association.

Eleven thousand pages of printed matter in the interests of the Association's work have been printed and distributed the past month at a total cost of $24.27, and we feel that this printed matter will unify and greatly extend the usefulness of the Press-Writers. Anarchism has been for several weeks the leading topic, but the past has seen the anti-vaccinators forging to the front in various places. J. T. Small has been in evidence several times in the "Boston Traveler," W. C. Knowles in the local papers of Gardner, Mass. Dr. R. S. Clymer in Rockland, Mass., "Free Press," Philadelphia "Times," Camden, N. J. "Post-Telegram" and several local papers in Pennsylvania.

F. Wm. B. Cullingford and others have appeared in the Camden papers and as yet no doctor has risen to defend the practice. Francis B. Livesey has been the leader on Anarchism and kindred lines. The "Sun-Democrat," Tacoma, Wash., gave him a column on Good and Bad Anarchists, an expose of the secret order organized to prosecute the Home people which the editor says "has suspended."

J. M. Gilbert and Dr. J. C. Barnes both appear in the "Farmer's Review" of Bonham, Texas, in defense of the Anarchist and the Infidel. Livesey also gets a good one in the "Iowa State Register" of DesMoines on Anarchism; two Maryland papers print him on Roosevelt and Anarchists, and the "Texas World" gives him a column in which to discuss the relations of schools, Anarchy and Socialism. Cassius V. Cook got a short letter on conventionalities in the "Chicago Chronicle" and the writer has a write up of "Teddy's" rebuke to the "jingoes" in the "Inter-Ocean."

NEW MEMBERS.

174 c. Best, Miss Grace Phelps, Lilly Dale, N. Y.
175 b. Chapman, H. L., Marcellus, Mich.
176 f. Foote, Dr. E. B., 120 Lexington Ave. New York, N. Y., donation $10.
177 b. Fox, Flora W., 15 E. 6th St. Rochester, Minn.
178 f. Hirschberg, Harry, Newburgh, N. Y., donation $3.
179 b. Pleydell, A. C., 116 Ridley Ave., Sharon Hill, Pa.
180 b. Collins, Walter, 639 E. 21st. St., Los Angeles, Cal.

CORRECTIONS.

22 b. Byler, J. M., 2314 Dewey Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.
A. C. ARMSTRONG, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester Mass.

For an impenetrable shield, stand inside your self.—Thoreau.

Bureaucracy in America.

Few of our readers are probably aware of the fact that the post-office bureau of the federal government is constantly doing things which if done by a private individual would subject him to severe punishment. While the daily press and leading magazines of the country are demanding the exclusion of foreign "Anarchists" because of the alleged danger to "free government," would it not be well to look a little into the acts of our own public officials and see whether they are not doing what in the nature of things will speedily subvert our boasted "free institutions?"

In the "Arena" for December, under the head "Bureaucracy in America," the editor, B. O. Flower, comments thus on the doings of one arm of the Federal executive:

"There are few forms of government more dangerous, and which in time become more essentially despotic, than that which is known as a bureaucracy. The despotism of Russia is far more bureaucratic than autocratic. The Czar is rather the figurehead, while the bureaus are in fact the iron hand which is staying progress and moral and intellectual development while crushing rightful liberty.

"During the last few decades there have been many alarming illustrations of bureaucratic tendencies in our own government—many acts that cannot be characterized other than as usurpations of power wholly unwarranted by law and in opposition to the genius of our government. Perhaps nowhere has this evil been more marked than in the postal department. For many years the post-office departments have striven to secure additional legislation that would enable the postal authorities to exercise more autocratic power, especially in relation to sample copies and the exclusion of periodicals which are mailable under present laws, but which are in themselves complete works, such for example as 'Les Miserables' and other standard productions which have under present laws been sent to hundreds of thousands of people who otherwise could not have enjoyed the splendid educational influence they have exerted. The plea has been that the sending of sample copies and premiums was a burden to the department and prevented it from making the financial showing that was desired. Whenever this question, however, has come up in Congress, it has been shown that the deficiency in the postal department was largely if not wholly due to the exorbitant and extortionate charges which the great railways levy upon the government and which seem to give the department little concern. Pertinent and unpleasant questions have been asked the department by our legislators, who are curious to know how the express companies are able to get better rates than the government of the United States. On the other hand, it was shown that one of the great functions of the post-office was to further the distribution of literature and thereby increase the education of the people."

* * *

Mr. Flower adds that "having failed repeatedly to secure the legislation desired, the [post-office] department has now arrogated to itself the right to gain its ends by arbitrary rulings calculated to cover the points which Congress has repeatedly refused to grant through legislation." The editor then quotes from correspondence between Gen. C. H. Howard, a Chicago publisher, and Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden, showing that the rulings alluded to in regard to "sample copies," "subscriptions in bulk," etc., are avowedly arbitrary, autocratic and unauthorized by law.

The object of this article is not to argue for or against the wisdom or justice of these postal regulations, but rather to show how rapidly our miscalled government of the people is drifting into the imperialistic methods of the old-world despotisms.

As shown by Gen. C. H. Howard, in an article entitled "Publishers and the Postal Department" in the current number of the "Arena," a "National Publishers' Bureau" has been formed the object of which it is to acquaint the general public with the facts concerning these arbitrary and imperialistic methods of managing the very erroneously called people's mail.

M. H.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Are you wondering what holiday present you shall select for your friend? What more appropriate than a well-chosen book, which may be treasured by its recipient not only for the sake of the giver, but for the gift's intrinsic worth? Here are a few to which we would call your special attention:

DAWN-THOUGHT, by J. Wm. Lloyd, is one of the most appropriate gift-books that could be chosen. Printed in Old Style Antique type, red-letter side-titles and chapter-initials, with portrait of author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1, and 50 cents.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID is a dainty little gift booklet, also by J. Wm. Lloyd. For description see our booklist.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY, by Edward Carpenter, is a well-printed, daintily-bound booklet, written in the author's well-known charming style. Price 25 cents.

For the young nothing could be better than SCIENCE IN STORY; or Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. The interest is held through every one of the 240 pages, and "grown-up" children too, will laugh over the funny adventures of Sponsie, and with Sammy learn of the wonders of physiological science. Profusely illustrated. Five volumes in one, cloth $2; Five volumes separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents a volume.

Another splendid story for the young is KORADINE, by Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Illustrated. 125 pages. Extra Levant cloth. Price $1.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS, two of Ibsen's best-known plays, are bound together in a well-printed handsomely-bound volume, suitable for a gift-book. Price, 75 cents.

A charming present to your friend to whom the occult is interesting would be BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: THE MYSTERY OF SEX; by Mary Hanford Ford. Well printed in large, clear type, on heavy paper and bound in Levant cloth. Price, $1.

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE, by William Platt, is another pretty gift-book. Is handsomely printed and bound, and contains two stories: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Price, 75 cents.

THE BALLAD OF READING GAOL, by C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde) is an artistically printed and bound work in two editions—paper, 10 cents; cloth, $1.

The presentation edition of Paine's AGE OF REASON would be a beautiful present for any friend who is interested in Freethought. See description in our book list.

Others in our list which would make acceptable presents are: A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY; HILDA'S HOME; MARTYRDOM OF MAN; RIGHTS OF WOMEN; THE WOMAN WHO DID; WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE, and WOMAN, IN THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE. For prices and descriptions of these see last page of this issue.

We have two copies of A PERSIAN PEARL and Other Essays, by Clarence S. Darrow. This is the edition published at the Roycroft Shop, and each book is numbered. The essays are A Persian Pearl; The Skeleton in the Closet; Walt Whitman; Realism in Literature and Art; and Robert Burns. The book is very handsomely printed and bound, and is now "out of print." Who wants these? Price, $2 each.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A Kansas widower was recently caught hugging and kissing his housekeeper at a church social and was complained of and put on trial for disturbing the peace and for "open gross lewdness and lascivious behavior in a public place," but the jury acquitted him, the judge complimented him and the audience cheered him to the echo. Thus at a single bound he leaped into fame and honor. It may well be said "there are no flies on Kansas."

S. R. S.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

895.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

The President's Message.

The first message of our present chief ruler to the legislative body known as the Congress of the United States, is a long one; one of the longest on record.

This delivering a message at the opening of the annual sessions of the national legislature seems to be a survival or imitation of the custom long observed by the English monarchs at the opening of the national legislature called the British Parliament, and in so doing the American chief magistrate exercises one of the traditional prerogatives of monarchy.

The meaning of this custom, or the inference to be drawn from its observance, would seem to be that the people of the United States do not know what is best for them, neither do their so-called representatives in Congress know what is best for the general welfare, and therefore the man who is supposed to be elected to see that the laws are properly executed takes it upon himself to instruct the people—that is, their representatives, as to their powers and duties.

And thus it cometh to pass that a comparatively young man, one who until quite recently was known chiefly for his feats in hunting wild animals and as a "rough rider" or "cowboy" on the western plains, and also as the colonel of a "rough rider" regiment in the brief and inglorious war against a weak, a broken down and superannuated monarchy—this man, comparatively young and by no means noted for wisdom or prudence, assumes the role of paternal guardian of the welfare of eighty millions of people, many of whom in years, experience and wisdom are incomparably his superior—and in this capacity of paternal guardian assumes the right of authoritative instructor, not to say DICTATOR.

* * *

I have read but little of this long perfunctory document, said to contain about twenty thousand words. Printed in small type it is tiresome to the eyes; but this is one of the least of my objections to spending valuable time in giving it a thorough perusal. A far greater objection is the wear and waste of reserve nervous energy consequent upon reading a long document that in its outset shows its author to be either very ignorant of current literature bearing upon political affairs, else a wilful falsifier and maligner of his fellow citizens, many of whom are, to say the least, as honest and as capable of forming a correct judgment on public matters as himself, to say nothing of benevolence or philanthropy.

* * *

Before writing more about the message of "His Accidency,"—Andrew Johnson was so-called when he succeeded Abraham Lincoln in the office of president of the United States, I wish to say that against Theodore Roosevelt as a man I have nothing to say, and that in speaking of his public acts or utterances I shall treat him not as my lord or master in any sense, but rather as the SERVANT of all the people, employed by them much as a constable or policeman is employed, to help defend the rights of the private citizens, that is, to help to keep the peace between man and man, holding that it is no part of his business to make laws for the government of others, nor to dictate to the lawmakers what laws should be enacted.

To put it differently I claim my right as an American citizen to criticize freely, without fear or favor, the acts and utterances of all who for the time being occupy positions of political, military or civil power, trust or responsibility.

* * *

To do less than this would be to acknowledge myself incompetent to perform the full duty of a citizen,—to be recreant to the duties rightfully imposed on him who enjoys the privileges of citizenship.

To do less than this would be to invite and tempt our public servants to usurp powers and functions that do not properly belong to them, with the result that the government of the people, by the people and for the people would soon become (if it has not already so become) a government of public servants, and by and for our public servants.

It is one of the chief characteristics of the demagogue that he appeals to the passions and prejudices of his hearers to win their favor. Whether Theodore Roosevelt in his carefully prepared opening speech to the American congress exhibits the arts of the demagogue I leave to the readers of Lucifer to say. Out of more than a whole long column of closely printed talk about Anarchy and Anarchists, as given in the daily papers, I select a few characteristic paragraphs, supposing that not all our readers will have the opportunity of reading the message entire for themselves:

"The Anarchist is a criminal whose perverted instincts lead him to prefer confusion and chaos to the most beneficent form of social order. His protest of concern for workingmen is outrageous in its impudent falsity; for if the political institutions of this country do not afford opportunity to every honest and intelligent son of toil, then the door of hope is forever closed against him. The Anarchist is everywhere not merely the enemy of system and of progress, but the deadly foe of liberty. If ever Anarchy is triumphant, its triumph will last for but one red moment, to be succeeded for ages by the gloomy night of despotism."

"For the Anarchist himself, whether he preaches or practices his doctrines, we need not have one particle more concern than for any ordinary murderer. He is not the victim of social or political injustice. There are no wrongs to remedy in his case. The cause of his criminality is to be found in his own evil passions and in the evil conduct of those who urge him on, not in any failure by others or by the state to do justice to him or his. He is a malefactor and nothing else. He is in no sense, in no shape or way, a 'product of social conditions,' save as a highwayman is 'produced' by the fact that an unarmed man happens to have a purse. It is a travesty upon the great and holy names of liberty and freedom to permit them to be invoked in such a cause. No man or body of men preaching Anarchistic doctrines should be allowed at large any more than if preaching the murder of some specified private individual. Anarchistic speeches, writings, and meetings are essentially seditious and treasonable."

"Anarchy is a crime against the whole human race, and all mankind should band against the Anarchist. His crime should be made an offense against the law of nations, like piracy and that form of man stealing known as the slave trade; for it is of blacker infamy than either. It should be so declared by treaties among all civilized powers. Such treaties would give to the Federal Government the power of dealing with the crime."

* * *

Just here I would remind our readers that I distinctly decline to stand sponsor for the opinions or the utterances of any man, or men. I represent no one but myself, and myself only for the present hour. I am liable to change opinion at any moment. What I say in this article is not in defense of Anarchists as such but simply in defense of personal right and personal liberty. If Roosevelt had called all Christians criminals and demanded that they be treated as murderers because one of their number assassinated James Garfield I should raise my voice against such injustice.

And so also when all Anarchists are denounced as criminals because a man calling himself an Anarchist killed William McKinley I raise my voice against such injustice.

With the poet Lowell I would say, "They are slaves who dare not speak for the fallen and the weak"—no matter by what name they may be called. We all remember the story of the Quaker who had a dog he wanted killed. Being very tender-hearted he said to the dog, "I cannot kill thee, but I will give thee a bad name." So he called to the passers by, "Bad dog, bad dog!" The people understood him to say MAD dog, and so they quickly killed him without stopping to inquire what evidence there was against the poor beast.

So it is with Roosevelt and Archists generally. They know that philosophic Anarchists—the only kind who can rightfully claim the name—are very well-behaved people, but their teachings are considered dangerous to the interests of those who systematically rob the masses of people, and so to get rid of the dangerous teachers these Archists proclaim it from pulpit, press and platform and from the Presidential chair, that Anarchy means assassination, that it means "confusion and chaos," that "no man or body of men preaching Anarchistic doctrines should be allowed at large, any more than if preaching the murder of some specified private individual."

* * *

According to Roosevelt Thomas Jefferson should "not be allowed at large," if alive now and talking as he did in the Declaration of Independence and in his other published works. Quoting from Trumbull's pamphlet entitled "Thomas Jefferson," here are a few of his utterances:

"I am convinced that those societies which live without government enjoy in their mass an infinitely greater degree of happiness than those who live under European governments. Among the former, public opinion is in the place of law, restraining morals as powerfully as laws ever did anywhere."

Then speaking of the three forms under which "societies exist," he mentioned as first—"Without government, as among the Indians," adding, "it is a problem not clear in my mind that the first condition is not the best."

Who is the better authority on matters of political or civil government, Thomas Jefferson or Theodore Roosevelt?

M. HARMAN.

Hygiene and Therapeutics.

Once more the solar year is nearing its close—that is, for the inhabitants of the northern hemisphere of the earth's surface, bringing the season of sudden atmospheric changes, especially sudden changes of temperature from pleasantly warm to disagreeably cold. These changes are very apt to have a disastrous effect upon health, especially of people whose bodily condition has been impaired or weakened by dietetic errors, by breathing foul air, by neglect of bathing, lack of proper physical exercise or by some one or more of the many bad habits of most dwellers in our crowded cities, and also of those who live in rural districts, as well.

Believing that to learn from experience and observation is the art of living I propose in this article to give some of the results of my own experience and observation as to the best methods of avoiding the "colds," "coughs," pneumonias, etc., so frequently prevalent in high northern latitudes, and also in the so-called temperate zone, during the winter and early spring months.

During the first half of my life I was much afflicted with the disorders just mentioned. Nearly every winter, and often till late in summer my lungs were in a state of acute or chronic inflammation, more or less pronounced.

Now, and for many years past I very rarely have any trouble with my lungs, and when a cold is taken it lasts but a short time. Briefly told my methods of prevention and cure of colds, pneumonia, and other bronchial, nasal and pulmonary troubles are these:

First, the habit of deep and full breathing, being careful to breathe pure and cool or cold air. When I first began these conscious efforts at full inflation of the lungs the process was difficult and painful, but by persistence—many times each day inhaling all the air possible, then slowly expelling it, with head erect and arms extended, the exercise soon became easy and pleasant. At night I am specially careful to have my sleeping room well supplied with pure air, and frequently during the night the full breathing exercises are repeated.

Second, a daily bath in tepid, cool or cold water, followed by brisk towel or hand rubbing, with an occasional warm or hot bath—the common tub-bath or "cabinet" vapor bath, followed by cool or cold water over the whole body.

Third, daily exercise of the muscles in the open air, or in a well ventilated room. I regard walking as probably the best of all the physical exercises for health, being careful to carry the head erect and the lungs well inflated. Next, perhaps, comes exercise with dumb bells, Indian clubs, parallel bars, etc., also rowing or horse-back riding if convenient and safe.

To cure colds, coughs, obstructions of the nasal passages, bronchial troubles and pneumonia, the treatment is much the same as for prevention. With the very first symptoms of "taking cold," as the phrase is, special treatment should begin. Dr. Hall's prescription for a cold is excellent, so far as it goes. He says:

"Stop work at once. Go to your room, a warm but well ventilated room: put your feet in hot water and keep them there at least one hour, and be sure to have the water hotter when you take them out than when you put them in. Wipe them dry; put on clean warm stockings. Stay in your room and eat nothing whatever for twenty-four hours."

My own experience would add to the above as follows: With the feet in hot water take a "cabinet" or vapor bath, for the entire body. If the nasal passages are closed, sniff hot water—as hot as can be borne, holding the water in the nose for some minutes. At first the effort will probably fail, but a little perseverance will open the passages. Repeat the process until the catarrhal symptoms disappear. If the throat is sore, continued gargling with hot water will give relief.

If no cabinet is handy, and no better way of providing steam, let the patient sit, naked or nearly so, on a cane-bottomed chair covered with towels; put an ordinary iron pot half-filled with hot water under the chair. Into the pot, drop hot stones or brick-bats—being careful not to scald the patient by having the stones too hot, and confining the steam by blankets tucked under the patient's chin. If the patient is weak or feels faint the head should be kept cool with cold water appliances.

This is a cheaply improvised Turkish bath, but with a little tact may be made quite as satisfactory in results as the more expensive kind. The bath should be continued until thorough sweating is produced, or if the patient is too weak to sit up the sweating can be accomplished by the application of hot bricks, or better still, by means of ears of corn (maize) taken from boiling water and placed around the body, the limbs and feet of the patient in bed, and persisted in until the desired result is obtained.

In this primitive and clumsy way I have very successfully treated pneumonia in country places where no better appliances were obtainable.

* * *

To show that fevers may be successfully treated by the application of water alone, and without the complicated apparatus used by many water-cure doctors, I herewith give the experience of an old farmer living in southern Missouri, and printed more than half a century ago in the "Water-Cure Journal," published by Fowlers and Wells, New York:

"East Prairie, Mississippi Co., Mo., Nov. 30, 1850.

"MESSRS. FOWLERS AND WELLS:

"I am a farmer, in my seventy-fifth year. I have taken your Journal since January last, but in none of your Journals do I see where fevers have been treated with the success that I have treated them with for more than thirty years, and I have never failed in a single case to make a perfect cure in a few minutes. I have no interest in deceiving you or any other person; and as for having my name published in your Journal as a great Water-Cure doctor, I wish you not to publish this, but give it to some person of your acquaintance in whom you have confidence, who will give it a fair trial, or to several, and if it succeeds, as I know it will, publish the fact in any person's name you please except mine.

"I have treated all fevers, fever and ague, etc., alike. My plan is simply to bathe at the time the fever is at the highest; if the fever has passed its highest point, and is going off, I let the patient alone until it returns. I know nothing of wet sheets, bandages, etc.; but when the fever returns, or gets as high as I think it will go, I put the patient in a hogshead that I keep for bathing. I have him go entirely under water, head and all, for three or four times, keeping his head under each time as long as he can conveniently hold his breath; then let him dabble in it up to the chin until the heat is reduced to the natural temperature, and the patient feels comfortable; then let him come out and wipe dry with towels, put his clothes on, walk about, lie down, or do as his inclination leads; eat what he will, drink what he pleases; as for rubbing, I do nothing of the kind. I pay no attention to the temperature of the water, the object being to bring the patient to the natural heat, and this can be done in fifteen or twenty minutes.

"When I have no convenience for bathing, and, in fact, sometimes, as a matter of preference, I pour water on the patient's head, instead of bathing; and surprising as it may seem, this always has the same effect that bathing has, and I do not know that it takes longer to cool the body in this way than it does by bathing. I have the patient lie with the head over the edge or side of the bed, so that the water will not wet the bedding. I then get a bucket of the coldest water, place it under the head, and pour the water over the back of the head from one temple to the other, the patient lying with the face downward. I pour it on moderately, and at the height of the fever; I think it will have little effect if done at any other time. Pouring water on the head in this way will cool the whole body nearly or quite as soon as going all under water, as before directed. If the water is not poured on long enough at first, the fever will return in a few minutes, but repeat the pouring then as at first. I have known the fever return twice before it was finally driven away.

"The next day after the treatment the patient is capable of attending to his business as usual, and I do not recollect a case in which the patient had another attack the same season.

. . . . I am sure if my mode is not employed as directed, at the height of the fever, it will fail. As stated in the beginning, I am no doctor, neither did I make this discovery myself. I lived forty-two years on the Sciota bottom-lands, in Sciota county, Ohio, the most noted place for bilious complaints perhaps in the world. A physician who had attended my family, being about to move away, I asked him whom I should apply to after he was gone, in case of sickness. He then told me how to apply water in all cases of fever. I have now tried it more than thirty years, and have never failed.

"The effect the cold bath had on me last spring, in the worst dysentery I ever experienced, no person would believe. I could name a great many cases of different kinds of bowel complaints, which have been successfully treated with Water-Cure. . . . . but I have found that almost ninety-nine in a hundred have been opposed to the application of cold water in any case whatever. The few who have tried the cure as directed, have never failed to get well speedily; yet, even they would almost always, on the second attack, apply to a drug-doctor. In the cases of small children, I have induced their mothers to hold them in a bucket or tub of water, and wet their heads continually for five minutes. I have never known this fail to cure the chills and fever; let it be done also when the fever is at the highest.

ABRAHAM MILLAR."

* * *

My experience corroborates that of Mr. Millar, and when he speaks of the popular prejudice against water-cure treatment of fevers and of other diseases, so-called; also when he says that after being cured by this simple, rational and inexpensive method his patients "would almost always, on the next attack, apply to a drug-doctor," showing that the drug superstition, in physical therapeutics, is nearly if not quite as hard to overcome as is the vicarious atonement superstition in psychic therapeutics, or soul-healing.

I have many and very faithful and helpful friends among the medical fraternity some of whom still give drugs to their patients; mainly, as I think, because these patients expect and demand drug-medication,—knowing from long experience that, as the old Missouri farmer says, to refuse to prescribe drugs is simply to send the sick man to a doctor who will; thus losing the case, the fee, and also the opportunity to do something towards eradicating the old barbaric medical superstition. M. HARMAN.

Albert Chavannes has just issued the second edition of his "Studies in Sociology." In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. We shall add this work to our book list and send it on receipt of 25 cents.

VARIOUS VOICES.

L. B. Davis, Lawrence, Kas.:—I don't think I will be here a great while longer. I was born Jan 3, 1820. Maybe you can tell how old I am. I have been taking Lucifer about as long as it has been published. Enclosed find $1 for another year.

Mrs. Robt. Donnell, Pittstown, Pa.:—Have received a copy of your most excellent paper and have read it through today. I feel so thankful for it, for I have received so much good from it. I enclose 29 cents for Lucifer, "The Prodigal Daughter," and a copy of the anniversary number.

Sadie A. Magoon, Home, Wash.:—We are very glad to be here, and hope nothing will ever occur to send us adrift. We like the place, and the people seem near and dear to us. I cannot imagine a colony better than this, where the people are kind, love each other, and "mind their own business."

Francis Barry, Kent, Ohio:—Through a long life of intense interest in everything spoken or written in defense of right, and in condemnation of wrong, I do not recollect ever to have been so supremely thankful as I am for what Moses Harman has written and quoted on page 371 of Lucifer No. 893.

A. J. Ault, Calpella, Cal.:—I am not an Anarchist. I do not even believe in absolute freedom of speech, much less absolute freedom of action. But I am interested in the theory, and wish to investigate. Several weeks ago I received a sample copy of Lucifer, which I find intensely interesting, and I am now taking a trial trip with you. I received and read "The Prodigal Daughter," and though I do not thoroughly endorse everything therein, I wish every man and woman on earth could carefully read it. Many thanks for putting me in the way of reading the interesting literature you publish and sell. I enclose 90 cents for which send me the accompanying list of pamphlets.

Cassius V. Cook, Lake City, Iowa:—Only very lately have I had access to any libertarian periodical. Our mutual friend Frederica de Crane has supplied me with a large quantity of back numbers of Lucifer. I must say that I thoroughly enjoyed them, for they contain such valuable information on the questions so important to human welfare. In fact I have had Lucifer for breakfast, Lucifer for dinner, Lucifer for supper, and if any one were to ask what I wanted more of—it would perhaps be Lucifer. I have read that very valuable book "A Cityless and Countryless World" and am sorry to observe that it is no longer presented to the public through your advertising columns.

Albert Strout, Hot Springs, Ark.:—I would consider it a great favor if you would continue sending Lucifer to my address, Davenport, Wash., and I will remit the subscription early in the year. Lucifer is read every week and then handed to some neighbor by Mrs. Strout, and I am sure the good it will accomplish will more than offset the inconvenience that my delinquent subscription will cause you.

[We are always willing to wait for the money when it is inconvenient for our friends to renew promptly. But we do not wish to continue sending the paper when it is no longer wanted. So we hope our friends will let us know promptly, on expiration of subscription, if they want their names left on subscription list. The number to which each subscription is paid appears on the wrapper. L. H.]

Lucifer's Leaders.

For the convenience of our friends, the most important articles recently appearing in Lucifer are listed below.

1. Another National Tragedy. The Medical Doctor Question. Also, Marriage Legal and Free —"When Love is Liberty and Nature Law."
2. The Lesson of the Hour—William McKinley and Leon Czolgosz. Also, Anarchism and the Trusts, by Tucker.
3. Sentenced to Die. Also, Two Epochs in Man's Progress, by Proudhon.
4. Free Unions and Parental Responsibility. Also, Individualistic Anarchism Opposed to Force.
5. Archism versus Anarchism. The Social Side of Anarchism. Also, Freedom in Love, by Heinzen.
6. Government Against the People. Also, the Goal of Anarchism.—Tucker.
7. Cowardly Murder—Assassination and Electrocution. Also, Ruinous Effects of Slave Labor, by Rachel Campbell.
8. The Nation's Crime. Also, Purifying the Tenements.—Walker.
9. Anarchy in the Family. Also, To Mothers.
10. Socialism and Anarchism. Also, Thou Shalt not Kill, by Tolstoi.
11. The Doctors and the Laity—The Cases of McKinley and Garfield. Delusion and Crime of Vaccination. Defense Against Torture and Murder.

Order by number. Three cents each; eleven for 25 cents.

Lucifer's "Coming of Age" double number will be sent on receipt of five cents.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only," Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spotting of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: A woman or man with a capital of $350 as partner to conduct a legitimate mail order business and also a job printing office. Must be a believer in sex freedom. HENRY C. HANSON.
Aurora, Ill., 165 North Ohio St.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 402 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa.; scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edges, special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save your health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. B. R. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coulridge), A Traveler's Tale (B. R. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 10c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to unobstructive self-hood. 10c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. B. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving chief reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by counseling conception. A. H. Foote, Jr., M. D. 10c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 50c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, fabricated with portrait of the author, in three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.50, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 30 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Ycleept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Wiune). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 173 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E
f #808
V.5, no.49
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 49. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 19, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 896

TO MAKE MEN FREE.

To make men free has been the dream
Of every noble soul on earth—
To bring a better time to birth;
To see the future's hills agleam
With the first holy light
Of a new era bright,
From which the human night
Of ages speeds away,
Its sable folds withdrawn
Before the golden dawn,
Where earth goes rolling on,
Into the grander day.

To make men free from court and throne,
Free from the money-changer's greed,
Free from hypocrisy and creed,
Free from the dreaded lash of need,
And free to reap where they have sown,
Free from earth's scourge, the conqueror,
Free from the murderous lust of war;
Free from the robber's cry of more,
And free to have their own;
Free voluntarily to share
Their blessings for the common good,
Free to each other's burdens bear
In helpfulness and brotherhood;
Free in security to live
And seek the blessings of content;
Free in the freedom love can give;
The freedom of enlightenment!

To make men free! It is with me
The dearest purpose of my heart,
That I may know and do my part
To speed the cause of Liberty;
My energy and life to be
Made consecrate to the one theme,
The single purpose and the dream,
In every land to make men free—
To make men free! —J. A. E.

Crime and Criminals; or, the Problems Presented by Anti-Social Acts.*

BY E. C. WALKER.

Herbert Spencer says: "In proportion as we love truth more and victory less, we shall become anxious to know what it is which leads our opponents to think as they do. We shall begin to suspect that the pertinacity of belief exhibited by them must result from perception of something we have not perceived."

If I am not positive tonight, if I do not zealously advocate a theory and undoubtingly offer a panacea, it is because I realize, in the spirit of Spencer's thought, that there are many sides to and factors in this problem. But a very few of them can be examined, even in summary, at this time, so I shall try to confine myself to the consideration of the question, What shall be done with the men and women who commit deeds universally recognized in our civilization as anti-social, as criminal?

This is our most intricate and painful social problem, even when many of its economic, sumptuary, and ethical parts are excised. My purpose is to deal only with the crimes of individuals, or very small groups of individuals, those acts which generally are accepted as invasive, inimical to personal safety, destructive of peace and security in society, for no advance toward a solution of the problem of social defense and the reformation of the criminal can be made while we are fundamentally divided as to what is crime and who is the criminal.

To this end, I wish to leave out of particular consideration on the present occasion, as causes of crime,

First. The vast mass of industrial spoliation and the equally vast mass of blundering waste in the use of external nature. Each of these constitutes a great problem in itself and is receiving the attention of large numbers of persons. But neither of these evils, enormous as it is, is so complicated as is the other segment of the whole question, the segment which I wish you to help me examine now.

Second. So also we will leave to one side the thousands of offenses against the law which are created by prohibitory statutes, license regulations, Sunday edicts, tariff restrictions (from the last-named comes smuggling and undervaluation of imports), and "moral" (sexual) enactments. Many of the victims of these various kinds of misdirected effort will be found in the classes of criminals which are under our present inspection, but now we need to consider them only as offenders against other individuals, not regarding their position as effects of removable causes, causes that may have started them toward the way in which they are now stumbling.

Third. Neither shall I consider war, which is organized and wholesale appropriation and destruction of property and infliction of torture and death, in connection with this question of personal crime. Until economic mal-adjustment and spoliation until waste of natural resources, until paternal moral legislation, until war, are approximately as unpopular with the masses of the people as the anti-social acts of individuals are now we shall not be in a position to calmly and improvingly examine our relations to criminals, in so far as their wrong-doing might be directly and consciously traced to monopoly, general ignorance, invasive legislation, and war. The best we can do, in a practical way, is to examine the position, influence, and probable future of those who are designated criminals by the consensus of the people's voices, leaving to a more enlightened time the deeper probing for causes and a more accurate and just classification. Said in another way—while doing all we can to secure that deeper probing and that more just classification, we, as practical and humane men and women, have to face a very near and vital issue, What shall we do with, what shall we do for, how shall we guard ourselves against, those individuals whom public opinion and the law agree in classing as criminals as anti-social beings? We believe there will be an almost incalculable diminution in the number of these social offenders in the "sweet by-and-by," when there is more justice, more liberty

*Read at Dinner of Sunrise Club, Dec. 9, 1901.

Per HX37
3rd ser.
V.5
1901/02
no.49

among men, when War has sheathed his dripping sword, but we are living in the Now, and it is with the conditions of this day, not of the Twenty-fifth century that we must deal. So long as there is a great difference of opinion regarding monopoly, wastefulness, paternalism, and war, so long as the people are herded into parties on such issues, so long as political campaigns are fought to determine which view shall prevail—the affirmative or the negative as to the unwisdom or criminality of monopoly, or paternalism, or war—so long will it be impossible to dispassionately and profitably discuss these matters as parts of the criminal problem. We must continue to regard them as general sociological problems, concerning which equally earnest and good men and women may differ. So long as this wide disagreement persists, each person can present his or her view and the arguments in support of it, but until the controlling forces in society agree that a given act inveighed against by one or a hundred of us is a crime, an anti-social act, we can do nothing.

In other words, there are two stages in the study and treatment of crimes and criminals. In the first stage, we have to determine what is crime and who are criminals. In the second stage—having named our crimes and found our criminals—we proceed to discuss the questions, What shall we do with these criminals? How shall we stop the commission of these crimes? Manifestly, we can not ask these questions in other than an academic way as regards the deeds of monopolists, of wasters of nature's riches, of paternal moralists, of warring nations. We have not yet educated the moving forces in society to look upon these actions as crimes, upon their doers as criminals.

Thus it comes to pass that I wish you tonight to confine your attention and remarks to the second stage of criminal study. Let us leave out of consideration for this time all partisan contentions as to what are crimes and who are criminals and take cognizance only of those delinquencies about which there is practically no disagreement. Even when thus restricted, the subject is altogether too extensive and involved to be settled in a hundred years of serious and unimpassioned consideration.

There is substantial agreement that non-national killing is murder, is anti-social, is a crime; that non-legalized rape is a most serious offense; that arson, that train-wrecking, that kidnaping, are atrocious wrongs; that theft, in its various forms, is a grave denial of the toiler's right to the products of his toil. No political parties exist to defend these actions; no political campaigns are conducted with these for issues. The race, as we know it here, has reached practical agreement that all these are anti-social acts, are crimes, and that the perpetrators are not mere political heretics, are not simply misdemeanants, but are criminals. As regards these actions, then, we are in the second stage of the study of criminology. Now we may legitimately ask, What shall be done with these offenders? What shall we do to reduce their capacity for harm, to protect other individuals against them, to reform them, to prevent other men and women being affected for evil by their example?

Having indicated the parts of the great social problem which it is not my intention to attempt to examine here and now, having shown, in the shortest possible way, the offenses which the people of our day and country generally agree in classing as criminal, having accepted as proper subjects of study those individuals whose anti-social acts are universally condemned, and without going "behind the returns" to ask what sort of lives these persons might have led in a different society, I recur to and repeat the real question of this hour, How shall we act toward these offenders against the property, persons, and lives of others?

I have to confess to you that I do not know, that I do not pretend to know. My purpose is to counsel with you as serious, humane, candid men and women. Every scheme proffered as a solution proves, on fair and full examination, to, be no solution, or, at best, but a partial solution of some small part of the problem. There are so many factors to be taken into account, so many moral, economic, psychological, and passional elements to be considered and weighed, that, so far, it has been found impossible to reach a satisfactory conclusion, even a half-way or a merely tentative, conclusion.

Even should we narrow this discussion still more by leaving out all reference to crimes caused by economic wrongs and ignorance of world statesmanship, and even should we ignore the "labor" difficulty found in the maintenance and employment of prisoners, and so find ourselves facing only the difficulties presented by the crimes of violence springing from envy, jealousy, revenge, and other passions, and crimes such as embezzlement, forgery, malfeasance, and the like, which are inspired by greed and avarice, by gambling on a large scale, by extravagance and love of display, we should still be at our wits' end to find a way to be at once effective in defense against and consistent and humane in our treatment of criminals.

Contrasting the present with the past, we see that enormous gain has been made in the direction of humanity in the treatment of social offenders. Even the worst prisons and the horrible convict camps of some of the states are almost immeasurably better than the best prisons of past centuries and of some countries today. Physical torture, using the word torture in its chief sense, has vanished except, perhaps, in sporadic cases, and in general prisoners are well fed and do not suffer from cold. There are exceptions, in some states and in some prisons in other states, but the strong and dominating tendency everywhere is toward the putting of all prisons on the level of the best.

But this is saying far less than we, with our rising ideals, wish we could say. What effect upon the future convicts have our methods of restraint and care? The man who comes out of prison—what chance has he to remain out for the rest of his life? How does the public look upon the convict? What reception does it accord to him when he again stands among free men? More particularly and pertinently, what do you and I say and do if we come into immediate contact with him in the concrete and the singular? What effect have the associations of the prison upon the first-term prisoner?

(Concluded next week.)

From the Socialistic Viewpoint.

In the editorial—"Socialism and Anarchy" published in Lucifer, No. 892, you did much to confirm a view that I have held for some time: That Anarchists are quite ignorant of the political doctrine known as Socialism.

The editorial was based upon an article from the "Chicago Chronicle" representing the Socialists of that city as resolving to take sides with the Anarchists against the forces now in control of society and declaring that this resolution showed the essential connection between Socialism and Anarchy.

The editor's remarks upon this article tending to endorsement of the idea of an essential connection between the two doctrines, as well as the inadequate definition of Socialism which he quotes, leave that doctrine of which I am an humble advocate very unfairly represented. It is my purpose to show that Anarchism and Socialism are essentially opposed to each other and that their followers cannot consistently work together save in fighting for some common right; such as freedom of speech or of the press—necessary to each for the propagation of their respective doctrines; and this I opine is the measure of the co-operation with Anarchists contemplated by the Socialists of Chicago.

Modern Socialism, according to Frederick Engels, one of the founders of the doctrine, is, in its essence, the direct product of the recognition, on the one hand, of the class antagonisms existing in the society of today, between proprietors and non-proprietors, between capitalists and wage-workers; on the other hand of the Anarchy existing in production.

Note that Engels considered the present industrial situation a condition of Anarchy for which Socialism was the remedy. Anarchy in industry is in direct opposition to Socialism in industry.

That Engels was right in calling the present capitalist methods of production Anarchy is fully proven by the article from the pen of Benj. R. Tucker, "The Goal of Anarchism," published in Lucifer No. 888. In this article it is clearly stated that Anarchy demands the competitive methods of production and distribution; methods which Socialists denounce as "planless production and industrial war," (see platform upon which Debs ran for president.)

Anarchists teach that all forms of oppression originate in and are maintained by the government or central organization of society. That to do away with government is to do away with most of the evils that afflict society.

Scientific Socialists teach that all political, religious and social institutions of a given period, find their origin and explanation, in the mode of production and exchange prevailing at that time. If this theory is correct then governments, or political institutions, cannot be the primary source of the evils complained of, since it is itself a product of a pre-existing cause viz., the economic system.

But the point of evident divergence between Socialism and Anarchy is in the methods they use to bring about their respective ideals of "Free Society" on the one hand and the "Co-operative Commonwealth" on the other.

The scientific Socialist has before him a clear definite policy which he follows year in and year out; that is to educate the workers to a knowledge of their rights and power, and to organize them into a class-conscious political party with which to capture the machinery of the government and with the power thus acquired, transform our industrial condition, from a capitalistic system, under which the despoiling of the worker is a necessity, to a collectivist system under which the worker would receive his entire product.

The Anarchist, on the contrary, will have nothing to do with political parties. He refuses to vote, and in many instances to serve on juries or perform other functions of citizenship. Refusing the use of the ballot-box by which peaceful changes in the policy of the country may be made he is left no recourse but to endure what he believes to be unjust, or vainly appeal to force. And as his hatred of authority is so great that he could not organize a rebellion (an army to be efficient must have unquestioning obedience of the rank and file to the leaders), individual assassination becomes his only active method of protesting against existing institutions. The result of such methods are too well known to call for comment here.

The Socialist cries to the workingman "The only real power you have is your power at the polls! Go to the ballot-box and vote your class interests!"

The Anarchist cries "Beware of the ballot-box! The election game is in the hands of your enemies and the dice are loaded!" Can there be any doubt which cry the capitalist would have the worker heed? If the workingman would only voluntarily eliminate himself from among the factors of political control it would save the capitalist a great deal of trouble by removing what is at present a perpetual menace to his position. But as the worker will not do this the capitalists are quietly devising schemes to relieve him of the burden of the ballot. Witness the suffrage restrictions lately enacted in the South.

To sum up—The economic ideal of Anarchists' "Free competition," is diametrically opposed to the economic ideal of Socialists—"The Co-operative Commonwealth." To achieve his ideal, the Anarchist seeks to destroy the political state. This very state will be the means, the instrument by which the Socialist will usher in the Co-operative Commonwealth. Seeking the abolition of the state Anarchists perform the duties of citizenship only under protest. Seeking to control the state Socialists gladly perform and urge others to perform the full duties of citizenship.

In conclusion I would urge Anarchists, and all other persons really desirous of understanding Scientific Socialism, to read "Socialism—Utopian and Scientific" by Frederick Engels. On page 76 of the cheap edition there is this consolation for the Anarchist: "The first act by virtue of which the state really constitutes itself the representative of the whole of society—the taking possession of the means of production in the name of society—this is, at the same time, its last independent act as a state. State interference in social relations become, in one domain after another, superfluous, and then dies out of itself; the government of persons is replaced by the administration of things, and by the conduct of processes of production. The state is not "abolished." It dies out.

"Socialism—Utopian and Scientific" can be obtained of Lucifer.

J. D. Wilhite.

Vallejo, Cal.

American Press-Writers' Association.

NOTES FOR THE WEEK ENDING DEC. 7.

Anti-vaccination has been the leading subject with the Press Writers this week, and Dr. R. S. Clymer has been the leading writer. His appearences on that line as reported this week have been in Rockland, (Mass.) "Free Press" Nov. 26; "Pioneer Press" Nov. 30; "Post Telegram" (Camden N. J.) Nov. 25; "New Democrat" (Belleville, Ill.) Nov. 30. T. J. Small, Geo. B. Wheeler, F. Wm. E. Cullingford and Francis B. Livesey appeared on the same line with Dr. Clymer in Camden, N. J. papers and W. C. Knowlton in the Gardner, (Mass.) "News" Nov. 25.

Hindsboro (Ill.) "News," Nov. 29, prints a two and a half column tribute to the memory of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Barnes from the pen of her bereaved husband Dr. J. C. Barnes. Dr. Barnes also got a good letter on Anarchism in the Chicago "Chronicle."

Mabel Gifford is heard from this week in the big "Cincinnati Enquirer" in defense of free land. Francis B. Livesey on Nov. 29 appeared in "Baltimore World" on Roosevelt and Anarchists and in the "Texas World" Nov. 30, on Czolgosz Denied a Christian Chance. There has also been much activity in other lines.

NEW MEMBERS.

181 c. Langston, Mrs. Laura J., Paonia, Delta Co., Colo.
182 c. de Crane, Mrs. Frederica A., Lake City, Iowa.
183 b. Griswold, L. DeWitt, Kingston, N. Y.
184 a. Evans, Frank C., Box 10, Denver, Colo.
185 a. Miller, Robert, 1133 24th. St. N. W. Washington, D. C.
186 b. Heymoolen, A., Verdi, Lincoln Co., Minn.

CORRECTIONS.

65 a. Gilbert, J. M. 407 S. Jefferson Ave., St. Louis, Mo.
92 a. Lewis, Albert P., 4 Roudlett Place, Roxbury, Mass.
127 c. Pepper, Mrs. Myra, 1329 East 16th. St., Kansas City, Mo.
155 c. Twitchell, E. H. Name withdrawn.

New members are coming in every day. Send all applications to,

A. C. Armstrong, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester Mass.

Are Interests of Employer and Employe Mutual?

"I have stood by the open excavation of the new underground railroad in New York City, looking at the men digging. They have told me they got $2 a day for fair days when the work could go on. Living is expensive in New York. These are not the submerged; they are the men of brawn and health. They are the 'labor.'

"I have gone through the corridors of the fashionable hotels at midnight hours and looked on the diners and winers, the evening dress of men and women, with liveried waiters obsequiously serving the viands of all lands.

"These are the 'employers.'

"Are the interests of the two classes mutual? Can easy-going optimism conjure up any relation between the two? Can any bridge span the chasm between them?

"When I go through our factories and see fine, able-bodied, dextrous, earnest men working nine hours every day and every year a lifetime through, fashioning the uncouth raw material of wood and metal and marble into house material, I ask myself, 'Will the "laborer" have any of these polished and luxurious appliances in the home of his family or will they only go into the houses of the well-to-do, the mansions of the rich, the "employer" class?' Are the interests of the laborer and the capitalist mutual in this work?

"I know full well that many will say that money payment settles the whole score; but even if that were so, is there any mutality when one makes and the other enjoys?"—Bishop Potter.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

896.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. ... If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Quote Fair, Socialists!

On last Sunday eve the writer of these lines listened to an earnest and eloquent address by one of the leading Socialist orators of Chicago, Thomas J. Morgan. His main contention seemed to be that there are but two classes of people in the world, Socialists and Anarchists. That our present and popular methods of doing business, by which the few exploit and rob the many, are the methods of Anarchy, while the ideal Co-operative Commonwealth, in which the worker gets all he earns and he who does nothing gets nothing, is the ideal of Socialism.

In this week's issue is found a somewhat extended article by J. D. Wilhite of California, in which the same ground is taken as to the meaning of terms, and in which article Anarchists generally and Lucifer's editor in particular, are charged with ignorance in regard to Socialism and Socialists. Frederick Engels is quoted by Mr. Wilhite as authority for the statement that "the present industrial situation is a condition of Anarchy, for which Socialism is the remedy."

* * *

Not as an Anarchist, or partisan of any kind, but simply as a lover of fairness, of justice and of truthfulness, I would say that while freely granting to Friends Morgan, Wilhite and Engels the right to use language in any way that pleases them, I still think it would be better to stick a little nearer to the original meaning of words, to say nothing of the usual or commonly accepted meanings. If these gentlemen choose to say that the natural color of the Ethiopian is WHITE and that of Caucasian BLACK, all right! We shall all know hereafter what they mean when they say black or white.

"Define your terms," said the great Voltaire, "else there's no use arguing."

But while freely admitting the right of all men to define terms to suit themselves I strenuously object to the very common practice of making your opponent say what he did NOT say, in order to gain a point—as when Friend Wilhite refers to the article in Lucifer entitled "The Goal of Anarchism" as proof "that Engels was right in calling the present capitalist methods of production Anarchy." Our correspondent did not say in so many words that "Anarchy demands the [present] competitive methods of production and distribution," but this is just what most readers, if not all, would infer from his reference.

In answer to the questions—asked by those who followed Warren and Proudhon,

Why all prices do not fall to labor cost?

Where is there any room for incomes acquired otherwise than by labor?

Why does the usurer, the receiver of interest, rent and profit exist?—Mr. Tucker says:

"The answer was found in the present one-sidedness of competition. It was discovered that capital had so manipulated legislation that unlimited competition is allowed in supplying productive labor, thus keeping wages down to the starvation point, or as near it as practicable; that a great deal of competition is allowed in supplying distributive labor, or the labor of the mercantile classes, thus keeping, not the prices of goods, but the merchant's actual profits on them, down to a point somewhat approximating equitable wages for the merchant's work; but that almost no competition at all is allowed in supplying capital, upon the aid of which both productive and distributive labor are dependent for their power of achievement, thus keeping the rate of interest on money and of house-rent and ground-rent at as high a point as the necessities of the people will bear.

* * *

Mr. Tucker then proceeds to show, as had been shown before by many of his predecessors, that it is not competition that causes those who do the hardest work to get the least reward for their labor, but the DENIAL of competition, the defeat of competition, through legislative interference with the equal right of all to a share of nature's opportunities—giving to a few what belongs to all.

In other words Mr. Tucker shows that it is the socialistic and partialistic features of political governments that produce the terrible inequalities—the pauperism and overwork on the one hand, and the superfluous wealth and idleness on the other.

If our readers care to see and read for themselves, they can find in the article The Goal of Anarchism, incondensed form but very clearly stated, how it is that competition is denied and defeated by the State-Socialistic laws in regard to money, land, trade (tariffs) and patents (monopoly of ideas.)

* * *

Speaking for myself alone, I see very little difference between the goal of Philosophic Anarchism and that of Scientific Socialism. They both mean

LIBERTY AND JUSTICE FOR ALL

and privileges for none.

In his lectures in Chicago last winter the most distinguished authority on modern Socialism—if there be such authority—Prof. Herron frequently said that to him "Socialism is not a goal but A ROAD;" and that goal, as I understood him, is Perfect Individual Liberty—which, as all know, is also the goal of Anarchism.

Out of the "fifty-seven kinds of Socialism" there is one only that to my mind leads to the Co-operative Commonwealth, and that is VOLUNTARY SOCIALISM.

Between Voluntary Socialism and Philosophic Anarchism there seems the difference 'twixt tweedledum and tweedledee, no more.

* * *

THE BALLOT-BOX.

Speaking of Anarchistic methods our critic says, "Refusing the use of the ballot-box, by which peaceful changes in the policy of the country may be made he is left no recourse but to endure what he believes to be unjust, or vainly appeal tof orce."

Did our Socialistic friends ever hear of the saying, The Pen is mightier than the Sword? The pen is but a symbol of the power of public opinion intelligently directed. It is his silent yet all-powerful engine that the entrenched hosts of despotism fear, far more than they fear cannon-balls, bayonets, dynamite bombs, cartridge boxes or ballot-boxes. So long as they can prevent the pen from getting in its work, so long as the masses of fighters with ballots or bullets can be prevented from reading the literature of Anarchism—the literature of liberty and justice, just so long the continuance of their power is assured—just so long the reign of official plunder and legalized murder will continue to curse mankind.

Logically then, sensibly then, the main care and effort of the Archons—the rulers in church and state—is expended in keeping the people ignorant, prejudiced and blinded as to the true aims and doctrines of Anarchists and Socialists.

If Anarchists and Socialists can be provoked or persuaded to take part in deeds of violence, or in the battles of the ballot-box, they then cease to be sources of terror to the ruling classes. If Anarchists and Socialists resort to violence the armies, the navies and the arsenals of the world are ready to crush them:—incidentally giving these armies and navies the needed excuse for drawing their pay from the working masses.

If Anarchists and Socialists vote and submit to the arbitrament of the ballot the Archists know full well that the game of voting is in their own hands, and if by any chance it should slip out of their hands they know they still have the armaments of the world to fall back on—as the western gambler when beaten at cards, draws his pistol, saying, "Gentlemen, here is a card that always wins!"

* * *

Has it ever been otherwise when the existence of the "State" itself has been threatened?

What is The State, anyway?

The French King struck it right when he said, "I am the State!"

That is, the state is simply the man or the men who administer the invisible, intangible thing called "the government," sometimes in accord with certain rules called "laws" or "constitutions"—mere figments of the brain with less substance than the BREATH of the men who make them—but often without these formalities, and in defiance of these formalities; as witness the doings of our present Post-office department!

In other words, and in still truer words, the state is simply

THE SPOILS OF OFFICE,

both the direct, the frank and the open spoils but still more the indirect, the partially concealed or wholly concealed spoils of office—the PRIVILEGES enjoyed by the rulers and their special friends, their unofficial pets and backers, together constituting, as they do, the "ruling classes."

* * *

Was not the historian Ridpath in the right when he wrote, "The iron jaws which close on the marrow bone of privilege were never known to relax their hold till broken?"

Has human history shown an instance to the contrary?

It will be asked, perhaps, why, if this is true, why do not the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties appeal to the cartridge-box when defeated at the ballot-box?

Ask us something HARD; this is too easy!

Simply because the spoils-of-office system is not threatened. Simply because these great parties are twins, each trying to outdo the other in loyalty to the government-of-man-by-man system, and each has a share in the spoils. But let a party calling itself the Socialistic Labor Party, or any such name, become strong enough to threaten the life of the spoils system by trying to substitute individual self-government, or the Co-operative Commonwealth, or any system that would mean the death of the authoritarian State—as our friend acknowledges the triumph of Socialism would mean, then if such new party were not met by enactments against treason, and by prisons and halters, and (if necessary to suppression) by cannon and bayonets—then the history of this old world would turn a leaf never turned before.

* * *

To sum up in few words:

The common interest, the common work, of both Socialists and Anarchists is the EDUCATIONAL one.

In order that this work be made efficient and thorough, free speech, free press and an untrammelled mail, are indispensable. Our common enemies, the ruling classes, are working night and day to deprive us of these indispensable means of showing to the world what Philosophic Anarchism and Scientific Socialism really mean. The utmost vigilance and diligence in regard to these citizen rights are therefore demanded of all who believe there is something better for humanity than to be tyrants, exploiters, robbers and murderers, on the one hand, or slaves, exploited, robbed and murdered, on the other.

* * *

Another work in common for Socialists and Anarchists is the work of showing how Individual Liberty and the Co-operative Commonwealth can both be achieved without resort to violence.

Whether accepting or rejecting the ballot-box, as a means of eliminating the capitalistic and monopolistic state, both Anarchists and Socialists agree that the work can be done without resort to cartridge-box, cannon, bayonet or dynamite bomb. Archists murder men, women and children by the thousands, every year, and little is said about it, but when a miscalled Anarchist at Buffalo kills one man, or when the police attack a peaceable meeting of Socialists at Chicago, and get worsted by a bomb thrown by some one unknown, then these Archists speak and act as though the right to kill is a Divine right delegated to them alone, and the whole land from ocean to ocean is filled with horror and righteous indignation at the barbarity and bloodthirstiness of all Anarchists and Socialists.

But "wisdom is justified of her children," saith the proverb. Let Philosophic Anarchists and Scientific Socialists be judged by their acts; judged by the same standards that equity shows should be applied to their slanderers, and let impartial posterity pronounce the verdict.

* * *

THE SOCIAL SIDE OF ANARCHISM.

The last paragraph in the article, "The Goal of Anarchism," to which our correspondent refers, reads as follows:

"Even in so delicate a matter as that of the relations of the sexes the Anarchists do not shrink from the application of their principle. They acknowledge and defend the right of any man and woman, or any men or women, to love each other for as long or as short a time as they can, will, or may. To them legal marriages and legal divorce are equal absurdities. They look forward to a time when every individual, whether man or woman, shall be self-supporting, and when each shall have an independent home of his or her own, whether it be a separate house or rooms in a house with others; when the love relations between these independent individuals shall be as varied as individual inclinations and attractions; and when the children born of these relations shall belong exclusively to the mothers until old enough to belong to themselves."

* * *

In this paragraph is briefly outlined the chief difference between Philosophic Anarchists and Socialists of all grades—with few exceptions. Anarchists demand free competition, untrammeled liberty, free opportunity—in mating for reproduction, as well as in all other phases of human relationship. They say to the Archons of church and state, "Hands off! Your touch is profanation. Give the children a chance to be born well, if born at all. Let every child be born of love and mutual respect, mutual desire. No more unwelcome children, no more unwelcome motherhood!"

Anarchists believe that under the rule of Liberty with Responsibility in sex-relations there would be less room for the claim—as made by a leading clergyman—that it is right that one man shall have fifty-times as much pay as other men, because of his superior natural ability. A few generations of natural selection—of free and responsible competition in the realm of reproduction, and the human type would approach the plane of perfection which we now see in the higher species of birds in a state of nature.

* * *

"Free Competition is diametrically opposed to the Co-operative Commonwealth," says Mr. Wilhite. I fail to see the truth of this statement. Free competition is quite consistent with voluntary co-operation. Under our improved methods of production—the result of competition more or less FREE—co-operation becomes a necessity, resulting, in the end, in the largest possible conception of voluntary co-operation—the Co-operative Commonwealth of the World!

How this is to be practicalized can only be hinted at in this article.

M. HARMAN.

Good Advice for Legislators.

Before the new administration in New York city is inaugurated, all the officials should read E. C. Walker's late pamphlet "Vice: Its Friends and Its Foes," and then forward the same to members of the legislature. This is probably the only perfectly sane treatise on the subject. The author has less to say about the foes of vice than about its friends, these latter being the promoters of purity crusades, prosecutors of fallen women, the opponents of divorce, and the rigid moralists generally. He notes that the downward career of girls generally begins with a seduction, and nearly all seductions that are such in fact are accomplished under promise of legal marriage; and in this way, we are brought to observe, marriage serves to bribe and corrupt virtue. I have not seen that point before, nor this presentation of the divorce question: "A person against whom a decree is issued (says our author) is forbidden to marry again because he went outside his home. Well, if he could not keep good when he had a wife, what power on earth or elsewhere, is going to make him a celibate for the rest of his life?" If he could not resist outside temptation with a wife to help him, will he resist it when freed from her restraining influence? If we did not know that Mr. Walker means well, we might be inclined to censure him for his criticism of approved methods of making bad matters worse, as also for soaking us with conundrums that have no answers.—Geo. B. Macdonald in Truth Seeker.

She "Behaved Like a Lady"!

A little girl from an East End slum was invited with others to a charity dinner given at a great house in the West End of London. In the course of the meal the little maiden startled her hostess by propounding the query:

"Does your husband drink?"

"Why, no," replied the astonished lady of the house.

After a moment's pause the miniature querist proceeded with the equally bewildering questions:

"How much coal do you burn? What is your husband's salary? Has he any bad habits?"

By this time the presiding genius of the table felt called upon to ask her humble guest what made her ask such strange questions.

"Well," was the innocent reply, "mother told me to behave like a lady, and when ladies call at our house they always ask mother those questions."—Clipping from an English Paper.

VARIOUS VOICES.

R. O. Stoll, Eau Claire, Wis.:—I thank you for a sample copy of Lucifer. Though not in sympathy with the ideas you advocate, I ardently support freedom of press and intelligent investigation of all phases of sociology. For the enclosed 25 cents please send me Dr. Foote's "Borning Better Babies."

E. L. Small, No. Truro, Mass.:—Boston is in the agony of a vaccination panic, as notice enclosed slips. The "Post" established a free vaccination station at which more than 3,000 men, women, and children were vaccinated during the three days it was open. I notice my subscription is nearly expired. Enclosed find $1 for renewal.

A. B. Bennett, Norwalk, Conn.:—Your brave little paper still comes to me, and I am sending you $1.50 on subscription and to pay for pamphlets. I think Lucifer is the best, most progressive and truly patriotic paper now published and should be read by every liberal-minded man and woman. Your late editorials are alone worth a year's subscription.

Philip G. Peabody, Boston, Mass.:—Please send me ten copies each of Nos. 893 and 894. I enclose $1 in payment. Please use the balance for sending out samples where you think they may be appreciated. I am going to use these copies for "missionary work" to try to get you some more subscribers. Every number of Lucifer delights me. When I graduated from college (Columbia College, New York), I was an ignorant, narrow minded young man. Lucifer has improved my mind—and I speak carefully—more than my four years in Columbia college.

Lucifer's Leaders.

For the convenience of our friends, the most important articles recently appearing in Lucifer are listed below.

1. Another National Tragedy. The Medical Doctor Question. Also, Marriage Legal and Free.—"When Love is Liberty and Nature Law."
2. The Lesson of the Hour—William McKinley and Leon Czolgosz. Also, Anarchism and the Trusts, by Tucker.
3. Sentenced to Die. Also, Two Epochs in Man's Progress, by Proudhon.
4. Free Unions and Parental Responsibility. Also, Individualistic Anarchism Opposed to Force.
5. Archism versus Anarchism. The Social Side of Anarchism. Also, Freedom in Love, by Heinzen.
6. Government Against the People. Also, the Goal of Anarchism.—Tucker.
7. Cowardly Murder—Assassination and Electrocution. Also, Ruinous Effects of Slave Labor, by Rachel Campbell.
8. The Nation's Crime. Also, Purifying the Tenements.—Walker.
9. Anarchy in the Family. Also, To Mothers.
10. Socialism and Anarchism. Also, Thou Shalt not Kill, by Tolstoi.
11. The Doctors and the Laity—The Cases of McKinley and Garfield. Delusion and Crime of Vaccination. Defense Against Torture and Murder.

Order by number. Three cents each; eleven for 25 cents.

Lucifer's "Coming of Age" double number will be sent on receipt of five cents.

LUCINDA B. CHANDLER will address the Society of Anthropology—913 Masonic Temple, Sunday Dec. 22, 3:30 p. m., Subject—Humanity.

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Are you wondering what holiday present you shall select for your friend? What more appropriate than a well-chosen book, which may be treasured by its recipient not only for the sake of the giver, but for the gift's intrinsic worth? Here are a few to which we would call your special attention:

DAWN-THOUGHT, by J. Wm. Lloyd, is one of the most appropriate gift-books that could be chosen. Printed in Old-Style Antique type, red-letter side-titles and chapter-initials, with portrait of author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1, and 50 cents.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID is a dainty little gift booklet, also by J. Wm. Lloyd. For description see our book-list.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY, by Edward Carpenter, is a well-printed, daintily-bound booklet, written in the author's well-known charming style. Price 25 cents.

For the young nothing could be better than SCIENCE IN STORY; or Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. The interest is held through every one of the 240 pages, and "grown-up" children too, will laugh over the funny adventures of Sponsie, and with Sammy learn of the wonders of physiological science. Profusely illustrated. Five volumes in one, cloth $2; Five volumes separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents a volume.

Another splendid story for the young is KORADINE, by Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Illustrated. 125 pages. Extra Levant cloth. Price $1.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS, two of Ibsen's best-known plays, are bound together in a well-printed handsomely-bound volume, suitable for a gift-book. Price, 75 cents.

A charming present to your friend to whom the occult is interesting would be BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: THE MYSTERY OF SEX; by Mary Hanford Ford. Well printed in large, clear type, on heavy paper and bound in Levant cloth. Price, $1

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE, by William Platt, is another pretty gift-book. Is handsomely printed and bound, and contains two stories: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Price, 75 cents.

THE BALLAD OF READING GAOL, by C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde) is an artistically printed and bound work in two editions—paper, 10 cents; cloth, $1.

The presentation edition of Paine's AGE OF REASON would be a beautiful present for any friend who is interested in Freethought. See description in our book list.

Others in our list which would make acceptable presents are: A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY; HILDA'S HOME; MARTYRDOM OF MAN; RIGHTS OF WOMEN; THE WOMAN WHO DID; WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE, and WOMAN, IN THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE. For prices and descriptions of these see last page of this issue.

We have two copies of A PERSIAN PEARL and Other Essays, by Clarence S. Darrow. This is the edition published at the Roycroft Shop, and each book is numbered. The essays are A Persian Pearl; The Skeleton in the Closet; Walt Whitman; Realism in Literature and Art; and Robert Burns. The book is very handsomely printed and bound, and is now "out of print." Who wants these? Price, $2 each.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Personal: An experienced nurse will take into her own home an invalid or elderly person requiring special attention. The best of care given. Pleasant room, and excellent board. Best of references. Address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER. Snowville, Va.

Wanted: Children to board and educate, by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: A woman or man with a capital of $250 as partner to conduct a legitimate mail order business and also a job printing office. Must be a believer in sex freedom. HENRY C. HANSON. Aurora, Ill. 165 North Ohio St.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 450 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Somerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. S. H. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most gendeep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most gendeep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most gende

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 619 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth. $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists: The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitsGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 230 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lea. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
f #808
v.5, no.50
3rd ser
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 50. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, DEC. 26, E. M. 301. [C. E. 1901.] WHOLE No. 897

THE PERFECT STATE.

Where is the perfect state
Early most blest, and late
Perfect and bright?
'Tis where no palace stands
Trembling on shifting sands
Morning and night.
'Tis where the soil is free,
Where, far as eye can see,
Scattered o'er hill and lane,
Homesteads abound;
Where clean and broad and sweet
(Market, square, lane and street, Belted by leagues of wheat)
Cities are found.
Where is the perfect state
Early most blest, and late
Gentle and good?
'Tis where no lives are seen
Huddling in lanes unclean,
Crying for food;
'Tis where the home is pure,
'Tis where the bread is sure,
'Tis where the wants are fewer,
And each want fed;
Where plenty and peace abide,
Where health dwells heavenly-eyed,
Where in nooks beautified
Slumber the dead.
Where is the perfect state
Unvexed by wrath and hate,
Quiet and just?
Where to no form or creed
Fettered are thought and deed,
Reason and trust?
'Tis where the great free mart
Broadens, while from its heart
Forth the great ships depart
Blown by the wind;
'Tis where the wise men's eyes,
Fixed on the earth and skies,
Seeking for signs, devise
Good for mankind.

—Robert Buchanan.

The Fruits of Liberty.

Ariosto tells a pretty story of a fairy who, by some mysterious law of her nature, was condemned to appear at certain seasons in the form of a foul and poisonous snake. Those who injured her during the period of her disguise were forever excluded from participation in the blessings which she bestowed. But to those who, in spite of her hideous aspect, pitied and protected her, she afterwards revealed herself in the beautiful and celestial form which was natural to her, accompanied their steps, granted all their wishes, filled their houses with wealth, made them happy in love and victorious in war.

Such a spirit is liberty. At times she takes the form of a hateful reptile. She grovels, she hisses, she stings. But woe to those who in disgust shall venture to crush her! And happy are those who, having dared to receive her in her degraded and frightful shape, shall at length be rewarded by her in the time of her beauty and glory.

There is only one cure for the evils which newly acquired freedom produces, and that cure is freedom. When a prisoner first leaves his cell, he cannot bear the light of day, he is unable to discriminate colors, or recognize faces. The remedy is, to accustom him to the rays of the sun.

The blaze of truth and liberty may at first dazzle and bewilder nations which have become half blind in the house of bondage. But let them gaze on, and they will soon be able to bear it. In a few years men learn to reason. The extreme violence of opinions subsides. Hostile theories correct each other. The scattered elements of truth cease to contend, and begin to coalesce. And, at length, a system of justice and order is educed out of the chaos.

Many politicians of our time are in the habit of laying it down as a self-evident proposition, that no people ought to be free till they are fit to use their freedom. The maxim is worthy of the fool in the old story, who resolved not to go into the water till he had learned to swim. If men are to wait for liberty till they become wise and good in slavery, they may indeed wait forever.—Macaulay.

DEAR OLD LUCIFER:—The above is a copy of Lesson 16, page 162, of the National Fifth Reader, published by Silver Burdett & Co. (New York, Boston, and Chicago). These lessons are taught in our common schools today, hence our common schools cannot be altogether bad. J. F. MILES.

Crime and Criminals; or, the Problems Presented by Anti-Social Acts.*

BY E. C. WALKER.

(Concluded.)

The modern rationalist, the man of science, the student of anthropology, of psychology, realizes, in general terms of perception and admission, that every organism is the resultant of antecedent and contemporaneous forces which are operative outside itself as well as formative within itself; he knows that men are what their heredity, their early education and racial and climatic surroundings, and their present environment compel them to be. He knows that, given the same factors of formation and direction that the criminal had, he himself would be a criminal. The scientific man, I say, perceives this truth as a general, or abstract, proposition, but he does not always remember it when he is confronted by crime and the criminal in the concrete. He is sometimes no more ready than is the untaught rural lyncher to repudiate the idea of "punishment," to forego the gratification of vengeance.

It seems to me that there are six important rules of action which society should adopt in its handling of anti-social individuals:

a. Never for a moment should the offender be led by the

*Read at Dinner of Sunrise Club Dec. 9, 1901.

Per
9-1937
3rd ser,
v.5
1901/02
no.50

actions or the utterances of the authorities or of teachers to believe that he is being "punished," in the sense that vengeance is being inflicted, that the treatment meted out to him is being made to "fit the crime," that, to illustrate, he is struck in order that he may suffer by a blow as the one he assailed suffered from his blows, on the savage principle of "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth."

b. No irremediable penalties should be imposed, such as death or mutilation, because human senses are fallible in their testimony, because witnesses may falsify, and the man adjudged guilty today tomorrow may be proven to be innocent. There are other reasons, which I shall refer to later.

c. No penalties, either of fine or imprisonment, should be inflicted when such punishment is likely to cause deprivation and suffering to those who are dependent upon the labor of the offender. The laws and the prison regulations should be such that the prisoner, if able-bodied, can earn sufficient to pay for his maintenance while in prison and to keep his dependents from suffering. He should also be enabled to save something with which to begin again the struggle of life when released. But this must be considered in connection with the next rule of action.

d. The prisoner should be taught always that society has but three objects in view in its dealings with him—the protection of uninvasive persons, restitution to his victim or victims, and his own return to the world as a self-sustaining, self-respecting individual. Of course, the prisoner cannot be so taught unless these are the objects of society.

e. While in prison the man or woman should not be idle, mentally, physically, or emotionally. You cannot make men and women better unless they are occupied with something in which they are interested. And all prisoners, at prescribed times, should be cheered, humanized, invigorated, inspired and kept sane by the unwatched visits of those who wish to see them and to whom they are attached.

f. The people should be told the truth, that they cannot be excused from responsibility if they do not give released men a chance to redeem themselves, that these men are the products of efficient causes, just as is the man who was demented but is now sane, just as is the man who is physically deformed. If these sufferers are to be hooted at and shunned, as the savage or the untrained child hoots at or shuns the alien, the cripple, or the unconventionally dressed person, there is no hope for the released prisoner but in a return to crime and then to the shelter of the prison, and the criminal problem is indeed and forever insoluble.

I have said that it seems to me these six rules of action should guide the authorities and the people, but I know that each of these proposed principles of conduct is open to a multitude of objections, that the cases easily falling under each rule are no more numerous than the apparent exceptions, that in the way of the application of each there are mountains of difficulties, and this is why I said in the beginning that I am not here to enthusiastically propagate a theory, to undoubtingly offer a panacea; why I said later that I do not know what is to be done, that I come only to counsel with others.

Now let us glance a little more in detail at these six proposed rules of conduct: It is objected to a and b that often men commit offenses which are best punished by bodily chastisement, as wife-whipping or petty theft. It is argued, and truly, that fining does little good as a deterrent in the case of the wife-whipper and merely takes food out of the mouths of the wife and children, while imprisonment has the same effect. It is said, too, that the wife is likely to get another beating in punishment so soon as the husband returns from prison, while, on the other hand, so salutary is the remembrance of the whipping, that he is far less apt to resort to violence again in revenge for her complaint than he would be had that complaint resulted in a less sharp punishment. That is to say, the whipping is a better deterrent than fining or imprisonment, does not take from the man money that should go to the support of the wife and children, and does not impose upon the people the burden o his support, as would imprisonment. To this argument comes the rejoinder that physical chastisement is degrading, alike to the receiver of it and to all who have to do with its infliction or witness or learn of its infliction. This is unquestionable, but it might be said again that those who impose fines and those who have prisoners in their care are not observed to become refined and elevated by their vocation. It is not possible that they should be, so long as the existing ideals are in vogue. The moral tone of the physician or the attendant in a hospital for the insane is not necessarily degraded This is because we are coming to take a scientific, a sane, view of the subject of insanity. In the ages when an insane person was looked upon as simply a tenement for devils those who in any way had charge of him were degraded by that work even more than are the keepers in the worst of our prisons today. The lesson is obvious.

Opponents of capital punishment encounter objections that cannot be laughed out of court, objections which must be taken and carefully weighed in the scales against the considerations that impel us to antagonize the infliction of the death penalty. What shall be done, it is asked, in the case of a man who deliberately sets fire to a crowded tenement house because he wishes to collect insurance or has a grudge against the owner of the building or the lessor or the janitor or a tenant, thus putting in deadly peril the lives of scores or perhaps hundreds of persons who have never injured him? Here was the Sandmere, on Eighth avenue, the other night—set fire to and the vestibule doors carefully fastened to keep out the firemen as long as possible. This was not a murder, or an attempted murder, of sudden passion, a blow struck in moment, but a carefully planned deed of wholesale destruction of property and life, in intention. Or here is a tramp or a discharged farm-hand or a neighbor who sets fire to the barns where are scores of horses and cattle and other animals, which die a cruel death in the flames. Or here is a man who wrecks a passenger train and maims and kills many persons, and this for purposes of robbery or to get revenge on the road or an employe or a passenger. What is society to do with these men if they are apprehended? Is not the prolongation of their lives too great a risk and too onorous an expense, taking into consideration the cruel ruthlessness of their natures? Can they be transformed into useful and harmless members of the social body? We kill the rabid dog or cow without question, though they are less dangerous than such men and though they are surely and completely the products of antecedent causes and present environments. It is answered that while we are unable to reason with and apply moral suasion to the animals named, we can reason with and apply moral suasion to the incendiaries and train-wreckers. But, in the words of Dr. Frederick R. Marvin, is it not true that "there are paths of development behind the ape and there are men who tread them"? The difference seems to be that while, as a rule, we kill the rabid dog in a panic, but without attaching moral blame to it, we kill the men in anger with all possible opprobrium, sometimes deliberately by law, and sometimes in a frenzy, by mob action, with accompaniments, frequently, of an atrocious cruelty not dreamed of in the case of the dog. We think the dog has no mind and no will to do wrong, while the men have minds and they will to do wrong. This is a survival of the ancient delusion of an uncaused, a free will. Still the question remains, What is it best to do with these exceptionally destructive men? On what grounds shall we take the risk of their continued living? I see but two, the first of which is found under b, and is that we should inflict no irremediable penalties, lest we put beyond rescue an innocent life, and the second of which is that the deliberate taking of human life is a bad example for society to set and tends to keep alive the thirst for blood, especially in all who have immediately to do with the taking of human life by law.

Coming to c and d, we are confronted with Labor's strenuous denial of the right of prisoners to be engaged in productive labor. But I maintain there should not be an idle man or woman in any prison or reformatory, that is, if he or she is physically able to work, and that the rights of outside laborers are to be safeguarded in ways that will not utterly ruin the lives of the unfortunates who are behind the bars, just as I maintain that the wives of undeveloped men are to be protected by giving them more liberty, especially liberty to get away from their lash-wielding masters, instead of trying to protect them by putting a lash into the hands of a constable for application to the backs of the husbands. Idleness in prison, even more than idleness elsewhere, is destructive to moral, mental, and physical fiber and is worse for society than would be the summary execution of every man sentenced in court. And the work done in prisons must be done because it is a pleasure to work, not because work is supposed to be inflicted as a punishment. There are fewer men than we think who do not wish to do something, and the task of the men in charge of our prisons is to find in every case, if they can, what work the prisoner prefers to do, what work he is really interested in, and then provide that work for him, if possible. There is not another thing that can be done which will be so effective as this in turning loose in society men who are better fitted to lead useful lives and who will be more desirous of leading such lives than they were when arrested. Writing on this subject, Elbert Hubbard says:

"Let us determine that we want to increase the honest productive capacity of every person sent to prison, that we are no longer to be satisfied with the imposition of a task as a form of degradation, and that making a better man of the convict is not to be permitted to make a poorer man of the outside worker, and we shall surely find the ways and means whereby to put our determination into effect. The rights of the 'free laborer' are not to be secured by further brutalizing the convict and by driving hope of better days out of his heart, but by wresting from the monopolist and the despot the privileges and powers which they have usurped."

I said under d that one of the three objects society should have in mind in dealing with anti-social persons is restitution. Vengeance is of the savage, and we should be done with it. The punishment of one to deter others from the commission of like offenses may be of some value sometimes, but it bears too close a resemblance to vicarious atonement, and its beneficent results are so hard to find when one is in a hurry, that we may be pardoned if we fail to see in it so much importance as many sociologists think it possesses. Restitution, however, is affirmative, and while I am very far from claiming that its application is possible in even a majority of instances, I am inclined to think it should receive far more serious consideration than it has from moralist, lawmaker, and judge. Where is the economy, political or other, in sending a man to prison for a year because he has stolen property to the value of five dollars? The punishment is out of all proportion to the amount of plunder, and teaches the offender nothing except hatred for the power that is robbing him far more than he robbed the merchant or householder. He will come out of prison with about every chance in favor of his becoming a criminal in perpetuity or a homeless vagabond. But if society said to him, "See here, Brown, this is not a fair deal; Smith did not owe you anything and you should not have taken his property. Pay him five dollars and deposit the cost of collection and you may go about your business, and may it be a fairer business than this last enterprise of yours." My impression is that this would be fully as effective, to say the least, in restraining Brown from further depredations and in deterring others as would his imprisonment for a year, and it would be worlds cheaper for society, besides leaving Brown free to work for the support of his family. But, says the critic, suppose Brown has no money to pay Smith and the cost of collection? That would mean that to the cost of collection would be added the item for his keep while he was earning the money. The important consideration is that it would be impressed upon him that society was not seeking vengeance, but trying to secure restitution to the wronged person. A man can not restore the life he has taken, do you say? True, but may it not be that he can, to some extent, take the place of his victim as a provider for the helpless? And if he steals much, disposes of what he has taken, and is too old to make much, if any, restitution through labor for the robbed, I do not see that the principle of restitution is invalidated through his inability to give back what he has taken. In the case of the murderer, no one is benefited by his execution, save the tax-payer, and I doubt if even he is in the long run, while setting the murderer to help support the children of his victim is better for them than the legal killing of the murderer and may at once give back to the tax-payer a part at least of the expense incident to keeping the murderer alive, by reducing the tax-payer's bill for the support of pauper children.

I am not unaware that our courts today often make the return of stolen property the basis of clemency of the prisoner, but I do not think, so far as my observation goes, that the judge takes enough pains to impress the fact and its relation to the principle upon the understanding of the culprit. And assuredly the principle is not applied in the case of other crimes than larceny.

American Press-Writers' Association.

Anti-vaccination continues to come uppermost in the Press-Writers' field of activity. Belleville (Ill.) "Advocate" and "News Democrat" Dec. 2 printed two column articles from Dr. R. S. Clymer; on Dec. 6 a well-known Chicago Press-Writer follows up the opening, and on Dec. 11 Dr. Clymer again appears in both papers, challenging the Belleville doctors to discuss the subject of compulsory vaccination with him in the papers of Belleville. Philadelphia "Times," Dec. 8, prints a letter from W. C. Knowlton in reply to an editorial belittling the anti-vaccinators. Beverly (Mass.) "News," Dec. 3, and Boston "Banner of Light," Dec. 14, print able articles against vaccination.

"Texas World" (Houston, Tex.), Nov. 30, prints an article by Francis B. Livesey, entitled "Czolgosz Denied a Christian Chance," that aroused considerable sympathy and no criticism when it appeared in the Philadelphia "Bulletin," where Livesey is now carrying on a lively debate with several opponents on the public school question. Livesey also appeared in the Baltimore "World" Nov. 29 with a letter on Roosevelt and Anarchists. In Rockland (Mass.) "Independent," Dec. 6, Edward W. Chamberlain has "Some More Most." The Boston "Traveler" has printed fine letters from T. J. Small, Kinghorn Jones, A. A. Orcutt, Francis B. Livesey, Cassius V. Cook, and W. A. Hutcheson in defense of the unpopular cause. Dr. Immanuel Pfeiffer has been so favorably impressed with the work of the Press-Writers he has not only joined but placed the name of every member on the free list of his publication, "Our Home Rights," as a compliment to the association.

NEW MEMBERS.

187 f. Lloyd, Warren, North Platte, Neb.
188 c. Dudgeon, R. T., Cane Valley, Ky.
189 c. Brown, J. O., Box 399, Wheaton, Minn.
190 f. Pfeiffer, Dr. Immanuel, Room 6, 247 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

CORRECTIONS.

138 d. Rogers, Joseph, (Lower) Bingham Canyon, Utah.
158 c. Varleyl, Gerrad, 247 W. 25th. St., New York, N. Y.

A. C. ARMSTRONG, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester, Mass.

Anti-Vaccination and Anti-Vivisection.

Lucifer has given much space to a consideration of these subjects, recently, and much interest has been expressed by our readers. To those who wish to see a more exhaustive examination of the questions, we would recommend the following named pamphlets:

"Personal Experiences of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries." By Philip G. Peabody. With an appendix by Robert G. Ingersoll. Price reduced to 15 cents.

"Vivisection," by Albert Leffingwell, M. D. A reproduction of the paper under this heading, which originally appeared in Lippincott's Magazine." Also, "Does Vivisection Pay?" A paper by Dr. Leffingwell appearing in "Scribner's Magazine." These two valuable contributions to the literature of vivisection appear in No. 1378 "Lovell's Library." Price reduced to 15 cents.

"Vaccination a Gigantic Crime. The greatest fraud ever perpetrated upon the human race." By Samuel Darling. Price reduced to 15 cents.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton St. Chicago.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

897.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. f you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Looking Backward.

In its annual revolution round its parent, the Sun, our earth has once more reached the point of shortest days and longest nights, for the inhabitants of its northern half. That is, we now have arrived at our winter Solstice, or Sun-Stand. Tomorrow the days will begin to lengthen and the nights to shorten.

Looking backward over the record made by the year just closing—the first year of the new century, according to popular but very unscientific methods of reckoning time—we see many things that naturally cause us to pause in our race for wealth, for honors and for sensuous gratifications generally and to ask as did the Congressman,

"Where are we at"?

What have we as a nation—or as a branch of the great Caucasian division of the human race, done to show our superiority over other and less favored divisions, tribes, communities or nations of people?

The events of the year just closing are of a nature so exceptional as to mark them epoch-making events in the world's history. Prominent among these phenomenal or record-breaking events is the attitude assumed, the position assumed, by the United States of America as a first-class military and diplomatic power among the nations of the world.

Hitherto the policy of this government has been that of non-interference with the affairs of Europe, Asia or Africa, contenting itself with the affairs of America proper, and especially with the countries thereof called republics—the enforcement of the "Monroe doctrine," which in substance is that if the nations of Europe and Asia will keep their hands off the territory now claimed by the Republics of the New World the United States will not meddle with the affairs of the Old World, so-called.

* * *

Not that the change of policy from non-interference to interference in the affairs of the old world was BEGUN by the Washington government during the year 1901, but that an event occurred during that year—just one event, that fixed upon us the policy of interference, the policy of EXPANSION in the territory of the eastern hemisphere, as no other event had ever done.

I need not say that that event was the tragical death of WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Previous to the sixth of September last the absorption of the Philippines as part of our national domain could hardly be said to be the fixed policy of our political leaders. Not only Democratic politicians but many of the ablest Republicans as well, were strenuously opposed to the policy of imperial expansion on the opposite side of the globe, but the "martyrdom" of the head of the administration that had made itself responsible for the new departure seems to have crushed the spirit of the opposition and COMPELLED, so to speak, the complete abandonment of the policy inaugurated by President Washington in his Farewell Address to the American people.

* * *

Since the foregoing lines were written I have read the protest of Mr. McCall in the National Congress against the passage of a law taxing the Filipinos to support the government that enslaves them. As a brief review of our dealings with these people for the past three years I find it so just and truthful that instead of inserting my own review I quote his, in part:

"What have we seen in the last three years? We have witnessed the solemn farce of four or five very estimable American gentlemen sitting as a Legislature over 10,000,000 people of whose language, customs, conditions, and existence they were probably ignorant four years ago. We have witnessed the spectacle of an American army numbering over 70,000 men engaged in conquering a people struggling for independence. We have seen our highest court apparently forgetful that this nation was established as a protest against the power of one people to tax permanently another people, declaring Congress exempt from the constitutional limitation upon the great central power of taxation, and thus opening the way for autocratic government, and for the exploitation of subject peoples.

"We have seen ourselves take a position highly inconsistent in point of justice with the Monroe doctrine, when, demanding that the governments of the overcrowded eastern continent shall keep their hands off from this hemisphere, we ourselves, with hundreds of millions of untilled acres, and vast untouched forests, seize at one stroke a thousand islands in the other hemisphere. . . . It was a policy which has been followed by the destruction by us of tens of thousands of innocent brown men who had never done us any harm and who were lured by our own glorious history to fight for their freedom and their homes. It was a policy, too, as a result of which thousands upon thousands of the sons of American mothers will sleep their last sleep upon the banks of the Rio Grande and the Pasig.

"I know it is said that it will give us commerce. Our trade with those islands appears today to have reached the magnificent proportions of the trade of a corner grocery, but if it should promise to bring to this country all the wealth of the Indies, I believe that our national honor, the preservation in their integrity of republican institutions, our future peace and safety—every dictate of interest and justice—demand that we shall now so shape our steps that we may return again to the God of our fathers."

* * *

All in vain! The only answer to this eloquent and truthful appeal to their sense of shame was the swift passage of the Philippine revenue bill, by an overwhelming majority of the House of Representatives, the popular branch of our national legislature. This trumpet-toned call to halt in our headlong career towards imperialism and despotism, seems to have excited expressions of derision rather than of serious consideration. Of Republicans only five, headed by the man from Massachusetts from whose ringing impeachment I have just quoted, were found voting against a measure that will long be remembered as part of the infamous record of the present session of the American Congress.

* * *

As already indicated, the most notable event, the event most tremendous in its consequences upon our political institutions that has occurred during the year now closing, is the death of William McKinley, by the hand of Leon Czolgosz. Not that the effects of this tragical event will be at once apparent to the eye of the average observer of human affairs. The effect, the far-reaching influence, of the tragical death of the Nazarene and of his immediate apostles, in shaping the history of the world, was not apparent till some centuries after these tragedies occurred. Not till the Roman Pontiff became king of kings, lord of lords and bishop of bishops, in the political and religious life of Europe, Western Asia and Northern Africa, did the full significance of Christian martyrdom make itself known, and though shorn of much of its political power the Christian church—the result of Christian martyrdom, not of intellectual power or prestige—still remains the most impassable of all barriers to human progress, over nearly the whole of Europe and America.

* * *

And so, likewise, will it probably be with the martyrdom of William McKinley. If this man had been permitted to serve out his second term as president of the United States he would probably have retired to private life with little more of honor or lasting distinction than had Grover Cleveland or Benjamin Harrison. The policies with which his administration had become identified would have stood in history upon their own merits, and might, perhaps, have been reversed during the incumbency of his successor in office.

In passing, however, it may be said that while as a man of genius or of culture William McKinley was probably not above the average American chief magistrate, in one particular he was eminent if not pre-eminent, and that is in the possession of TACT. As was said of Louis the Fourteenth of France, often called the "Grand Monarch," namely, that while he was not a great statesman; not a great captain; not a great philosopher nor great man in any sense, he was in pre-eminent degree a great KING. He understood kingcraft as few kings had ever done.

In like manner it can truthfully be said of McKinley: He was not a great warrior; not a great statesman; not a great philosopher or great MAN in any sense, but he was, in one respect at least, a great PRESIDENT. He understood PRESIDENT-CRAFT. He understood how to prevent party strife, how to head off the factional spirit that so often disrupts and defeats political parties in the hour of victory.

* * *

But the fates that preside over human destinies—if there be such fates—did not allow William McKinley to end his days in peaceful retirement, as is the wont of our ex-presidents. When at the height of his popularity—personal and political—and while still in the prime of a vigorous manhood he is struck down by the hand of an assassin whose chief and only claim to distinction is that he was accused and heralded far and wide as a believer in a philosophy or cult the most feared and hated of all cults, philosophies or political faiths that have ever been preached or promulgated in the annals of this world—that of ANARCHISM—with the natural result, the logical sequence, that in order to show their hatred of Anarchism and their love and reverence for the victim of Anarchism, the loyal and patriotic citizens of this country—Democrats no less than Republicans, will now do their utmost to carry out the policy inaugurated by the fallen political chief.

A few "voices in the wilderness," like that of McCall, may still be heard, warning of the dangers ahead, but these voices will probably soon be drowned in the wild cry, "Down with all Anarchists and all sympathisers with Anarchy! Long life to the Empire and the EMPEROR!"

Not without carefully weighing my words have I said that Czolgosz was ACCUSED of being an Anarchist. If he ever called himself an Anarchist he did so in ignorance of the meaning of the word, and of the methods of propaganda taught by the leaders of that cult. In his ignorance he probably had heard that the slayers of King Humbert and other European crowned heads were Anarchists, and may have thought it would add to his own fame to call himself by that name.

* * *

While it is much too soon to expect a rational estimate to be put upon the life and character of either Czolgosz or McKinley it is interesting to note that a quiet reaction is going on against the insane folly of the first utterances in regard to the tragedy of September 6. One month ago the "Chairman of the Current Events Committee of the Worcester (Mass.) League of Unitarian Women," Mrs. E. O. Cumming, had the courage to say, in a paper read before a session of that League:

"William McKinley will go down in history as one of our loved American martyrs, but to my view there is a sadder phase to that tragedy than the death of our President, a greater martyr, whose name will only be heaped with revilings and execrations for all time, but whose undoubted bravery and unflinching martyrdom to what he believed was duty, in the face of the hatred of the entire world, was more than courage, it was sublime in its simplicity and directness, and the evil of his action does not detract from the fact that martyrdom to a belief was poor Czolgosz's portion fully as much as ever martyr of old died for a mistaken cause."

That there are many thoughtful persons of both sexes who think as Mrs. Cumming does, but who lack the courage to speak out their thoughts, is very probable. For myself, while freely giving to Leon Czolgosz the credit of good intentions I confess to finding it hard to feel sympathy for those who voluntarily seek the martyr's crown. When imprisonment or death is forced upon anyone while non-invasively discharging self-imposed duties, it is quite another thing, but while I have no word of condemnation, as such, for the Ehuds, the Cordays, the Brescis and the Czolgoszes of history I have absolutely no sympathy for their methods of trying to make the world better.

THE DIVORCE QUESTION.

Among the questions most vital to human progress that have received attention during the year 1901 is that of divorce and remarriage. Strong efforts have been made to compel the Protestant churches to make divorce more difficult, and remarriage impossible for the "guilty partner." The superannuated head of the Roman church has just thundered his anathema against divorce, declaring it "to be a desecration of all religion and contrary to the law of God. Divorce is the moral ruin of woman, etc."

Against the barbaric ethical code championed by the power-loving hierarchs, both Protestant and Roman, I gladly quote again from Mrs. Cumming:

"I am, for one, glad that another stumbling block is not put in the way of some poor soul who may want to be freed from galling chains that do herself and no one else good, but an infinite amount of harm. I have never happened to want a divorce, but were I in the case of some poor souls I imagine it would take more than the law of one denomination to hold me to what I should deem but legalized prostitution, and let alone the thought of the criminals likely to be brought into the world through the revolt in the poor mother's mind."

MISSIONS TO THE HEATHEN.

Closely connected with the religious superstition that causes men to meddle with the sex-relations of other people and to deny to woman the right to escape from the thralldom of an unwelcome conjugal partner, is the superstition that impels men and women to go to foreign lands to "convert" those they call "heathen" to their own religious faith.

During the past year a conspicuous instance of this strange folly, not to call it by a harsher name, has attracted the attention, and to some extent the sympathy of English speaking countries. I refer to the case of Miss Stone, an American missionary in Bulgaria, held in captivity by brigands. The comments of the able reviewer just quoted are so very pertinent that I reproduce part of what she says in regard to the effort to raise money for the release of Miss Stone:

"Have people a right to jeopardize and lose so much for so small a result when half the amount expended wisely among our own benighted, more benighted because half civilized, heathen at home would bring in so much larger a harvest of souls, if it is souls they are after? Sometimes in thinking of the conversion of souls I am reminded of a girl I knew in my young days who was not over-bright, but had been worked upon at a revival until she tried to urge us all to her way of thinking, and she earnestly assured us that all we needed was a 'change of intellect.' And so I sometimes think it a vast price to pay for so impossible an object as a changed intellect for the heathen."

THE LYNCHING MANIA.

In looking backward over the record of the dying year there is nothing that to us Americans can cause a more poignant sense of regret and humiliation than the frequency of lynchings—burnings and hangings of the helpless victims of hate and revenge. Almost always these victims have been negroes, leaving the painful inference that race prejudice has much to do with these reversions to the middle-age atrocities instigated by religious bigotry and intolerance. One more quotation from the "Report of Current Events" by Mrs. Cumming, must close for this issue our retrospect of events of the year 301 of the Brunonian calendar:

"I became acquainted a short time ago with a pretty and perfect-mannered little lady from the west, visiting in Worcester and in the quietest, most refined tones she described a lynching she had attended in the west, where a negro was burned at the stake and the pyre lit by the hand of a woman, the mother of the girl he was accused of having assaulted. When I exclaimed at a woman doing such a deed, she defended it as perfectly right for the mother to act as executioner to the murderer of her fourteen year-old daughter, saying: "You, yourself, had you been there in that mother's place, would have done the same, as would every mother who saw him burned.'"

* * *

Farewell, Old Year! May the escutcheon of your successor show a larger proportion of bright spots, or credit marks, as against the black spots or marks of demerit, than are to be found on the panoramic scroll of the veteran whose requiem is now about to be chanted by uncounted millions of earth's inhabitants.

M. HARMAN.

A New Phase of Postal Censorship.

The last few mails have brought us inquiries from all parts as to why "Discontent" did not reach the subscribers. An investigation found the last six issues of the paper held up at the Tacoma postoffice. The postmaster at Tacoma does not know why they have been held, nor how long they will be held. He received his order from J. D. King, inspector in charge at Spokane, Wash. Those who pay for their paper have to wait until the postal censors get ready to deliver it; while we as publishers have issued the paper each week, paid the required postage, complied with all the postal laws, only to find that one man can set aside all laws and order mail held up. We have written the inspector asking for an explanation. If one is accorded us we will write you the full particulars.

OLIVER A. VERITY, Home, Wash., Dec., 17, 1901.

THE CHICAGO PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY meets at room 200, 26 Van Buren St., every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock. Admission and discussion free. Dec. 29, Franklin H. Wentworth speaks on "Mazzini."

"Christmas comes but once a year," and it now is past. But New Year's day will soon be here, and you may want to give your friend a souvenir of the season. Why not select a book from our lists?

Commonplace Things.

BY H. E. ALLEN.

On my way to Chicago last week it was my privilege to visit the Western Pipe Mills at Kewanee, Ill.

Nearly 2500 men work in this enormous factory, turning out steel and iron pipe, square and round. It is perhaps the most complete mill of the kind in the world. The latest and best machinery is employed in almost every operation, and yet accidents to the men are of almost daily occurrence.

In conversation with one of the employes I learned that nearly all these accidents could be prevented by very trifling expenditures to guard against mishaps, but which are neglected on account of the cost.

Everywhere under capitalism we see the same thing—human life sacrificed for greater dividends. As a commodity in the market human life is too cheap to waste expense to save it from destruction.

Think of men being literally roasted alive, or having their limbs torn from their bodies, eyes put out, feet crushed, etc., etc., to satisfy human greed! But such is capitalism today. It was not nearly so bad in the past, when we had a new western continent to spread over, and when the tools of production were simple and inexpensive.

As I walked through these acres of smoke begrimed men, sweltering before seething furnaces, dodging serpents of glowing steel billets more than forty feet in length, hissing from the rolls, the thought occurred to me—

When the better day, the day of Liberty, Equality and Fraternity, shall have dawned, will men produce any article of use or necessity under conditions such as these?—long hours of the most exhausting toil, a wage that covers mere subsistence, and exposed to dangers easily avoidable?

When industry becomes organized in the interest of the workers, these brutalities will cease, but not before.

Benton Harbor, Mich.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Ed. Armand, N. Y.:—I am glad to say that Lucifer is the best exponent on Anarchy that I have seen. May Lucifer's career be long and prosperous. The "editorials" relative to assassination were the sanest I saw, while editors in general went wild. I enclose $1 for a year's subscription.

Mary E. Hibbard, N. Y. City:—I see by my wrapper that my subscription is getting near the danger line, so inclose $2 to pay two years in advance. I cannot do without Lucifer, the only paper I have found time to read, of late. I wish you all good health and good cheer for the coming holidays.

John Ostrom, Enterprise, Kas.:—We send herewith $7 to pay for one year's subscription to Lucifer and the accompanying list of books. It does me good to read your comments on the President's message, because you write like a man. I wonder if there are many men and women in America today who dare to write for the public as you folks do. I hope you will live a long time yet to speak your manly sentiments to the delight of your fellow beings.

Joseph Mitchell, Grand Rapids, Mich.:—I enclose 95 cents for books. Please send me two copies of Lucifer each week. I will give one copy to my friends, hoping thereby to interest them in your work. Later, I will send you $1.

[To those of our subscribers who wish to use extra copies of Lucifer in this way, we will make a rate of 40 cents a year for the "missionary" copies. We hope our subscribers will circulate many copies of our paper at this rate. L. H.]

Caroline C. Maupassant, Otter Lake, Mich.:—I enclose $1 for my subscription. Lucifer is improving every week. Lillian sver y clear, but she must not lose her temper and be sarcastic about Mr. Kerr's "native heath." Mr. Kerr is clever, too, and I wish you many subscribers as clever and well-meaning.

[No "sarcasm" was intended, and never was my temper better than when writing the remarks referred to by Mme. de Maupassant. Mr. Kerr is one of Lucifer's best friends, and a personal friend of my own, as well. I regret the unfortunate impression made by my words. L. H.]

FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

Are you wondering what holiday present you shall select for your friend? What more appropriate than a well-chosen book, which may be treasured by its recipient not only for the sake of the giver, but for the gift's intrinsic worth? Here are a few to which we would call your special attention:

DAWN-THOUGHT, by J. Wm. Lloyd, is one of the most appropriate gift-books that could be chosen. Printed in Old-Style Antique type, red-letter side-titles and chapter-initials, with portrait of author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1, and 50 cents.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID is a dainty little gift booklet, also by J. Wm. Lloyd. For description see our booklist.

MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY, by Edward Carpenter, is a well-printed, daintily-bound booklet, written in the author's well-known charming style. Price 25 cents.

For the young nothing could be better than SCIENCE IN STORY; or Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. The interest is held through every one of the 240 pages, and "grown-up" children too, will laugh over the funny adventures of Sponsie, and with Sammy learn of the wonders of physiological science. Profusely illustrated. Five volumes in one, cloth $2; Five volumes separate, flexible cloth, 50 cents a volume.

Another splendid story for the young is KORADINE, by Alice B. Stockham and Lida Hood Talbot. Illustrated. 125 pages Extra Levant cloth. Price $1.

NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS, two of Ibsen's best-known plays, are bound together in a well-printed handsomely-bound volume, suitable for a gift-book. Price, 75 cents.

A charming present to your friend to whom the occult is interesting would be BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: THE MYSTERY OF SEX; by Mary Hanford Ford. Well printed in large, clear type, on heavy paper and bound in Levant cloth. Price, $1

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANCE, by William Platt, is another pretty gift-book. Is handsomely printed and bound, and contains two stories: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Price, 75 cents.

THE BALLAD OF READING GAOL, by C. 3. 3. (Oscar Wilde) is an artistically printed and bound work in two editions—paper, 10 cents; cloth, $1.

The presentation edition of Paine's AGE OF REASON would be a beautiful present for any friend who is interested in Freethought. See description in our book list.

Others in our list which would make acceptable presents are: A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY; HILDA'S HOME; MARTYRDOM OF MAN; RIGHTS OF WOMEN; THE WOMAN WHO DID; WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE, and WOMAN, IN THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE. For prices and descriptions of these see last page of this issue.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Personal: An experienced nurse will take into her own home an invalid or elderly person requiring special attention. The best of care given. Pleasant room, and excellent board. Best of references. Address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp) ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER Snowville, Va.

Wanted: Children to board and educate by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spolling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: A woman or man with a capital of $250 as partner to conduct a legitimate mail order business and also a job printing office. Must be a believer in sex freedom. HENRY C. HANSON, Aurora, Ill. 165 North Ohio St.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings. Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by concerning conception. A. M. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the stoutest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitsGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 30c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Ycleptt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 173 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBR
E T1.808
v.5, no.51
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 51. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 2, E. M. 302 [C. E. 1902] WHOLE No. 898

BOUND LOVE.

Love came to earth a happy god,
Intent upon the good of all;
And as he had no mortal eyes,
Men thought he had no eyes at all.

For men have said that Love is blind,
And so to make his journey safe:
They bound him round with many chains,
And led him forth at mortal pace.

Forgetting that immortal gods
Rise on their pinions ere they fall;
But bound and led as now he is,
He cannot use his wings at all.

So many a sad mistake he makes,
That many a mortal weeps to see,
They cry, "Alas that Love had eyes!"
And Love: "Alas, that I were free!"

—L. H. Rupel, in "Discontent."

How Rome "Stamped Out" Christianity.

The next day [Feb. 24, A. D. 303] the general edict of persecution was published and though Diocletian, still averse to the effusion of blood, had moderated the fury of Galerius, who proposed that every one refusing to offer sacrifice should immediately be burnt alive, the penalties inflicted on the obstinacy of the Christians might be deemed sufficiently rigorous and effectual. It was enacted that their churches, in all the provinces of the empire, should be demolished to their foundations; and the punishment of death was denounced against all who should presume to hold any secret assemblies for the purpose of religious worship. The philosophers, who now assumed the unworthy office of directing the blind zeal of persecution, had diligently studied the nature and genius of the Christian religion; and as they were not ignorant that the speculative doctrines of the faith were supposed to be contained in the writings of the prophets, of the evangelists, and of the apostles, they most probably suggested the order that the bishops and presbyters should deliver all their sacred books into the hands of the magistrates, who were commanded, under the severest penalties, to burn them in a public and solemn manner. By the same edict the property of the church was at once confiscated; and the several parts of which it might consist were either sold to the highest bidder, united to the Imperial domain, bestowed on the cities and corporations, or granted to the solicitations of rapacious courtiers. After taking such effectual measures to abolish the worship, and to dissolve the government of the Christians, it was thought necessary to subject to the most intolerable hardships the condition of those perverse individuals who should still reject the religion of nature, of Rome, and of their ancestors. Persons of a liberal birth were declared incapable of holding any honors or employments; slaves were forever deprived of the hopes of freedom, and the whole body of the people were put out of the protection of the law. The judges were authorized to hear and to determine every action that was brought against a Christian. But the Christians were not permitted to complain of any injury which they themselves had suffered; and thus those unfortunate sectaries were exposed to the severity, while they were excluded from the benefits, of public justice. This new species of martyrdom, so painful and lingering, so obscure and ignominious, was, perhaps, the most proper to weary the constancy of the faithful; nor can it be doubted that the passions and interests of mankind were disposed on this occasion to second the designs of the emperors. But the policy of a well-ordered government must sometimes have interposed in behalf of the oppressed Christians;* nor was it possible for the Roman princes entirely to remove the apprehension of punishment, or to connive at every act of fraud and violence, without exposing their own authority and the rest of their subjects to the most alarming dangers.†

This edict was scarcely exhibited to the public view, in the most conspicuous place of Nicomedia, before it was torn down by the hands of a Christiun, who expressed at the same time, by the bitterest invectives, his contempt as well as abhorrence for such impious and tyrannical governors. His offence, according to the mildest laws, amounted to treason, and deserved death. And if it be true that he was a person of rank and education, those circumstances could serve only to aggravate his guilt. He was burnt, or rather roasted, by a slow fire, and his executioners, zealous to revenge the personal insult which had been offered to the emperors, exhausted every refinement of cruelty, without being able to subdue his patience, or to alter the steady and insulting smile which in his dying agonies he still preserved in his countenance. The Christians, though they confessed that his conduct had not been strictly conformable to the laws of prudence, admired the divine fervor of his zeal; and the excessive commendations which they lavished on the memory of their hero and martyr‡ contributed to fix a deep impression of terror and hatred in the mind of Diocletian.—Gibbon: The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.

*This wants proof The edict of Diocletian was executed in all its rigor during the rest of his reign.—Guizot.

†Many ages afterwards. Edward I. practised, with great success, the same mode of persecution against the clergy of England.

‡Neither Doctantius nor Eusebius have condescended to mention his name, but the Greeks celebrate his memory under that of John.

Mark Twain on Christendom.

It was Mark Twain, the humorist, who gave a proper characterization of the closing years in the nineteenth century in a salutation to the twentieth. He said:

"I bring you the stately matron named Christendom, returning bedraggled, besmirched and dishonored from pirate raids in Kiaochow, Manchuria, South Africa and the Philippines, with her soul full of meanness, her pocket full of boodle and her mouth full of pious hypocrisies. Give her soap and towel, but hide the looking-glass."—Labor Journal.

Per
9/1937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.51

Legalized Murder.

Sonderton, Pa., Dec. 1, 1901.

Now is the harvest time for the professional blood-poisoners. It has never been proved that smallpox is contagious. In fact, the vaccinators themselves admit that it is not contagious unless you are in a condition to acquire it. In other words, unless your blood is impure from breathing foul air, overfeeding muscular inactivity and excesses of all kinds.

To show the foul work that is being done under the guise of scientific medicine, and under compulsory vaccination law, I will quote a few affairs that took place in different sections of the country within the last few months.

In June of this year, the Health Boards of both Chester, Pa. and Cleveland, Ohio raised a smallpox scare. As usual they scared the people into getting vaccinated, the people, thinking that the doctors, after taking a four years scientific medical course, should know best, allowed themselves to be vaccinated. Many other practicing physicians were against it, and advised the people not to be vaccinated. The people however believed the Board of Health physicians. The result was that four died in each place from lockjaw caused by the vaccination, while not a patient that had the smallpox died in either place. This disgusted the people, and they condemned the doctors and vaccination, and forced the Boards to rescind the compulsory vaccination rule, which the Board did, and it is needless to say that a smallpox scare will not take place soon again in these places.

But we now come to one of those outrages that make an honest physician ashamed to belong to the medical profession. In the latter part of October the Board of Health and the Board of Education of Camden, N. J., started to put the compulsory vaccination law in force, and gave orders that all children wishing to attend school had to be vaccinated. Another law reads that all children must attend school. So we can see what these butchers are after. Many parents were against having their children inoculated with this disease-breeding pus, but as they wished their children to attend school, they were forced to have them vaccinated.

The first two weeks all went well, but in two weeks after that ten died from lockjaw, caused directly by vaccination. The people became disgusted and demanded an explanation. Did they get it? Certainly, the vaccinating physicians first gave out the very learned statement that the air was full of lockjaw (tetanus) germs, and that these germs adhered to the wounds, but they failed to state why people with other wounds did not contract the disease. One of the physicians was honest enough however to say that it was not in the air. This explanation did not satisfy the people, however, and the President of the Board then made the statement that the patients had not died from lockjaw, but from meningitis, and that the vaccination physicians who were also the attending physicians had diagnosed the disease wrong.

Just think, after ten children had died after being treated for lockjaw with that arch-fraud, anti-toxin, a physician then giving out the statement that they did not have lockjaw at all but meningitis, and that they had not only been diagnosed wrong but also treated wrong.

This is truly a system of scientific murdering if ever there was one, but these physicians were not held responsible for the death of the murdered ones, and why? Simply because they are licensed to kill and are protected by the state. The people of Camden became so disgusted that they demanded the Board to rescind the Compulsory rule, and after holding a meeting they rescinded the rule and both vaccinated and unvaccinated are now allowed to go to school.

If a man kills another he is forced to face a jury and stand trial for murder, and if found guilty, he must hang, but when a set of men kill ten of our children, through bigotry and ignorance, they are allowed to go free; because they are protected by the state. Is this justice? Is it right? Such facts of medical ignorance and crime will stare in the face the coming generation.

* * *

We now come to the outrage committed at St. Louis, in the name of scientific medicine. We need but to look at the verdict of the Coroner, which reads:

"We find that the deceased came to their death from tetanus following the administration of diphtheria anti-toxin containing tetanus toxin; said diphtheria anti toxin having been prepared and issued by the health department [death department it should read] of the city and bearing dates on labels of August 24 and September 30, 1901.

"The presence of tetanus toxin in the diphtheria anti-toxin shows negligence upon the part of the health department in the preparation of said diphtheria anti-toxin and the issuance thereof."

These statements are plain enough and expose another of the terrible outrages that are being daily committed throughout all America. When will these outrages stop?

The answer is plain. Not as long as the larger portion of the so-called American free press will stand by the doctors in these criminal outrages. There are many papers now exposing these unscientific methods of treating disease, and many of our best physicians and greatest authorities are helping to establish a rational system of medicine, but there is yet plenty of work to be done.

All editors that publish the truth in regard to these matters should be praised for the good work they are helping to do, and the time is not far distant when the people will bless them for it.

R. Swinburne Clymer, Ph. D., M. S., M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon to St. Luke's Hospital.

American Press-Writers' Association.

Anti-vaccination has had to divide honors with Anarchy for first place this week in the Press-Writers' field of activity. Laura J. Langston fills nearly a column in "The Household Club" of the Cincinnati "Enquirer" of Dec. 19 with a fine article on "Individualism," and Mrs. Grace Phelps Best has one in another column on "Vegetarianism." In the Centerville (Md.) "Record," Dec. 14, Francis B. Livesey considers Anarchy, and the Norfolk, (Va.) "Pilot," Dec. 15, prints him on "Anarchist Colonization." "Pioneer Press" Martinsburg, (W. Va.), Dec. 21, gives Dr. J. C. Barnes a column in defense of the Anarchists Dorchester, (Mass). "Beacon" of the same date gives the writer half a column in criticism of Charles J. Bonaparte's recent lecture on the treatment of Anarchists; he advocated the tortures of the Dark Ages for stamping out heretics, as the most available remedy for the Anarchists.

J. M. Greene fills eleven pages of the "Animals' Defender" for December with choice anti-vaccination reading matter. Brother Greene has been so hot after the Boston Board of Health that the chairman refuses to give the address of any smallpox case reported] as unvaccinate for fear the anti-vaccinationists will investigate the case and prove the health board's statement that only the unvaccinate and those vaccinated in infancy have contracted the disease.

NEW MEMBERS.

191 d. Schefstom, G. H., Wheaton, Minn.
192 d. Westman, D. O., Wheaton, Minn.
193 c. Bardman, Mrs. L. J., 14 Main St., Charlestown, Mass.
194 c. Blanchard, C. Fred, 236 Holland St., W. Somerville, Mass.
195 d. Handley, Edward W., 13 Julian St., Roxbury, Mass.
196 f. Greene, J. M., Room 7, 1 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. donation $1.

CORRECTIONS.

40 b. Crawford, W. C., 75 Prospect St., Somerville, Mass.
A. C. Armstrong, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester, Mass.

She—I don't believe I shall ever have my trousseau ready.
He—Why wait?
"That's just like a man. You have no reverence for the marriage tie."—Life.

In the eyes of many women a husband has but a redeeming point—his usefulness. He draws checks and gives respectability to the appearance of the house.—Max O'Rell.

What Does It Mean? What Shall Be Done?

There is a colony of Reformers at Home, in the state of Washington. Some months ago, three members of this colony were arrested on the time-worn charge of "obscenity," the matter complained of being as innocent of indecency in word or suggestion as is this Statement in your hand. An expensive legal fight being in prospect, the undersigned and other members of the "Manhattan Liberal Club" and attendants at its meetings determined to raise some money here and to use part of this in the purchase each week of 200 copies of "Discontent," a paper published by the colony at Home, and to distribute these copies gratis in this hall on Friday evenings. We wished the people to become acquainted with the facts in the case, hoping that many then would subscribe for "Discontent" and contribute in other ways to help pay the expenses of this fight for a Free Press.

Two bundles of "Discontent" were received and distributed, and then the paper ceased to come. For four weeks none has been received, either at the hall, where the copies subscribed for were ordered to be sent, or by any individual subscriber, so far as we can learn. Inquiries sent to Home brought this reply from Mr. O. A. Verity, Treasurer of the Defense Fund:

"I cannot account for your not getting the paper, for I have done up yours as well as the Club's bundle each week, and I know it leaves here O. K. Yes, I did receive the money order for $18 and receipted for it in the paper."

What has become of these various parcels of "Discontent?" Where is the "hold-up" and who is the highwayman? By what authority has any one stopped these papers, admitted to the mails at Home as mail matter of the second class and free from condemnation by any court of competent jurisdiction? What have you to say concerning such outrageous meddling with the mails of the citizen? What do you intend to do?

Mr. Verity continues:

"The costs of the trial are placed at $500 by the attorney that we have retained, Sweet, of Portland, Oregon. . . . The sum is a large one to raise and so far we have $111.70."

We send out this statement in order that you may know why no papers have been distributed here for a month, and what are the necessities of the defense in the way of money. We hope that the knowledge of these facts may be sufficient to induce you to materially reduce the deficit in the Defense Fund Contributions will be received and receipted for by either of these whose names and addresses are below. The trial is to take place in February and action should be prompt. Yours for Freedom of Press and Mails.

Edwin C. Walker, 244 West 143rd Street.
Edw. W. Chamberlain, 111 West 42 Street.
W. J. Terwilliger, 171 East 83rd Street.
E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., 120 Lexington Avenue.
Cyrus W. Coolridge, 85 East 116th Street.
New York, December 20, 1901.

The Preacher's View of "Higher Education."

The minister who got off the following has imagined a vain thing:

"It is a very clearly established law that the more a woman is educated the fewer chances she has for being a mother. More and more than ever before does the young bride go to the altar with the distinct purpose never to become a mother, but, on the contrary, to devote herself to a life of lust and pleasure even more inconsistent with the perpetuation of society than the life of her less charming and less guilty sister of the pavement." (The Rev. Thomas Hendricks of Rochester, N. Y., at the Conference of Charities and Correction.)

The editor of a contemporary who has commented on the foregoing thinks the minister's words must excite in the friends of higher education for women "a violent tingling in the right boot toe," but it does not so affect me, as I always kick with the left foot when execution is to be done.

The language of the Rev. Hendricks is likely to attract attention because people will want to know how he got wise on the "clearly established law" he mentions. Education causes no reduction of capacity for parentage in the male; nor is it classed as a check to population by works on biology. If Mr. Hendricks is sure that what he names is a specific, he has violated section 2893 of the United States Statutes at Large by giving it away. His apparent familiarity with the "distinct purpose" of young brides is another case of suspicious information. If brides made one before him have given him that kind of a tale, he may make up his mind that he has been jollied. Girls are notoriously reticent of their feelings in such matters, and are likely to give evasive if not untruthful answers when interrogated. A man may more hopefully ask a hen to direct him to the nest she has stolen than question a bride about babies. I expect more brides come to the altar in the Rev. Mr. Hendricks' congregation with the problem of prospective motherhood already solved than approach it in the spirit he describes. Mr. Hendricks shares the foolishness of clergymen in throwing all the blame for childlessness on the woman, while the fact is that the wife generally shows a good deal more complacency in view of an increase in the family than the husband does. The preacher cannot be too severely rebuked for venturing in public the opinions he has expressed. He gives satisfying evidence of knowing as little about the mysteries of the female mind as I do.
—Geo. E. Macdonald in "Truth Seeker."

BRIEF MENTION OF EVENTS OF THE WEEK.

Domestic.

Senator Sewell of New Jersey died Dec., 27.

Gov. Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa will succeed Lyman J. Gage as Secretary of the Treasury about Feb. 1.

Twenty-two Filipinos were killed in fight with American troops at Batangas, Island of Luzon, Dec. 23.

Mrs. Bertha Varley committed suicide at Guthrie, Ok., because she was named as co-respondent in a divorce suit.

Gov. John R. Rogers of Washington died Dec. 26, aged 63. He founded and for three years was editor of the "Kansas Commoner."

Owing to growing disaffection among the Filipinos in Tabayas and Misomis the American army officials have asked that these provinces be again placed under military rule.

Two thousand regulars engaged in a riot lasting five hours Christmas because a saloon keeper near the Presidio, San Francisco, refused credit to a soldier. Several saloons were wrecked.

The companies controlling the gypsum fields of the United States have formed a trust under the name of the United States Gypsum Company; incorporated in New Jersey; capital $10,000,000.

Leaders in Congress are opposed to reducing war taxes until after appropriations are made. Treasury surplus of $175,000,000 will probably be entirely consumed in contemplated expenditures.

Mrs. "Jennie June" Croly died in New York Dec. 23, aged 72. She had been a newspaper writer since 1855 and thirty years ago organized Sorosis. She is said to have been the author of "The Truth about Love."

The asphalt trust, capitalized at $22,000,000 passed into the hands of receivers Dec., 28 because it was unable to pay $1,050,000 interest due on bonds. The failure is due to the activity of independent asphalt companies and to the expensive war waged with the Warner-Quinlan company in Venezuela for the possession of the pitch lake La Felicidad.

Foreign.

The Duke and Duchess of Hesse are divorced. They are first cousins, both being grandchildren of the late Queen Victoria.

Sven Hedin, a Norwegian explorer, has made a successful journey through all Thibet, including the sacred city of Lhahssa.

Boer force under De Wet captured four companies of British yeomanry Christmas eve at Treefontein, Orange River Colony.

"The Pyrmaid of Tyranny" is the title of a new pamphlet written by F. Domela Niewenhuis, and printed by "Freedom," London, England. The author asserts that the School, the Church, the Press, the Police, the Law and the Army help to comprise the Pyramid. The pamphlet may be obtained for five cents at this office.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

898.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. ——. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

The Year Three Hundred and Two

Of the new dating—of the revised or Brunonian calendar—is now with us.

All Hail to the New Year!

Lucifer—Son of the Morning—sends greetings to all its patrons and friends the world round; also to all mankind of whatever name, race, color, tribe or nationality.

May the new year bring peace, justice, freedom and enlightenment to the invaded, the oppressed and the benighted of all lands and climes.

Let the dead past bury its dead.

Let no time be wasted in vain regrets over past mistakes, past calamities—or what may now to our limited vision appear to be such.

With the lengthening days, let us take anew our BEARINGS, as wise sailors do, and let us resolve anew, that the incoming year shall be wiser, better, nobler, grander in achievement than any or all of its predecessors.

"Let us then be up and doing, with a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing, learn to labor and to wait."

Once again, Three times three for the new year!

Multiplication of the Unfit.

The first article in the January "Arena," New York, is entitled "Anarchism," written by "Rev. R. Heber Newton D. D.," of that city. This article is an elaboration of a sermon upon Anarchism delivered by the same gentleman soon after the assassination, and from which sermon we have more than once quoted in these columns.

That such an article can be published as leader in "The World's Leading Review," is significant of reaction against the spirit that, in both church and state, has announced its determination to "stamp out Anarchy." It is a stinging rebuke against such utterances as that of Theodore Roosevelt in his late message to Congress—as when he said,

"No man or body of men preaching Anarchist doctrines should be allowed at large, any more than if preaching the murder of some specific private individual. Anarchistic speeches, writings and meetings are essentially seditious and treasonable," etc.

Compared to the calm and scholarly utterances of this aged and distinguished clergyman the talk about Anarchy by Roosevelt sounds like the rhetorical flourishes of a sophomore in college, or the rabid ranting of a political heeler just before election, who knows little and cares less as to the meaning of such words as "seditious" and "treasonable," in a country in which the people are supposed to be the "government," and not the officials—not the public servants.

One of the significant paragraphs of this "Arena" article reads thus:

"The most appalling fact of life is the multiplication of the unfit. Paupers, tramps, vagabonds, the diseased, the insane, criminals—these become the parents of the future generations. So there is spawned on the world a host of degenerates, who form the raw material for every evil and for every crime. Their feeble minds unbalanced by moral forces, their ungoverned passions fired by vehement denunciations, their unenlightened conscience warped by the suffering and misery of earth, make them the potential assassins of those upon whom they father the cruel wrongs of men."

Statements like this naturally provoke the inquiry: Who or what is to blame for the multiplication of the unfit? Is it not demonstrable that it is our artificial social system, made and enforced by such men as Rev. Newton himself, that reverses the methods of nature and "spawns upon the world a host of degenerates?"

Is it not the interference by church-state morality in the realm of reproduction that defeats nature, thus compelling the evils deplored by the writer of the quoted paragraph?

Nature seeks always the multiplication of the FIT, of the BEST. Why then should a philosopher and man of wide experience and observation, express surprise at the multiplication of the UNFIT when compulsory ignorance in regard to human reproduction, together with the enforced poverty and overwork of the masses and the idleness and luxurious vices of the rich conspire to make degeneracy the rule instead of the exception—as it would be under equal opportunity and free and intelligent selection for all?

The following are characteristic paragraphs:

"What is meant by philosophic Anarchism, so-called—which should be called 'autarchy,' as Dr. Persifor Frazer observes,—is in reality the ideal of political and social science. It is also the ideal of religion. It is the ideal to which Jesus Christ himself looked forward. He founded no church, established no state, gave practically no laws, organized no government, set up no external authority. But he did seek to write the laws of God in men's hearts—to make men thus self legislating.

"Perhaps the most striking religious leader at the present time is that remarkable Russian, Tolstoi. Tolstoi is an individual Anarchist. He does not believe in government and law, not because he would have chaos, but because he would have men themselves govern themselves—establish laws for themselves out of themselves. He believes that when external authority is removed freedom will bring out the internal, spiritual, ethical authority of the individual, and all will be well. As a something feasible today this may be wholly elusive; it may be lunar ethics, but it is the ideal toward which Tolstoi works."

While there is much that is contradictory in the article of Rev. Newton—much of the old Archistic admonition that we must obey law because it is law, there is so much in praise of philosophic Anarchism that Lucifer cordially recommends its readers to buy and read this and other articles in the "Arena" for Jan. 1902.

Medical Common Sense—C. L. James Sums Up.

"When people say 'I've told you fifty times,'
They mean to scold, and very often do."

Now, I do not propose to scold; therefore I will not reckon up how often I have told Adeline Champney and others what I am going to repeat. Suffice it to say I have told them so, in my judgment, quite often enough; I have offered proofs of my assertions; and, though I have seen plenty of counter-assertion, I have seen no attempt at disproof.

1. It is a mistake to say the regular school of medicine does not consider prevention, hygiene, physical culture, &c. Regular physicians give these topics abundant space in their writings; and all you can find on such subjects in "Health Magazines" &c., is only their A, B, C.

2. It is a mistake to suppose the regular school relies much on ancient literature—like Galen. It is an experimental, and therefore a progressive school. But the hygiene of the "Health Magazines" &c., really is very ancient—the methods, if they can be so-called, of Mind Cure and its like, more ancient still.

3. It is a mistake to suppose regular, or qualified, physicians profess any such absurdity as making old rakes young again. To do so is a perfect specimen of that unprofessional quackery which excommunicates the offender at once.

4. It is a mistake to think there is among doctors any "monopoly," "coalition," or other arrangement of the ring nature, recognized by law. All the common law, or, so far as I know, any statute, requires, is that the practitioner shall have proved able to pass an examination on that positive technique which all "doctors"—le mot specialists of every school—have in common.

5. The evidence for the value of vaccination is statistical. If any one refuses to believe in statistics, without attempting specific refutation I am afraid he must be given up with the man who did not believe in geography. To any one else, it must be tolerably clear that particular instances of death from vaccination are on a par with those of death from drinking milk or eating cucumbers—nay, the latter are a far more numerous class.

6. It is difficult to make the value of vivisection intelligible to one totally ignorant of medical history. Almost everybody however, knows two things—that vivisection is prized especially by surgeons; and that surgery is much more of a positive science than physic.

7. It is a mistake to infer that experiments on living animals are generally painful. Since vivisection gave us anæsthesia, none have been so but those in which sensibility is the function experimented upon. The pain they cause is infinitely less than that caused at every stock-farm by a rude operation on the males, for a purpose far less beneficent.

8. It is a mistake to suppose that vivisection increases the total of animal slaughter. Common sense might teach that the animals vivisected are only a few of those previously condemned to die.

I wish to end the debate, and therefore do what in me lies towards this purpose by announcing that I now make these statements for the last time. A serious attempt to refute any of them, I will consider; but not mere contradictory statements. Those who favor me with that will, at most, only be referred to this number of Lucifer for instruction. Because I always considered the ancient vivisector, St. Anthony, tried a very useless exoeriment when he preached to fishes, which have no ears.

C. L. JAMES.

REPLY.

In most respects I regard this summing up by Friend James as a decided improvement upon his previous articles on the same subject. He has not once used the stereotyped phrase, "Movement in Favor of Igeorance," with which phrase he usually compliments those who do not agree with him in his estimate of the honor due to the medical profession, or that part thereof commonly styled "regular." There is, however, still too much, as I see it, of the sarcastic, the arrogant, the dogmatic, the contemptuous, in his manner of alluding to others—as when he compares his critics to "fishes, which have no ears."

Mr. James is a fine scholar, a man of unusual literary culture and research, and one for whose opinions on most questions I have much respect, but a man whose prejudices against what he calls "quackery" in the healing art seem to me extreme and irrational.

In treating most problems of human interest Friend James shows a fair share of the philosophic spirit, the judicial spirit, the mental quality that enables the investigator to look on all sides of controverted questions and to do justice to them all. But when discussing the medical doctor question he seems to be intensely partisan. His methods are those of the advocate in court—the special pleader or the paid attorney who is determined to see nothing to commend in the cause, the attitude or arguments of the other side.

That this is a failing common to nearly all disputants is well known and especially common to those who hold public discussions. The desire for victory, pride of skill as a debater, not to mention vanity of intellectual acquirements, often relegate the desire for truth to the rear, and cause the discussion to degenerate into intellectual pugilism—a mere waste of time and temper, to say nothing of the waste of space and money, if the controversy be carried on in print.

* * *

For myself, while making no claim to superiority over other disputants—while claiming no immunity from the common faults just alluded to, I do most earnestly maintain that this discussion of the medical doctor question is very serious business. Lucifer's chosen field of work is human emancipation from the thralldom of ignorance and superstitution, and especially from the ignorance and superstitions that bind womanhood and motherhood in the chains of the three priesthoods—that of theology, medicine and legality, that is, of state-craft or judge-craft.

As Dr. Eliphalet Kimball of New Hampshire says: "There is a doctor-craft as well as priest-craft," and it is hard to say which of these two crafts is woman's worst enemy, and through its power over motherhood which is the greater enemy to human freedom and racial advancement.

Like every other craft it is the misfortune of doctor-craft that the income, the power and prestige of the physician depends largely if not wholly on the ignorance, the docility and the gullibility of the laity, the non-professionals. As Dr. Thomas Inman of London said of his own profession:

"Men, like horses or tigers, monkeys and codfish, can do without doctors. . . It is the business of such men, however, to magnify their office to the utmost. They get their money ostensibly by curing the sick, but it is clear that the shorter the illness, the fewer will be the fees, and the more protracted the attendance, the larger must be the 'honorarium.'"

* * *

In like manner Dr. O. W. Holmes, when speaking of the medical profession, said, "There never was a guild of craftsmen since Demetrius and his silversmiths made images for Diana of the Ephesians, that did not need sharp looking after."

Dr. Holmes was in a position to speak freely of his brethren, the knights of the lancet and pill-bags. In his case the MAN was greater than the physician. As an inheritor of wealth and social position, and as an author and man of letters, it mattered little to him whether he retained his medical professorship in Harvard University or not. He could well afford to speak the truth of doctor-craft. Not so, alas, with nine-tenths or ninety-nine hundredths of the so-called "regulars." They must feel and act, though they seldom speak it out, as lately did a member of the craft when giving advice to his brethren:

"I think it would be better for the profession if we all would recognize the fact, that it is better to have patients to die under scientific treatment, than to recover under empirical treatment, therefore use tonics if needed for your dignity and thereby accept no dictating by the laity.—B. P. Posy, M. D., in the 'Medical Times,' Philadelphia, Pa., and Boston, Mass., Oct., 1900."

Better have your patients die while traveling the old beaten path than get well by any other route!

* * *

It is because of this unfortunate and crime-breeding relation of physician to his patient that I have frequently said that the statistics of vaccination are unreliable. These statistics are gathered and manipulated by heads and fingers that have a moneyed interest at stake; hence it is expecting too much of human nature in this commercial age, this mercenary age—when men go into the medical profession not from any natural adaptability thereto, or liking therefor, but simply as a bread-winning occupation, and because of the fact that it is a learned profession, a highly honorable calling, and one that pays BIG FEES to the successful practitioner—as witness the demand now made by the doctors that allowed McKinley to die after being pronounced quite out of danger by surgery (a really progressive science, by the way), the demand that the people of the whole United States shall pay this bill because it would be too large a bill for Mrs. McKinley, rich woman as she is (with no children to support), to pay out of her own private revenues—I repeat, it is expecting too much to look for a fair and strictly honest report of the record of vaccination from the men, the guild, whose revenues, whose authority and prestige are largely enhanced by the introduction of vaccine pus into the veins of human beings.

In this connection it is right and fitting to say that the law-doctors and the capitalistic journals seem to be in league with that part of the medical profession which seeks the aid of legislation in securing a monopoly of the business of drugging (poisoning) the masses of people. The law-doctors—the law-carpenters, as they have been not inaptly named—seem very eager to enact laws that restrict the practice of the healing art to graduates of medical colleges chartered by the state, and the large daily papers tell us we should "accept the report of the physcians"—in the McKinley case, for instance—as final and satisfactory. That is to say, the doctors who form the medical "trust," should not be subjected to criticism, no matter what the result of their treatment of the sick or wounded. If this is not an attempt to muzzle the freedom of the press and to bind the consciences, the bodies, the souls and the earnings of the laity to the medical-doctor guild, then pray what is it?

* * *

In speaking of this law-enforced medical trust Mark Twain wittily remarks:

"How is it that there are a thousand ways in which I may be permitted to damn my soul, but when it comes to a trivial matter like temporary ill health, the Legislature must prescribe how I shall do it? It is absurd and ridiculous."

And the renowned English statesman W. E. Gladstone is reported as saying:

"A man ought to be as free to select his physician as his blacksmith, for he alone is to profit or suffer by his choice. The responsibility is his."

* * *

The antagonism between the old school, the monopolistic school or schools of medicine, on the one hand and the newer or reform schools denounced as "empirical," on the other, seems irreconcilable. The philosophy of the self-styled regular or scientific doctors, as I understand them, is that disease is an entity, an enemy to be destroyed and routed by the introduction of medicaments—mostly poisonous drugs—that slay the disease and restore the body to health.

On the contrary the newer school, or schools, take the ground that disease is not an entity, not an enemy to be routed by any kind of vicarious atonement, but that it is simply evidence that the vital force is at work to eliminate impurities or heal wounds caused by abnormal environment. For instance:

Not long since I heard a "regular" physician say that "cold" is an entity, a force, and for illustration mentioned the well-known fact that the handling of a bar of steel when the temperature is twenty degrees below zero will cause a blister as surely as the handling of the same bar when heated to redness. The newer philosophy of disease tells us that it is neither heat nor cold that causes the blister but simply the vital force of the organism that throws out the serum, or watery part of the blood, as a shield against an abnormal environment, namely, a surrounding temperature too high or too low for the safety of the vital organism.

That is to say, observation shows us that human life can exist only when the thermal vibrations do not ascend or descend beyond certain degrees of rapidity or slowness, the blister and the pain being simply nature's warning that the limit of safety has been reached and passed.

In this way, or in similar ways, all so-called diseases are explained; the rational and sensible method of prevention and cure being a return to normal environment, when the vital force—the vis medicatrix naturae—will repair the damage to the organism, if not injured beyond repair—as when a blister covers the entire body.

* * *

Again Mr. James takes leave of the discussion, a discussion provoked by himself, so far as I now remember. Considering the space that has been accorded to him I think it eminently right and proper that he should give to others an opportunity to be heard. Considering also that Friend James is the only correspondent of Lucifer who champions the cause of doctor-craft, as such; the cause of that part of doctordom which holds the same relation to medical freedom that the Roman Catholic church holds to Freethought, or that the "Republican" party in America and the monarchies of the old world hold towards the cults called Anarchism and Socialism, and considering that Lucifer is published as an evangel of human freedom and progress as against despotism and barbarism, I think it eminently right that the contributors who are in accord with our central work should now have an opportunity to answer one who, as I see it, is the most pronounced solecism or anachronism, so to speak, in his attitude towards medical reform, of all who have made an honorable record as image-breakers in politics and religion.

* * *

In order that our friends and helpers may have an opportunity to reply to the points raised by Friend James I have purposely refrained from special answers in this article, contenting myself with statements of principles involved, and will close this long article by giving the testimony of a very noted physician, in regard to the value—rather the worse than uselessness, of drug medication. The distinguished Dr. Magendie, of Paris, is thus quoted—quoted so often that I reasonably suppose there is no mistake in the wording:

"I hesitate not to declare, no matter how sorely I shall wound our vanity, that so gross is our ignorance of the real nature of the physiological disorders, called disease, that it would perhaps be better to do nothing and resign the complaint we are called upon to treat to the resources of nature than to act, as we are frequently called upon to do, without knowing the why and the wherefore of our conduct, and its obvious risk of hastening the end of the patient. Let me tell you, gentlemen, what I did when I was the head physician of Hotel Dieu. Some three or four thousand patients passed through my hands every year. I divided the patients into two classes: with one I followed the dispensatory, and gave them the usual medicines without the least idea why or wherefore; to the other I gave bread pills and colored water, without, of course, letting them know anything about it. . . and occasionally, gentlemen, I would create a third division to whom I gave nothing whatever. These last would fret a good deal, they would feel they were neglected (sick people always feel they are neglected unless they are well drugged). . . . (les imbeciles!) and they would irritate themselves until they got really sick, but nature invariably came to the rescue, and all the persons in the third class got well. There was a little mortality among those who received but bread pills and colored water, and the mortality was greatest among those who were carefully drugged according to dispensatory."

Once more I wish to remind our friends, one and all, that if they expect a hearing in Lucifer they must condense, boil down, by cutting out superfluous words, phrases and paragraphs, else with the utmost of good will to insert all that is sent us, some will necessarily be left out in the cold. M. HARMAN.

A Correction.

In the last paragraph of "Crime and Criminals" (Lucifer No. 896) Mr. Walker is made to ask "What effect upon the future convicts have our methods of restraint and care?" The question he really asked was concerning "the future of convicts."

The supply of copies of Ibsen's "Nora" which were offered as premium with Lucifer for $1 is exhausted; but for 75 cents we can supply "Nora" and "Ghosts" bound together in a handsome volume, or for $1.50 we will send Lucifer one year and one of these volumes to any address.

The Goal of Life.

Life is a process of learning, experimenting.
Thou learnest what thou dost finally need
By calling to thyself what thou thinkest thou needest;
And what thou thinkest thou needest thou dost actually need,
To learn that thou needest it not!
Thou dost learn by self-gratification—
Thou canst not injure thyself!

* * *

Time is long; life is long.
If thou blunderest into death thou wilt find it a door,
Even as pain, disease, poverty, failure are doors.
Thou canst make no mistakes.
Mistake is a false name for a true guide-post.
Happy he who learns without pain, disease, poverty, failure.
Are there such?
If thou art such, judge not the slow learners.

* * *

Call not the experiments of others sins.
There is no sin!
Whatsoever a man doeth is right in its time and place.
Each man doeth the best he can!
Pamper not thyself with the thought that thou doest better than another.
Self righteousness is ignorance!
Thou art nor better nor worse than another.
Thou art on thy way.
He is on his way.
Thy ways are different; thy goal the same—self-expression.
—Hugh O. Pentecost.

A Remarkable Family.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Dec. 25.—The following story of a remarkable condition of marital affairs comes from the village of Clifton Park, in Saratoga county. Giovanni Peloc, an Italian, and commonly known about the village as "John," was married about a dozen years ago to an Italian woman of the village. A few years later John's wife was seized with what was generally regarded as a fatal illness; in fact, the physicians who were called in declared that she could not possibly recover.

This, being the case, Mrs. Peloc called her weeping husband to her bedside and told him that she wished him to marry her sister, and wanted the ceremony performed then and there, for she could not die happy if she did not see them married. The sister being a comely young woman, the husband announced his willingness to accede to his wife's dying wish. The girl also acquiescing, the ceremony was performed at the bedside of the sick wife.

The first wife recovered, and John found himself with two wives. Both women loved him, and he was equally fond of each, so they mutually agreed to live together. This Mormon-like arrangement continues to this day, both wives having presented him with children. What makes this case still more remarkable is the fact that the mother of John's two wives lives with them.—Chicago "Inter-Ocean."

DR. JULIET H. SEVERANCE will be the leading speaker and "The Dangers to American Liberty" the subject at the meeting of the Society of Anthropology on Sunday, Jan. 5. Hall 913 Masonic Temple, 3:00 p. m. Free discussion; free admission.

Marriage is such a terrible, awful thing that no nation, civilized or otherwise, has laws allowing couples to have a try first; no, not even a peep into it. You must sign first and take your chances.—Max O'Rell

Lucifer—Its Meaning and Purpose.

LUCIFER—The planet Venus; so called from its brightness.—Webster's Dictionary.

LUCIFEROUS—Giving Light; affording light or the means of discovery.—Same.

LUCIFIC—Producing Light.—Same.

LUCIFORM—Having the form of Light.—Same.

The name Lucifer means Light-Bringing or Light-Bearing, and the paper that has adopted this name stands for Light against Darkness—for Reason against Superstition—for Science against Tradition—for Investigation and Enlightenment against Credulity and Ignorance—for Liberty against Slavery—for Justice against Privilege.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer.

M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of it All. Price 15c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted: Children to board and educate, by a woman of large experience and unusual success in the training of children. A good home, pleasant surroundings, and gentle, wise discipline guaranteed. For particulars, references, etc., address Lillian Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Notice! I would be glad to hear from Liberals who would like to correspond with other Liberals. Address (with stamp)
Snowville, Va. ELMINA DRAKE SLENKER.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.

ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris. Illustrations, Table of Contents, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.

AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.

A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid diseases than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.

A FLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.

A TALE OF THE STRASBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strasburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.

AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.

A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.

BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commanded, Defended and Exalted by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.

BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. A. E. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.

CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.

CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD, A. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analysing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 10c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 230 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth. $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 330 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.60; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 172 pages. 25c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RBF
E
f 808
v.5, no.52
3rd ser.
1901/02

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. V., No. 52. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 9, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 899

THE VICTORY.

There is "great rejoicing at the nation's capital," so says the morning's paper.
The enemy's fleet has been annihilated.
Mothers are delighted because other mothers have lost sons just like their own.
Wives and daughters smile at the thought of new-made widows and orphans.
Strong men are full of glee because other strong men are either slain or doomed to rot alive in torments.
Small boys are delirious with pride and joy as they fancy themselves thrusting swords into soft flesh, and burning and laying waste such homes as they themselves inhabit.
Another capital is cast down with mourning and humiliation, just in proportion as ours is raised up, and that is the very spice of our triumph.
How could we exult without having a fellow-man to exult over?
Yesterday it was the thrill of grappling with him and hating him.
To-day we grind our heel into his face and despise him.
This is life—this is patriotism—this is rapture!
But we—what are we—men or devils? and our Christian capital—what is it but an outpost of hell?

—From War Echoes, by Ernest Howard Crosby.

Characteristics of Property and Communism.

There are different kinds of property: (1) Property pure and simple, the dominant and seigniorial power over a thing; or, as they term it, naked property. (2) Possession. "Possession," says Duranton, "is a matter of fact, not of right." Toullier: "Property is a right, a legal power; possession is a fact." The tenant, the farmer, the usufructuary, are proprietors. This double definition of property—domain and possession—is of the highest importance; and it must be clearly understood, in order to comprehend what is to follow.

From the distinction between possession and property arise two sorts of rights: the jus in re, the right in a thing, the right by which I may reclaim the property which I have acquired, in whatever hands I find it; and the jus ad rem, the right to a thing, which gives me a claim to become a proprietor. . . . .

I ought not to conceal the fact that property and communism have been considered always the only possible forms of society. This deplorable error has been the life of property. The disadvantages of communism are so obvious that its critics never have needed to employ much eloquence to thoroughly disgust men with it. The irreparability of the injustice which it causes, the violence which it does to attractions and repulsions, the yoke of iron which it fastens upon the will, the moral torture to which it subjects the conscience, the debilitating effect which it has upon society; and, to sum it all up, the pious and stupid uniformity which it enforces upon the free, active, reasoning, unsubmissive personality of man, have shocked common sense, and condemned communism by an irrevocable decree. . . . .

Communism seeks equality and law. Property, born of the sovereignty of the reason, and the sense of personal merit, wishes abov all things independence and proportionality.

But communism, mistaking uniformity for law, and levelism for equality, becomes tyrannical and unjust. Property, by its despotism and encroachments, soon proves itself oppressive and anti-social.

The objects of communism and property are good—their results are bad. And why? Because both are exclusive, and each disregards two elements of society. Communism rejects independence and proportionality; property does not satisfy equality and law. . . . .

This third form of society, the synthesis of communism and property, we will call liberty.

In determining the nature of liberty, we do not unite communism and property indiscriminately; such a process would be absurd eclecticism. We search by analysis for those elements in each which are true, and in harmony with the laws of Nature and society, disregarding the rest altogether; and the result gives us an adequate expression of the natural form of human society,—in one word, liberty.

Liberty is equality, because liberty exists only in society; and in the absence of equality there is no society.

Liberty is anarchy, because it does not admit the government of the will, but only the authority of the law; that is, of necessity.

Liberty is infinite variety, because it respects all wills within the limits of the law.

Liberty is proportionality, because it allows the utmost latitude to the ambition for merit, and the emulation of glory.

—Proudhon: "What Is Property?"

Increased Intelligence Decreases Marriage Rate.

When asked recently to what cause she attributed the large decrease in marriage for 1901 in Rochester, New York, Miss Susan B. Anthony said:

"Well, I think that one reason for the decrease in the marriage rate is the increased intelligence of the women. In the old days women were married at the age of sixteen years, and from that time until they arrived at the age of forty their one aim seemed to be give birth to a child every year or two years. Thus the heyday of their lives was spent in hopeless toil and sleepless nights, and the women became old long before their time. What this world wants is fewer children and those better born and bred.

"A woman who marries a man and finds that he is a drunkard or a licentious man is committing one of the worst sins against society if she continues to live with that man after her discovery. One of the greatest crimes is the bearing of children by such a couple. In a case of this kind the woman should secure a divorce, and see to it that she does not rush into another such alliance."

A paternal government never becomes so thoroughly fatherly that its children don't have to pay all its bills.—Puck.

x
Per HX937
3rd ser.
v.5
1901/02
no.52

A Rose by Any Other Name.

BY R. D. KERR.

For many ages the best men and women have tried to found society on a new basis, in order to escape from the oppression of the weak by the strong. But in 1840 Proudhon revealed to the world a simpler way. He discovered that the supposed evils of the world were not really bad, but all had bad names. He showed us how, by simply giving every evil a new name, it would be possible not only to enjoy every existing evil, but to derive unspeakable delight from the resurrection of all the evils of the past. His followers have extended his researches with the most happy results.

To the Proudhonian "punishment" is an abomination, but for the sake of "protection" dangerous persons should be confined for life. Those who were supposed to be "criminals" are really only "lunatics," and justice demands that they lose their liberty under a new name.

Force must ever be abhorred, but it is right to "resist invasion." The Proudhonian says that property is robbery, but he greatly approves of "possession." He would allow a man to "use and occupy" the best corner lot on Broadway, New York, and erect on it a sky-scraper twenty stories high. On the ground floor he could run a store, and the mere advantage of position would enable him to do a thousand times as much business as a man with an inside lot in the suburbs. The remaining nineteen stories he could rent at fabulous figures, and soon accumulate a gigantic fortune. He would have to pay nothing for his location. The single taxer would denounce this as "monopoly"; but the Proudhonian calls it "equality of opportunity" and smiles.

The Proudhonian would substitute "voluntary protective associations" for the present machinery of the law. The words have a very familiar sound, especially to the ear of a Scotchman. Before 1746 the Highlands of Scotland were entirely in the hands of such protective associations and were only nominally connected with the British government. There was no central authority of any kind, only protective associations. The associations were quite voluntary, as far as any law was concerned; though perhaps a man who wished to change his association might have had a good many dirks in his body before he got very far. We have all heard of the McDonalds and the Campbells, how well they "protected" themselves and aggressed on each other and all the world besides. Some centuries earlier the Lowlands had similar organizations, and I myself am descended from the members of a famous protective association on the Border, whose historic feud with the Scotts has been immortalized in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." The great business of the Scotts and the Kerrs was to fight each other, collectively and individually; but the necessities of nature often summoned them to cross into England and steal the cattle of the Dacres and Musgraves, incidentally burning every house and ravishing every woman they could find. Some attention had also to be given to other Scotch protective associations, like the Elliots and the Homes. But free association for protection was not peculiar to Scotland. We all know the sad story of Romeo and Juliet, which resulted from a little misunderstanding between those worthy protective associations, the Montagus and the Capulets. But why quote more cases, for during the greater part of human history in all countries free protective associations prevailed, uncurbed by any central authority. Yet, strange to say, all historians have considered them an abomination. All students of the past think that the most beneficent change in human history was the suppression of private war, and taking away from individuals and associations the right to bear arms and to use force, and the vesting of the right to use force as a monopoly in the hands of the representatives of the whole people. And, strange to say, every monarchy in the world owes its origin to the fact that the trading classes and the common people supported the monarch against the voluntary protective associations. But it seems they were wrong. The protective associations were founded on a splendid principle, but unfortunately they used a wrong name. They called themselves "clans." The warlike traders should have sent deputations to the Montagus and the Capulets, the Scotts and the Kerrs, urging them to change their names to "voluntary protective associations," and then I am sure they would all have been as meek as lambs.

Some years ago I got into a lively discussion with a delightful old gentleman, who was against all "government of man by man," until it transpired that, although against government, he strongly favored an "administration."

I was surprised that none of the Proudhonian journals quoted the figures lately given in the "Literary Digest," showing that in the last sixteen years 51 women and nearly 2000 men have been lynched in the United States. Such evidences of progress must be very gratifying to the apostles of voluntaryism. A murderer who is painlessly but legally electrocuted is indeed to be pitied, but glorious is the fate of the innocent man who is burned to death by a voluntary association.

Many writers have bewailed the evils of competition. It was left for Proudhon to show that the only objection to competition is that there is not enough of it. It should be absolutely "free," so that the weak may have no chance of escape from going to the wall. Sometimes a weakling inherits a fortune and escapes extinction, but Proudhon would give no favors except natural monopolies, and one may be sure that they would always be in the hands of the strong. He would leave the weak and the strong to compete at the same price in the same market, thus making it mathematically certain that every weakling would go to the wall. In fact, he would restore pure Darwinian natural selection among individuals, just as we find it in the "Origin of Species." But all the close students of natural selection, like Huxley and Alfred Russel Wallace, have denounced it as an inconceivably bad foundation for human society; and the latter, who was one of the discoverers of natural selection, has adopted cosmopolitan social democracy, the sole aim of which is to abolish natural selection, both as between individuals and between societies, and to depend wholly on free sexual selection for the future evolution of the race. But the Proudhonians think natural selection would be very nice, if called "free competition."

Proudhon, however, wishes one deviation from natural selection as it exists throughout nature. He wishes to bar the form of competition called aggression. He thinks the strong should not use their strength, although the weak may use their cunning. He would like to see the indolent and spendthrift athlete take his defeat from the puny man of thrift and industry without an effort at redress. He would have us think that, if all men could bear arms and unite in voluntary associations, those who could shoot best would take no advantage of those who could cheat best.

But the beauty of it all is that everything is called "liberty" by Proudhon. What matters it if half the men and women in the world are burnt at the stake without trial, so long as it is done by voluntary protective associations, in a world where government, the only foe to liberty, has been abolished.

I have said a good deal about Proudhon, for I am sorry to see the prejudice now existing against all the great humorists. Comstock would suppress Rabelais and Boccaccio, and now Roosevelt would suppress Proudhon. But such men cannot be suppressed, and Proudhon will be immortal like the schoolboy who said that the Iliad and Odyssey were not written by Homer, but by another poet of the same name.

Bound Volumes of Lucifer.

We shall soon have bound volumes of Lucifer for 1901. We shall be glad to receive orders in advance, so that we may know how many to bind. Money need not be sent until books are ready for mailing. Price $1.25; postage, 25 cents.

Do not overlook the additions to our book list printed in this number. We have in stock all books advertised by us, and are always glad to have our friends call and examine them.

How to Get Well and Keep Well.

BY D. WEBSTER GROH.

If your readers value health, they owe you more than they ever can repay for your excellent article on "Hygiene and Therapeutics" in Lucifer Dec. 12, as my experience of forty-seven years and that of my father's family for a still longer time have fully demonstrated.

By using nothing but the Hydropathic or "Water Cure" methods we have treated pneumonia, diphtheria, scarlet, typhoid and other fevers, and other diseases in our own families so successfully that patients generally recover in less than half the time required by the drug treatment. My father's death, at sixty-five, of apoplexy—something no physician pretends to cure—was the only death in either of our families in all that time.

In my own family of six persons none have been bed-fast with sickness two successive days in the past ten years, though none of us had naturally very robust constitutions.

The philosophy of the Hydropathic treatment is as follows:

All disease is caused by impurity in the system. If in its normal condition and no impurity there, there can be no sickness.

Physicians generally admit this. Hence, to eradicate disease, it is only necessary to get the impurity out of the system. To get it out we need only to thoroughly open all the vents or exits through which it escapes—the bowels, pores of the skin and air-passages of the lungs; thus it is rapidly expelled from the system.

Water is the greatest solvent or dissolver in nature, therefore soak your entire body inside and outside thoroughly with it, to dissolve and dilute your internal impurities and facilitate their removal from the body, just as a flood carries along on its crest all the debris and accumulations of years from the stream's banks. Drink, bathe and inject all you well can.

Water is ten fold more necessary to the human being than food, as you can live much longer without food than without water. Dr. Tanner and others have fasted forty days, but no one ever lived so long without water. The system quickly and easily eliminates a surplus of water, but not so with food; so there is no danger of getting too much water in the system.

If inclined to vomit, drink very warm water copiously, to relax the muscles and facilitate vomiting thus throwing off the stomach's impurities; you can do so easier from a full stomach than an empty one, and, besides, the water dilutes and weakens the bile and other secretions or contents, making it much less offensive to discharge, while more thoroughly rinsing you internally.

Copious clysters of very warm water thrown repeatedly into the bowels melt and dilute all the waxy, fatty, hardened matter clogging those channels, and thoroughly cleanse them, giving you an internal bath which is often even more necessary than an external one.

Next, thoroughly bathe externally, followed by very brisk rubbing with the naked hand, so as to heat the skin by the friction thereof, thus melting the waxy, fatty matter clogging the pores, and, by the rubbing motion, simultaneously working it out of the skin.

Then admit plenty of pure air to the patient's room, and have him inhale it copiously by long full breaths, so it thoroughly penetrates every portion of his lungs, and the flood thereof helps exhale impurities.

Until the stomach can assimilate food (which the appetite will call for when needed) better give little or none, as it only obstructs the cleansing of the system, and repairing process, when undigested.

As a small quantity of lye will perfectly transform only a small quantity of grease into soap, so a small quantity (or weak quality) of gastric juice will properly digest only a small quantity of food, and, if too much food is taken, both it and the gastric and other digesting fluids are entirely wasted and become obstructions instead of benefits to the system. So better too little than too much food.

Rationally and carefully proceeding according to above directions immediately when taken sick will not only cure any ordinary disease very quickly, but often prevents what would otherwise be a fatal attack from even developing into the semblance of anything serious.

For specific directions for the treatment of every variety of disease, Dr. Joel Shew's "Hydropathic Physician," or Dr. Trall's "Hydropathic Encyclopedia" (by Fowler and Wells, New York) are sufficiently explicit for any ordinarily intelligent person, without the aid of a physician.

Rationalists should forsake the drug superstition as well as the religious one, and no longer make apothecary shops of their stomachs that are suited for nothing but food and water.

Hagerstown, Md.

American Press-Writers' Association.

One of the leading events of the present week was the appearance in the "Baltimore American," December 22 of a very adroitly worded communication from E. H. Judkins, M. D., of Boston, that opens with the name of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Alexander Hamilton as sponsors of a movement to defend the constitution of the United States and the Christian religion. And he goes on to say that a new society has been formed to combat the "Anarchist" Press-Writers' Association. This new society is called the Truth and Common Sense Club—in honor, I suppose, of a brace of aliases over which this same J. has been abusing several of the Press-Writers and incidently defaming the good names of Ingersoll and Paine, in the columns of the "Boston Traveler."

This new society has Mr. E. H. Judkins, LL. B., M. D., as its first president; Mr. E. Howard, Back Bay, Boston, for field secretary; and a Dr. Judson, Station A, Boston treasurer. A little detective work discloses that a good likeness of Judkins is recognized as E. Howard, at the general delivery window of the Back Bay station, and at station A, as Dr. Judson. It may help to explain the mystery of this close facial resemblance that exists among the officers of this anti-Anarchist society, if I betray the confidence of a private letter from Judkins in our possession. He urges the person to whom the letter was sent, to join in his scheme "because there is money in it," they could "manage the thing between them, and sell memberships at one dollar each to Christians and patriotic people that wished to save the country from the Anarchists. The enclosed article," which was the one printed in the "American," they "could use for free advertising in the newspapers."

I have trespassed on Lucifer's space with this matter, that our Anarchist friends may have a chance to get their grips packed, for Mr. Judkins thinks his society will spread like wildfire over this land.

This man claims to be a follower of Christ, but it must be in imitation of Judas and the Roman soldiers that he is following him.

NEW MEMBERS.

197 b. Lewis, Mrs. I. L., Bethel, Vt.
198 d. Brocter, Cris, Rapid City, S. D.

CORRECTION.

121 a. Osborn, Charles A., 7 & 9 Warren St., New York, New York.

A. C. ARMSTRONG, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester, Mass.

Funeral of Mrs. H. Houghton Chaapel.

J. C., Palmetto, Fla.:—Mrs. H. Houghton Chaapel entered more advanced spheres of life Nov. 20, 1901, from her home in Palmetto, Florida, after a brief illness, aged 78 years. For some months she had presentiments that her long, active, and useful life was near its end here. She gave directions for a plain coffin and funeral—no prayer, no invocation,—and that her husband, Jay Chaapel, speak over her lifeless body from their grove of palmettoes and live-oaks adjoining their home, which he did for about twenty minutes, after reading a poem, "Mon Ami" from her book published over a year ago. She left several bequests to the poor, to relatives and friends, and $4,000 to $5,000 to the "Free Thought University" at Silverton, Oregon.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

899.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Planning for Work.

The year 301, Brunonian Era, was a year memorable in human history. From present indications the incoming year will be not less prolific in events heavily freighted with weal or woe for earth's inhabitants.

It is the business of the public journal to serve as watchman or sentinel—to point out the dangers that may threaten the workers in the human hive, whether these dangers come from without, or lurk within the social groups, co-operations or organizations.

The greatest danger now threatening the real workers in the great human hive comes from the union of militarism, plutocracy and priestcraft—the various hierarchies of the world. All these crafts or guilds well know how to pool their issues to mutual advantage, but the stupid and hypnotized masses, instead of uniting for mutual aid and protection, spend their little reserve force—after providing for their most pressing necessities—in fighting each other, then march in vast processions to cheer and vote for the men and the laws that rob and enslave them.

* * *

Lucifer—First-born of the Sons of the Morning!

Lucifer—Herald of the Dawn! dawn of a brighter, happier day for mankind, let us hope—Lucifer, the Lightbringer, will try to do its part this coming year toward dispelling the mists of ignorance and error, and in showing the road that leads to the Land of Promise, the Land of Freedom and Justice for All and Special Privilege for None.

"At the Dawn of the Year."

Under this head the Chicago "Inter-Ocean" sends greetings on New Year's day, to its readers and patrons as follows:

"The United States of America turns the page of the new year at peace with all the world, successful in all its enterprises, and with its people rejoicing in material prosperity and moral enlightenment.

"Despite the shadow of that great national sorrow which fell upon it when William McKinley was struck down, the nation faces the coming year without misgivings. Grave problems and great tasks are before it, abroad, at home, and in its new possessions. Selfish influences are to be overcome and the pillars of progress and freedom advanced and more firmly set. Yet the people look back and see few failures and many successes, and graver dangers than any now threatening, triumphantly repelled.

"From the past and from their own rectitude of purpose they draw the fairest and fullest hopes for the future. They firmly believe that the Divine guidance which has blessed their efforts will not fail them now. They look upward and forward and highly resolve that 'government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth,' but in this and succeeding years of the twentieth century shall live and grow as never before to bless mankind."

As a sample of modern journalism this brief article—presumably by the editor, George W. Hinman, deserves more than a passing notice.

The first statement is that the United States is "at peace with all the world." From the standpoint of an "administration organ" this is doubtless true. We are at peace with England, with Russia, Germany and other governments that like ourselves are engaged in plundering and murdering the weak and helpless—those whose only crime is that they desire to manage their own affairs in their own way.

"With all the world."

This is tantamount to saying that only those nations that have armies and navies powerful enough to make themselves feared, should be reckoned as part of "the world." The smaller and weaker tribes, races of people who have no such equipment, have no rights that the great predatory brigands—who divide up the earth among themselves—are in any wise bound to respect.

To show what "at peace with all the world" means a special dispatch to the Chicago "Chronicle," dated December 26, gives the charges made by Josiah Olb, the "Atlanta Constitution's" special correspondent in the Philippines, in which dispatch the statement is made that "the highly civilized and humane methods that characterized the gentle Weyler in Cuba are being resorted to by the American army in its efforts to subject the Visayans of the island of Cebu, of Borol, and would be put into effect in Samar if the conditions were favorable. . . . Gen. Hughes believes that 'war is hell' and he is giving the people of Cebu a taste of brimstone."

Proceeding, this correspondent of the best known paper, perhaps, in all the South, says:

"The people of the United States have no conception of the conditions prevailing down here. If they had a howl would go up from one end of the country to the other. Army officers tell of these things in confidence, but nothing is said with the idea that it shall get to the outside world. I have no doubt that when this appears in the Constitution there will be a chorus of denials, and yet I am writing only that which I get from the very best authority.

"General orders have been issued that whosoever shall in any way give aid and comfort to the enemy shall be visited with dire punishment; that his house shall be burned over his head and that he himself shall be dealt with as severely as is possible.

"The officer commanding the battalion over on Bohol has been given instructions to kill off everybody suspected of connection with the insurgents. He has been told that these orders give him the widest latitude: that he is not to be very particular whether the suspect is bearing arms or has been; if he is a suspect he is to be treated as an outlaw and shot down. The people are to be brought in from the country and cooped up in the towns. Those who refuse to come are to be hunted down."

Mr. Olb gives accounts of "many villages burned and innocent lives taken. . . . wholesale attacks upon native women by American soldiers," etc. Louis F. Post in the "Public," Chicago, copies from the letter of a private soldier in the Philippines, dated October, 1901, in which he gives an account of a raid he had just been engaged in, saying, "we ravaged the country with fire and sword. . . . We had a glorious time lately. . . . We got orders to start out and raise h—l. We did. Our progress could be traced by burning shacks [houses]. If a bird wants to follow our trail he will have to have a commisariat."

And this is what the Chicago "Inter-Ocean" means by

"peace with all the world, and successful in all its enterprises, and with its people rejoicing in material prosperity and moral enlightenment."

What kind of "moral enlightenment" is that which engages in wholesale slaughter of people on the opposite side of the globe, against whom our soldiers can have no possible grudge? and at the cost of thousands of lives on our part and hundreds of millions of money to be paid, sooner or later, out of the hard earnings of our own ill-paid working people—men, women and children?

* * *

"Rejoicing in material prosperity."

Yes, it is doubtless true that "stock transactions" and "bank clearings" show a greater degree of "national prosperity" than ever before, but whose prosperity is it that is shown by these "chronometers of business conditions"?—quoting the Chicago "Chronicle."

Evidently it is the prosperity of those who deal in "stocks," and who are rich enough to do business with banks. Does it show prosperity for the great mass of wage-earners whose living expenses—flour, meal, meat, vegetables, coal, etc., are constantly advancing in price, with no corresponding advance in wages?

The national prosperity spoken of so much by the plutocratic press, shows simply, when properly analyzed, that, by a more cunning use of the power they have gained over labor the parasitic classes have been able to squeeze more of the earnings out of the real producers of wealth than they have ever been able to squeeze out of them before.

"Shadow of the great national sorrow." While there are probably few Americans that did not regret the tragical death of William McKinley, some of us find it hard to feel greater sorrow for the bereavement of his widow and his friends, personal and political, than we feel for the bereavement of the wives, children, and other friends of the thousands of soldiers—both American and Filipino—slain in a war for which the same William McKinley was mainly responsible; a war that had no better excuse on our part than political ambition and commercial greed.

* * *

To be frank and honest, rather than narrowly patriotic and "loyal," it is doubtless true that many of us feel far greater sympathy and sorrow for the condition in which thousands of Filipino widows and orphans are left by the tragical death of their husbands and fathers who fell bravely fighting against what to them was one of the most cruel and inexcusable of all invasions known to human history, than it is possible for us to feel for the condition of one woman—no orphan children—whose husband left her the possessor of a luxurious home, an unencumbered estate worth a quarter of a million, besides mining stock which is now reported to be immensely valuable.

* * *

As some of us see it, it is just this tendency on the part of the great majority of American journals of opinion to exalt and magnify the personality, the interests, the rights, and the wrongs, of the select and elect few, over those of the great mass of mankind, that is the most discouraging of all the discouraging features in the outlook of the incoming century.

It is just such utterances as those we have quoted in this article, put forth as by authority in the leading city dailies and popular magazines of the country, that convince us that the leaders of public opinion are either themselves deluded, hypnotized, in the interest of monarchy and aristocracy, or that they are consciously trying to delude and hypnotiz their readers into submission to the change by which the "government of the people, by the people and for the people" is to become—if it has not already become—a government of the few, by the few and for the few.

M. HARMAN.

Philosophic Anarchism and Scientific Socialism.

A subscriber and old-time friend of Lucifer writes us as follows:

EDITOR LUCIFER.—In No. 896 you demand definitions and exact quotations as the only basis of argument—then yourself immediately ignore the rules to which you appeal. Laws which now violate liberty, justice and equality you condemn as "state-socialistic." Will you please give your reason for doing so? What writer known to be a state socialist can you cite who favors the granting of privileges to individuals (which the laws you mention do)? If you investigate you will find them all opposed to these laws.

You say: "I see very little difference between the goal of Philosophic Anarchism and that of Scientific Socialism. They both mean liberty and justice for all and privileges for none."

"Scientific," means knowledge verified by experiment. All the Socialism, that is, collective ownership of wealth, now known to the world, which is in any degree successful, is that undertaken by the state or its subdivisions called counties, cities, etc. There is not a single case of "voluntary socialism" as you term it, that is a well-established success; yet this is the sort which you identify with "Scientific Socialism," and which you think will soonest lead to the Co-operative Commonwealth. Common-wealth as illustrated by our pavements, lights, water supply, mails, which need not invade any one, etc., seem to me the logical beginning of the new order. You ask that we put aside the laws of evolution as well as experience and take for our model such puny and futile attempts as Oneida, Ruskin, or "Home," which many have abandoned finding better opportunities even in the disorder of the old system. C. F. H.

If our friend will read again the article in No. 896, headed "Quote Fair, Socialists," he will see that I made no attempt to quote from any author calling himself "State-Socialistic." The only place in which this term was used in that article is when it was said, "Competition is denied and defeated by the State-Socialistic laws in regard to money, land, trade, (tariffs) and patents (monopoly of ideas)."

Is it not plain as "the nose on a man's face" that reference is made by these words to our PRESENT laws in regard to money, etc? In the sense in which I used the term, every member of the Republican party, also most Democrats, Populists, etc., are State-Socialists. Our present postal service is often pointed out as proof of the advantages of state socialism. Our land laws, money laws, tariff laws, patent and transportation laws, are scarcely less state-socialistic in character than are the postal laws. Though not so apparent to the superficial observer, the invasions, the injustice, the robberies, committed under each and all of these laws are traceable to their state-socialistic features quite as logically and surely as the invasions, the injustice, the robberies committed under sanction of the postoffice department can now be traced to its state-socialistic features.

* * *

The criticism in regard to the term "scientific," is not without plausibility. What I had in mind would have been better expressed by the term "Ideal Socialism," or equitable or fraternal socialism, as against the inequitable, the partialistic, the paternal, or—as Beecher called it—the INFERNAL socialism we now have. Since we are hearing so much of "Christian Science," "Mental Science," "Psychic Science," "Occult Science," etc., etc., the word science itself has become discredited coin.

Brother C. F. H. says "Scientific means knowledge verified by experiment," evidently meaning that there may be knowledge that is NOT so verified. To my thinking there is no knowledge apart from experiment—that is, no knowledge outside of, independent of, experience—either of our own senses or that of others.

But that which is satisfactory knowledge, science, to one mind is not such to another mind; what is success to one mind is failure to another. What is orderly arrangement to one is chaos to another.

* * *

For illustration: To the old Feudal Barons feudalism was orderly arrangement of the social relations. To their minds it was the best possible solution of the Social Question, using this phrase in its largest sense, as including the political and moralistic or ethical relations. To the slave-owner of the southern states of the Federal Union, chattel slavery for the African, with no rights that the white man is bound to respect, was the ideal relation, the only orderly relation of the two races. To our present-day captains of industry wage-slavery for the masses, with long hours of toil, a subsistence wage and "nothing to arbitrate," is the natural, the only "scientific" solution of the industrial problem.

* * *

Our critic thinks "the laws of evolution" have discredited the plan of voluntary co operation, by the failure "of such puny and futile attempts as Oneida, Ruskin and 'Home.'" No one claims any of these experiments as triumphant solutions of the socialistic problem; none of them, perhaps, have achieved complete success, but as prophecies of the future, as object lessons in protest against the monarchic, the feudalistic, the oligarchic and aristocratic tendencies of our present political, industrial and ethical systems, none of them have been failures; and the fact that more experiments in the line of co-operative individualism and voluntary collectivism are now being made than ever before, is one of the most hopeful signs of the times.

* * *

"Commonwealth as illustrated by our pavements, lights etc." If it be COMMONWEALTH to arrange it so that a few schemers can make enormous fortunes out of public service, while the men who do all the hard labor in building and operating the public utilities get a bare subsistence, as now, then I do not know the meaning of the phrase commonwealth. And as long as "franchises" and public appointments generally are made the meed of "loyalty to party," just so long the present enormous discrepancies between rewards of the "corporation boss" and "the franchise" holder, on the one hand, and of the men they employ to do the hard work on the other, will continue to exist.

To suppose that the abuses of power will grow less, and that the gulf that now separates the holder of privilege from him who has only his wage-earning capacity to sell will ever grow less so long as government-of-man-by-man—"the state"—exists, is to deny the lessons of experience, the lessons of all human history.

* * *

Yes, "State-Socialism"—with the authoritarian state LEFT OUT—may be a good thing, but so long as compulsory government exists the tendency of social evolution will be away from equity and justice and towards concentration of power and privilege in the hands of the few.

How to eliminate the authoritarian state and inaugurate voluntary socialism and co-operative individualism—in other words, how to put manhood, womanhood, above the soulless, conscienceless machine called the state, instead of the state above manhood and womanhood, as now, is perhaps the supreme problem for the consideration of our socialistic and anarchistic reformers for the incoming year and the incoming century.

M. HARMAN.

Our Carnival of Crime and Vice.

Whether the annual holiday season known as Christmas and New Year is productive of any good may well be questioned, but that it is the occasion of much crime and vicious indulgence is beyond doubt. The following item clipped from a city daily is suggestive:

"It was not exactly 'peace on earth, good will toward men' everywhere in the United States on Christmas day. In many places there seems to have been absolute ignorance of or studied indifference to the angelic message. The press reports contain statements of at least sixty murders, growing more or less directly out of the celebration of Christmas. It is likely almost as many more were committed in places remote from the telegraph and railroad as part of the celebration when Christmas cheer had developed into inebriation, altercation and assault."

How much the religious superstitions connected with Christ-mass have to do with the usual mid-winter carnival of crime and vice may be a matter of conjecture, but that their influence is evil far more than good, can scarcely be doubted by those who give serious thought to the subject. A religion that teaches salvation by GIFT and FAITH, instead of by honest, manly, self-reliant effort, naturally encourages SHIFTLESSNESS, slavish dependence, vicious self-indulgence, with the not unreasonable accompaniment of recklessness as to the personal and property rights of others.

M. HARMAN.

To Those Who Have Paid for My Book.

In August last the promise was made that the autobiography of M. Harman would probably be ready for delivery about New Year's Day. The new year is here and the book not ready.

Cause first: Poor health. Second, the assassination of McKinley—causing such a furore against radical journals that it was deemed best that Lucifer's editor should devote his time and energy to the paper, and let other literary work wait awhile longer.

Now that the storm seems to have spent its fury, the work on the book will be resumed, but no promises as to when it will be ready. All that can be said now is that the writer will do the best he can. Meantime the offer stands open to return money to subscribers, or to send other literature instead.

M. HARMAN.

VARIOUS VOICES.

S. A. Stern, San Diego, Cal.:—Wherever I see a progressive mind I give or send Lucifer, so enclose 25 cents for which please send "The Prodigal Daughter" and Lucifer 13 weeks to enclosed address.

Henry Bool, Ithaca, N. Y.:—For the $2.25 enclosed please send me two copies of "What is Property?" and as many copies of Nos. 896 and 897 as you can. Walker's article in those numbers is excellent, and I want to hand out a few. I have placed three Anarchist volumes in the Cornell University Library, and if "What is Property?" is not there it will be as soon as I get them. Your work on Lucifer at this time is worthy all praise.

[Our stock of "What is Property?" is exhausted, we are sorry to say. If any of our readers have copies of this work for sale or exchange, we should be pleased to hear from them.]

L. H. Earle, Germantown, Pa.:—A book which ought, I should think, be in Lucifer's library is the "Psychology of Sex," by Havelock Ellis. The authorities of my library will not permit me to take it from their shelves, though they have it. There are many valuable works on the shelves of libraries which I find librarians unwilling to give out—to a woman, at least. I am thus hampered in my reading, my means not permitting me to buy all my books. Lucifer helps all it can, thank God!

[We have Vols. I. and II. of the "Psychology of Sex" in our collection of books. But they are difficult to obtain, and though not yet prosecuted in this country, it might be dangerous to sell them. Hence we do not advertise them for sale. L. H.]

Wanted.

"Common Sense Theology," by D. Howland Hamilton.
"What Is Property?" by Proudhon.
"The Truth About Love."
State condition and price. Cash paid or other books given in exchange, by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; Is What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c. For Sale at this Office.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time-worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

A Dictionary of Dreams. Dr. H Greer. 125 pages. 10c.
A Short View of Great Questions. Orlando J. Smith. Cloth 15c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs 5c
Everybody Made Happy. C Orchardson. 4c.
Free Trade. E. H. Heywood. 15c
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.
Geology and the Bible. W. W. Collins. 5c.
Government Analyzed. Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Health Gems. Alice B. Stockham. 15c.
Hindu Wedding-Bells. Alice B Stockham. 15c.
How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.
In Defense of Emma Goldman. Voltairine de Cleyre. 3c.
Jehovah Interviewed; or, Orthodoxy from Headquarters. 3c.
Law and Gospel. G. W. Foote. 3c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 3c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booser. 10c.
Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 5c.
Pre-Natal Culture. Newton. 15c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George 327 pages. 10c.
Religion in the Republic. Mrs. M. A. Freeman. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Social Ethics. E. H Heywood. 15c
The Declaration of Independence. Robert G Ingersoll's great Centennial Oration. 2c.
The Dogs and the Fleas. By One of the Dogs. 275 pages. 10c.
The Folly of Prayer. G. W. Foote. 5c.
The Future Commonwealth, or What Samuel Balcom Saw In Scotsland. Albert Chavannes. 125 pages. 10c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
The Poisonet Tragedy. William Denton 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 5c.
The World's Parliament of Religions. Daniel K. Tenney. 5c.
Truth Seeker Annual for 1893. Illustrated. 10c. (Postage 5c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty. 85 pages. 10c.
Universal Religion, J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Up to Date. Coin's Financial School Continued. 200 pages. 10c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
ANARCHIST MORALITY. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA. The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth. $1.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 628 pages. 25c.
CHURCH PROPERTY. Should it be Exempt from Taxation? Reasons why it should not. An argument for equality of taxation and a statement of facts, giving, from the census of 1890, the value, by denomination, of Church Property in the United States and in the several States and Territories, and in all cities having 25,000 or more inhabitants; so arranged as to show at a glance the relative standing as to wealth of the leading denominations and denominational groups. Also much other matter of interest. A handy and ready reference. 25c.
FIELDS, FACTORIES AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 288 pages. 25c. Postage, 5c.
GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.
INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "His Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.
KORAIMNE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.
LEAVES OF GRASS. Including Sands at Seventy; Good-Bye, My Fancy; Old Age Echoes, and A Backward Glance O'er Travel'd Roads. Walt Whitman. With portrait of Author. 440 pages. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 50c. Postage, 10c.
LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1890). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.
MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.
MONOPOLY, or How Labor Is Robbed. William Morris. Illustrated. 5c.
NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.
PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.
STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.
THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Whedon and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.
THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.
THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.
THE PYRAMID OF TYRANNY. The School; The Church; The Press; The Police; The Law; The Army. F. Domela Nieuwenhuis. 5c.
THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1761, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.
THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.
THE TROUBADOURS AND COURTS OF LOVE. J. F. Bowtetham. Cloth. 250 pages. $1.50. Postage, 10c.
USEFUL WORK VERSUS USELESS TOIL. William Morris. 5c.
VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.
WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. Susan H. Wixon. 5c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the article on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa.; several other half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $1.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 50c; paper 15c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. B. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (B. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BURNING BITTER BABES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 330 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marsian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 40c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A. Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny; Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Varietists; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression; Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 20c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayen" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 386 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 50c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 307 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 221 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and ascetism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 20 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

TOCOLOGY FOR MOTHERS. A medical guide to the care of their health and the management of their children. Albert Westland, M. D. American edition edited by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 350 pages; illustrated. In cloth, $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 42 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 173 pages. 25c.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

X
Rec
934
Jan. 1902 Dec.
1903
RBR
E
f#808
Jan. 1902 -
Dec 1903

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 1. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 16, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 900

THE CHARACTER OF A HAPPY LIFE.

How happy is he born or taught,
That serveth not another's will;
Whose armor is his honest thought,
And simple truth his highest skill.

Whose passions not his masters are;
Whose soul is still prepar'd for death;
Not ty'd unto the world with care
Of prince's ear, or vulgar breath;

Who hath his life from rumors freed;
Whose conscience is his strong retreat;
Whose state can neither flatterers feed,
Nor ruin make oppressors great:

Who envies none, whom chance doth raise,
Or vice; who never understood
How deepest wounds are given with praise
Nor rules of state, but rules of good.

This man is freed from servile bands
Of hope to rise, or fear to fall;
Lord of himself, though not of lands,
And having nothing, yet hath all.

—Sir Henry Wotton. (1567-1639.)

In the Market Place.

BY LAURA EARLE.

There came One to the market-place. His look was un-commercial, his clothing fanciful, his hair wild and free. He was evidently a Freak.

He sought standing room between the stalls, but the vendors of cabbage and cheese crowded their things together, and tried to shove him out. They roughly questioned him: "What would you sell?" "Sell?" he answered mildly, "I sell nothing. I would give." This aroused their ire, and they would have done him hurt, but that it was the hour of the change of the patrol, and there was no uniformed authority to uphold them. Then the Freak went a little further off, and took his stand unobtrusively among the sellers of clothing and cheap woollen materials. These looked at him askance, and asked him his business. He said, "I would give the purple flower of love, if there be any who would have it." Thereat they jeered and asked him, "Do you not know that this is a market, where goods are bought and sold? If your flower is good for anything it must have a price. Show it to us that we may judge if it have any value, and what you can sell it for." But the Freak shook his head sadly, and said, "The flower of love is worn on the heart of him who receives it as a gift; it dies of exposure; and price it never had."

The people now jeered and hooted more loudly, and, with gestures of violence called him a cheat and a libertine. Then panoplied Justice arose in majesty; for Justice sits in every market. And Justice pronounced, in rolling periods, that the voice of the people was law; that as the servant of the sovereign people and administrator of their law, he must check the spread of this spirit of lawless license. Who would say where it would end, if promiscuous giving were encouraged? It might eventually even destroy our sacred system of trade and barter, and thus sap the foundations of our liberty. Therefore Justice gave the Freak to the people to be torn; and bade that the flower he cherished be confiscated, and transplanted into the rich soil of the National Conservatories, where it might be observed and labelled by subsidized science, and where for a fat fee, the vulgar herd could glimpse its beauty.

As Justice decreed so it was done; at home by far as the Freak was concerned. The people tore him limb from limb; but the purple flower was never found, though many an inn searched for it. And thus men still go to the market-place buy love; where they are sure that panoplied Justice will secu the enforcement of the terms of the bargain.

Is Our Constitution a Rhetorical Lie?

The following was written by Edw. W. Chamberlain for Lucifer about twelve years ago when Lucifer was undergoing persecution similar to that endured by "Discontent" at Home, Washington, at the present time. Mr. Chamberlain's words are as timely now as then. L. H.

What a scathing commentary upon the existing state of affairs in this country is the language of Gen. Trumbull: "The constitution has hardly any existence in this country, except as rhetoric. . . . By virtue of its sublime promise to 'establish justice,' we have seen injustice done for nearly a hundred years. It answers very well for Fourth of Julying purposes; but as a charter of Liberty it has very little force." What a terrible arraignment of our institutions! What a humiliating confession of the failure of Americanism! And the worst of all is that it is true. Let us see. The constitution provides that a person accused of violating the law shall "be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation" against him. Not merely shall he be informed that there is an accusation against him; but he must be informed of the nature of it, and the cause of it. The purpose of this is to compel definiteness and precision in making accusations, so that no unfair advantage shall be taken of an accused. And yet, in spite of this provision, we see a public officer, sworn to support the constitution, and bound by the solemn obligations of his office to protect the rights of citizens under it, who so far forgets his oath and his duty, and moreover is so recreant to all sense of right, honesty and fairness, that he has drawn indictments against the editors of Lucifer, each containing ninety counts, with the manifest intention of so presenting his accusation against them that they should not be informed of its nature or cause, with the manifest intention to so befog and muddle the case that he may work upon the superstitious fears of an ignorant jury, and thus succeed in throttling free speech. He has already found a grand jury so ignorant or careless of their rights as to approve his infamous work in ninety counts. Will he find a petit jury so ignorant and a judge so corrupt, that his scheme shall succeed, and the editors of Lucifer be imprisoned on this mock indictment?

341001

The theory of the law is that a pleading is (1) to give notice of the claims of the party making it, (2) to make an issue, (3) to make a record. The indictments of Lucifer's editors are drawn with ingenious but dishonest skill in such a way that they do not answer the purposes of indictments at all. They give no notice of what act it is that the prosecution complains of. The defendants cannot in the nature of things intelligently join issue thereupon; and they are useless as records of any judicial proceeding that may be had upon them. They say practically to the defendants: "I charge you with doing an obscene act." "What have we done that is obscene?" The prosecution answers, "Oh, it is so obscene that we can't tell you for fear of shocking the modesty of the court!" The effect of this is to make the prosecutor the final judge of the question whether the matter is really so obscene that it would shock the court and pollute its records or not, and thus the accused comes into court bound hand and foot by the prejudice the prosecutor's decision has created.

It is lamentable that there are many judges of so little moral character that they stand ready to be shocked at a little public obscenity. These are just the judges upon whom no amount of private corruption can produce shock enough to prevent their participation in it. Their mock modesty reminds us of the case of the drowning swimmer, reported in the Massachusetts papers two or three years ago, who might have been rescued by a pleasure party near by in a rowboat, but the ladies of the party were shocked at the idea of seeing a naked man that they insisted on leaving the poor wretch to his fate. What a sacrifice these vile women made in their eagerness to appear virtuous. The courts in obscenity cases are making just that sacrifice to maintain a sham appearance of purity. What kind of a court is it that is so shocked that it can't hear the truth of an accusation or defense? The duty of courts is to administer justice, and for the purpose of doing so they ought not to consider their records as defiled by the introduction upon them of any matter which is necessary in order to enable the court to do justice. A defendant has a right to say that he shall have fair notice in order that he may not be prejudiced in defending himself. The idea that an accused is not to know what he is accused of because the records of the court should not be defiled by indecency is fanciful and imaginary. The records of a court of justice are not read with a view to entertainment or amusement and if there is any reason for indefiniteness in cases of obscenity why does it not apply to other offenses? A libel upon a private person is worse in its consequences than an obscene libel, yet who ever heard it claimed that a libel upon a private person need not be set forth in haec verba? Are courts shocked by the revolting stories of murders, rapes, and such crimes, to which they must of necessity listen? Are the records considered polluted by the recital of the details of the offenses?

There is no single case within the whole range of the law in which a court may not know what it is doing except the case of alleged obscenity. Then a great bugbear is conjured up, and all hands, under the pressure of an unaccountable superstition, gallop the prisoner off to jail without anyone having a very clear idea of what it is all about. It is much to the discredit of our American judiciary that this disregard of a constitutional right has been allowed to be woven into precedent to the extent that it has. The English courts take the more honest view. In the case of Bradlaugh vs. Reg. Judge Brambell says:

"I cannot follow the reasoning as to the advisability of the records of the court being kept pure. It seems to me that it is a reason which does not bear an examination, at all events it is not the law of England."

It is moreover shown in that case to be the law that "where the crime alleged in the indictment consists of words written or spoken the words are the facts which constitute the crime and for that reason must be set out."

In an indictment for murder it is not enough to say that the defendant committed murder, what he did must be so stated, so that if the acts so charged are proved to have been done it would be shown that he committed murder. So in the case of burglary it is not enough to allege that the accused committed burglary. The circumstances must be set forth showing how the crime was committed, and those facts must be sustained which constitute the crime. Why then in an indictment for any other offense should such a mock delicacy prevail as to prevent telling what is the offense? The ruling of the court in Bradlaugh's case should control in this country, for common sense is the same on both sides of the Atlantic. If that rule is the law of England there are a hundred times more reasons why it should be the law of the United States, and the chief of these reasons, beyond which it is not necessary to go, is that our constitution so declares it.

No decent person will ever be shocked at a statement of any fact in nature. It is always your impure rascal who is obtrusive in his modesty. It is always the harlot who sees men drawn because they are naked. It is always the corrupt judge who is so careful of the records of his court that he disregards constitutional rights. It is well that there are pure and noble men who, bearing all the opprobrium that blackguards could devise, have torn the mask from Comstockian hypocrisy. All honor to them, for their purity is so eminent that it need not be bolstered up by any hypocritical pretense. All honor to Charles Bradlaugh in England, and all honor to D. M. Bennett, Ezra H. Heywood, Dr. E. B. Foote and others who have valiantly battled and suffered martyrdom in America in their effort to make our constitution something more than a rhetorical lie.

"Responsible and Irresponsible Parenthood."

Many of Lucifer's readers know that the Manhattan Liberal Club of New York City is an organization for the attainment and diffusion of information on scientific, social, political, and religious subjects. It is, as far as I know, the only club in Greater New York which is not afraid of a plain discussion of the sex question. In fact, it is not afraid of any discussion and offers a free platform to all, so long as it can do so without endangering its existence. In this respect it is a unique organization. The Brooklyn Philosophical Association, which is perhaps the most prosperous Liberal organization in the United States, is doing good work, but its usefulness is hampered by "respectability."

Mr. Walker's masterly address on "Vice: Its Friends and Foes," which Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost has declared to be the best treatise he ever read on the subject, was originally delivered at the Liberal Club. Other lectures given at the club on the sex question during the last three years were by Lillian Harman, Mrs. Neymann, Miles M. Dawson, and Emma Goldman. The latest lecture on the same subject was delivered by Mrs. Almon Hensley on January 3. Mrs. Hensley is president of the Society for the Study of Life, and is a woman of broad views. I think that a report of her lecture will be of interest to the readers of Lucifer. The following is the substance of her address:

It is difficult to reconcile the general diffusion of knowledge with the criminal negligence in regard to parenthood. In raising cattle we consider the breed and time necessary to produce good stock, but in human relations we leave things to blind chance. Are we governed by laws different from those which control other animals? Some people say that nature is able to take care of herself. Yes, she can if we let her do so; but, owing to our ignorance, nature is outraged, and our offspring pay the penalty. All our fine flowers and fruit come through judicious selection and breeding; why can we not improve human beings in the same way?

We have separate standards of morality for man and woman. Instead of being proud of maternity, women are ashamed of it. As a result of our ignorance a third of our children die before they reach the age of three years; crime is on the increase, and our "reformers," instead of going to the root of the matter, are busy lopping off branches.

There is some radical wrong in our marriage system. If monogamy is the highest form of marriage, are the violators of the law criminals? Is divorce a friend or foe? Is it inimical to the offspring? It is true that the separation of parents is a loss to children, but what happiness can children expect to find in a home where the husband and wife hate each other? Will such children mature into good citizens? Some advocate separation with no right to remarry. This is hardly worth considering. Shall a person be punished for an error of judgment?

No woman has a right to bring into the world children unless they be children of love. It is not easy to define love, as certain transcendental and psychological elements enter into it. Roughly stated, it is a combination of desire, passion, and unselfishness. Love should be the starting point, the heritage of every child.

Every normal woman wants to have children by the man she loves; but woman will be sexually subservient so long as she is financially dependent. Make her economically independent, and she will not become a mother against her will.

Man pays careful attention to his profession; he studies every detail of it, but he makes no preparation for fatherhood. The question of initial heredity rests largely with the man. Let man see to it that when the child is conceived his mind dwells on beauty and purity. There should be a single standard of morality. Let no man seek pleasure in the arms of a prostitute if he demand the woman he love to be pure. There is a curious lack of responsibility in the male character. Man is willing to pollute his body for the sake of momentary pleasure, and he does not stop to think that the sins of "youthful indiscretion" are visited upon his children.

Children are kept by parents in ignorance, but do they remain so? They receive their knowledge from unclean sources. Put beautiful ideas of sex life into your child before it gets soiled. Give instructions when it asks a question. Suggestion is an important factor in the training of a child.

Ungovernable sex appetite is a disease, which will disappear in the era of knowledge. Let the well-meaning persons who shudder at the thought of divorce turn their attention to more serious dangers. The sexually inert, the worn-out, and hopeless have never given to the world one great thought or invention. The creative force should be used to advantage.

The stupidity of the present system of education for girls consists not in what is taught, but in what is left untaught. Our colleges are doing good work, but they do not take into account the responsibility of sex life. When a girl leaves college, she is an irresponsible, indifferent, ignorant being as far as motherhood is concerned. It is considered indelicate for girls to know something about motherhood; but what would we think of a soldier who would go to war without the slightest preparation? People talk of maternal instinct, but can maternal instinct distinguish between different foods for children? Women enter a relation upon which depend the life and death of the human race, and the majority of them are in the position of the woman who said that she knew all about children, for she had buried seven of them. The propagation of the human race should not be left to chance. There should be schools for parenthood. Free discussion should be encouraged. The primary step should be to avoid reproducing in our children our own blunders.

Some caution us against over-production, but, as a matter of fact, women suffer more from abortion, from attempts to destroy life in embryo, than from child-bearing. We need wisdom, discretion, and self-control. If we want our children to be great, we must be great ourselves. We must be true in action if we want to rise above mediocrity.

Mr. Wilson, who followed Mrs Hensley, stated that in order to have good children we must have happy mothers. It is important that women should feel happy during the period of pregnancy. In the time of the French Revolution many idiots were born in France on account of the fear of the mothers. An abused woman cannot be the mother of a superior child. Among the ancient Jews the first born was the favorite child, because it generally was a child of love. Mr. Wilson did not attach much importance to "selection." In the Oneida community, he said, the president used to select the parents, and the result was as poor a set of children as could be. Men who attend to propagating of cattle must consult the taste of the animals. The same is true of man.

Mr. Walker spoke of the obstacles put by society in the way of those who wish to diffuse sex knowledge. The whole forces of society and the powers that be stand squarely against the dissemination of such knowledge. It is impossible to reach the desired results when those who are engaged in giving information stand in the shadow of the prison.

Mrs. Scudamore made a plea for free motherhood. We sometimes see women who lack good care while pregnant and who, in spite of that, produce superior children. We censure the mothers of illegitimate children, we recognize that they are not responsible mothers, and so far we are right. But if the child is born of love and the woman realizes the responsibility of motherhood, we have no right to censure.

Mr. Rinn discussed the distinction between physical love and psychic love. Most men are on a physical plane. Some are governed by psychic impulses. The only attitude in which love should be approached is the psychic. Sex intercourse is only an incident. Love is based on moral qualifications outside of sex. There can be no single standard of morals, as that is contrary to nature. Men and women are different in their instincts: the male seeks, the female evades. As to heredity, we know that children inherit the physical characteristics of their parents, but it is not yet proven that mental qualities come by inheritance. There are numerous cases where criminals bring good children.

Mrs. Hensley took exception to some of Mr. Rinn's statements and said that the distinction between the masculine and feminine nature was not very great. The fact is, the man pursues and woman yields. Woman has an impelling desire to give. The normal woman is as strong sexually as the normal man is.

Mr. David Rousseau, who was the last speaker, called attention to the fact that some uncivilized races produce better children than highly civilized people do. He was in favor of freedom and the economic independence of women, which, he claimed, will be realized under Socialism.

And so, as the readers of Lucifer can see, the world moves, and the Manhattan Liberal Club contributes its share in helping its progress.

CYRUS W. COOLIDGE.

About the Slanderer.

You will often hear one woman say of another:

"That is a dangerous woman—she has a vicious tongue and talks scandal."

That other woman is dangerous, but she is dangerous only to herself.

A great many women, as well as a great many men, devote their energies and perverted ability to gossiping about others and seeking to ruin their characters.

The dealers in slander—and we wish to tell them so emphatically—succeed rarely in destroying anybody else's character. They succeed always in destroying their own.

If a woman talks lightly of another you may be sure that the fault which she ascribes to that other woman no longer shocks her.

The woman who says that another is immoral, or untruthful, or vain, or deceitful, has within herself, well developed, the possibility of all the vices that she ascribes to that other woman.

For your own sake beware of the woman who speaks ill of another.

So says the editor of the Hearst newspapers. Though exaggerated the statements are mainly true. Slander often does hurt the victim, but it does far greater injury to the one who uses it as a weapon against her (or his) enemy, for it is a great mistake to assume that the slanderer is confined to the feminine sex.

Vivisection and the Drug Delusion. Compiled by J. Winfield Scott. With a prefatory letter by Philip G. Peabody. Price 10 cents. For sale at this office.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

900.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

"A Century of Dishonor."

Our national Society for Minding Other People's Business, commonly called the Congress of the United States, has appointed a committee to report a bill to be enacted into law, or laws, for the "suppression of Anarchy." One of the measures advocated by Archists of all kinds—including ministers of the gospel of him who was executed for seditious utterances some nineteen hundred years ago, also including a number of editors who themselves are Anarchists in religious matters—is that of banishing all Anarchists to a "reservation" and compelling them to stay there as long as they live.

To say nothing of the horrible injustice of driving people away from the land of their birth for no crime except that of holding opinions that are not now popular with the leaders of church and state, it might not be amiss to investigate the history of the government that is expected to set apart an island, or other unoccupied tract of land, for the said Anarchists, and see how much prospect there is that these exiles would be permitted to enjoy the fruit of their labors if they should succeed in making their wilderness bud and blossom as the rose.

* * *

I have lately been reading a book that gives a summary of the dealings of the United States government, for the last hundred years, with the various tribes or nations of people called Indians—people who, as described by Thomas Jefferson, had no government of authority or of force, but whose political status was said, by that distinguished author, to be "without government."

This book, written by a woman, is called "A Century of Dishonor." It is published by Harpers & Brothers, of New York. Its Preface is by Bishop Whipple of Minnesota, with an Introduction by Julius H. Seelye, President of Amherst college.

Bishop Whipple correctly sums the matter up when he says "The Indian Bureau represents a system which is a blunder and a crime," and President Seelye is equally emphatic in fixing the blame when he avers that "The great difficulty with the Indian problem is not with the Indian but with the Government and people of the United States."

In like manner some future historian, when reviewing the Anarchist troubles will be compelled to say: "The great difficulty with the Anarchist problem is not with the Anarchists, but with the Government and people of the United States."

* * *

Lack of space will prevent an extended review or even synopsis of the book, "A Century of Dishonor." Instead of trying to review it I purpose to give some extracts from the author's sketch of the treatment to which one only of the more noted of the Indian tribes has been subjected by the Government and people of the United States.

The ancestral home of the Cherokees was in what might truly be called the Switzerland of America—the Appalachian chain of mountains, running parallel with the Atlantic coast. The southern end of this chain lies within the borders of the political divisions now called Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee. Here, in a climate noted for its healthfulness, amid scenery of surpassing beauty and loveliness, the Cherokees had lived for many generations, and, naturally enough were strongly attached to their ancestral home. Unlike most Indian tribes they were an agricultural people, had built for themselves comfortable and even beautiful houses to live in, with barns for their live stock, and other conveniences of civilized life. They had established schools for their children and even published a paper, called the "Phœnix."

By successive treaties with the United States they had given up most of their lands, making it all the more necessary that they depend on agriculture instead of the chase for livelihood. By the last of these treaties, that of 1817, the promise was made "that the United States will give to every head of an Indian family residing on the east side of the Mississippi, who may wish to become a citizen, 'a reservation of six hundred and forty acres of land, in which they will have a life estate, with a reversion in fee simple to their children.'"

Continuing the author says: "What imagination could have foreseen that in less than twenty years the chiefs of the Cherokee nation would be found piteously pleading to be allowed to remain undisturbed on these very lands? . . . . There will come a time in the remote future, when to the student of American history, it will seem well nigh incredible."

It was simply the old, old story—old yet ever new; the story of the white man's conscienceless greed and of the Government's helplessness, or—more correctly speaking—the Government's PERFIDIOUSNESS when called upon to redeem its pledges, its promise to see that justice is done to the weak and defenseless.

* * *

In 1791 Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State, writing to General Knox, thus defined the position of the United States in the matter of the Indian lands:

> "Government should firmly maintain this ground that the Indians have a right to the occupation of their lands, independent of the States within whose chartered lines they happen to be; that until they cede them by treaty no act of a State can give a right to such lands. . . . . The Government is determined to exert all its energy for the patronage and protection of the rights of the Indians."

The year before, 1790, General Washington had said to the Six Nations:

> "In future you cannot be defrauded of your lands. No State or person can purchase your lands unless at some public treaty held under the authority of the United States. The General Government will never consent to your being defrauded; but will protect you in all your just rights. . . . . You possess the right to sell, and the right of refusing to sell your lands. . . . . The United States will be true and faithful to their engagements."

Proceeding with this shameful story—the story of national perfidy and invasion of those who were too weak or too peacefully inclined to resist, our author says:

> "What could Cherokee men and women have thought when only thirty years later they found this United States Government upholding the State of Georgia in her monstrous pretensions of right to the whole of their country, and in her infamous cruelties of oppression towards them? when they found the United States Government sending its agents to seduce and bribe their chiefs to bargain away their country; even stooping to leave on the public records of official instructions to a commissioner such phrases as these: Appeal to the chiefs and influential men—not together, but apart, at their own houses; 'make offers to them of extensive reservations in fee simple, and other rewards, to obtain their acquiescence;' 'the more careful you are to secure [conceal] from even the chiefs the official character you bear, the better;' 'enlarge on the advantage of their condition in the West: There the government would protect them.'" "This the Secretary of War called 'moving on them in the line of their prejudices.'"

* * *

It is the common observation of students of human nature that what is called patriotism, or love of home and native land, is developed to a far greater degree in the inhabitants of mountainous countries than in the dwellers upon more level lands. This fact was most pathetically illustrated in the case of the Cherokees, as stated by the author of "A Century of Dishonor:"

> "Never did mountaineers cling more desperately to their homes than did the Cherokees. The State of Georgia put the whole nation in duress, but still they chose to stay. Year by year high handed oppressions increased and multiplied; military law reigned everywhere; Cherokee lands were surveyed, and put up to be drawn by lottery; missionaries were arrested and sent to prison for preaching to the Cherokees; Cherokees were sentenced to death by Georgia juries, and hung by Georgia executioners. Appeal after appeal to the President and to Congress for protection produced only reiterated confessions of the Government's inability to protect them—reiterated proposals to them to accept a price for their country and move away. Nevertheless they clung to it. A few hundreds went, but the body of the nation protested and entreated. There is nothing in history more touching than the cries of this people to the Government of the United States to fulfill its promises to them. And their cause was not without eloquent advocates. When the bill for their removal was before Congress, Frelinghuysen, Sprague, Robbins, Starr, Ellsworth, Evans, Huntington, Johns, Bates, Crockett, Everett, Test—all spoke warmly against it; and to the credit of Congress be it said, the bill passed the Senate by only one majority."

Jermiah Evarts, in the "National Intelligencer," says our historian, "gave a masterly analysis and summing up the case, recapitulated the sixteen treaties which the Government had made with the Cherokees, all guaranteeing to them their lands, and declared that the Government had 'arrived at the bank of the Rubicon' where it must decide if it would or would not save the country from the charge of bad faith."

The Rubicon was passed, and the brand of bad faith indelibly fixed upon the escutcheon of the United States of America.

* * *

In "The Phœnix," the Cherokees' own paper, the suffering and despair of the nation were voiced in editorials of which this paragraph is a sample:

> "If the United States shall withdraw their solemn pledges of protection, utterly disregard their plighted faith, deprive us of the right of self-government, and wrest from us our land, then in the deep anguish of our misfortunes, we may justly say there is no place of security for us, no confidence left that the United States will be more just and faithful toward us in the barren prairies of the West than when we occupied the soil inherited from the Great Author of our existence."

* * *

The Cherokees carried their case to the Supreme Court of the United States, only to meet the fate of nearly all who have applied to that aristocratic and irresponsible tribunal in search of justice against outrageous wrong. Three out of five of the supreme judges decided that "an Indian tribe could not be considered a foreign nation, and therefore could not bring suit."

This is tantamount to saying that the Indian has no standing, no recourse for justice, in an American court, for—as stated by Bishop Whipple—"the executive, the legislative and the judicial departments of the Government recognize that he has a possessory right in the soil, but his title is merged in the tribe—the MAN has no standing before the law."

* * *

Then came the eviction, the removal by Gen. Scott and two thousand United States soldiers, of the remnant of the Cherokees—part having already accepted what to them seemed the inevitable and had gone to the reservation assigned to them in what is now called the Indian Territory, west of the Mississippi; a land that to them was simply a "barren waste," so unlike their native mountains and wooded hills, with their springs and brooks of clear and cold water, with their comfortable homes and fields and orchards—that to the minds of the poor Indians it was going into the desert to perish of hunger, thirst and wild beasts.

The "Manifold Cyclopedia" says of this national shame:

> "Georgia outlawed them, the supreme court denied their appeal and the United States government, after confessing its inability to fulfill obligations of its own assuming, made a treaty in 1835 with a small minority of the tribe for the removal of the whole, then some 27,000. John Ross and his followers objected, but yielded under the persuasion of General Scott and 2,000 soldiers sent to effect the transfer."

* * *

To follow the fortunes of the Cherokees in their banishment from their beautiful ancestral homes in the "garden spot" of the renowned Appalachians to the drouth-stricken plains of the far west, would take too much of our limited space. The author of "A Century of Dishonor"—Helen Hunt Jackson whose name is known, loved and honored by many thousands of readers and personal friends—has passed beyond the scenes of mortal strife and of national wrongs. The appendix to her book brings the history of the Indians down to the summer of 1880, and includes the correspondence of Mrs. Jackson with Carl Schurz, then Secretary of the Interior, in regard to the methods and policy of the Interior Department. A correspondence that should be read by every American.

M. HARMAN.

The Madness of Archism.

The "stamping out" methods proposed by Archists remind us forcibly of the old Latin saying, "Whom the gods destroy they first make mad."

Edward J. Prindle, in the Springfield (Mass.) "Republican," of recent date, shows the folly, if not the insanity, of men such as Hoar of Massachusetts. His article, in part, reads as follows:

> "One clause of Senator Hoar's bill provides for the infliction of the death penalty for an unsuccessful attempt to kill the president, but this clause is not particularly complimentary to the senator's astuteness, for it must at once appear to any one who stops for a moment to consider the matter that the inevitable and only effect of this particular clause, if enacted into law, will be to make the assassin make doubly sure that his work is thoroughly done; for no one, even an Anarchist—would wish to throw away his life in a vain attempt to accomplish a given result. Therefore I apprehend that the only result that this particular clause of the bill will accomplish will be the one I have specified.
>
> "Superficial thinkers and practically the great majority of people—who do not think at all—are prone to look at Anarchy as a sort of political disease, but the really deep student of such questions knows better. He knows full well that Anarchy is but the outward expression or symptom of a deeper-lying cause, and that for the latter he must go deeper into the matter than demagogs would have us believe. We of America are rapidly growing into a condition which has so long prevailed in the old world, and I for one can see nothing strange in the fact that such outbursts of violence are beginning to show themselves here; for all must admit the general truth that like effects are pretty certain to follow like causes.

"Anarchy is but the outward expression of the discontent and resentment that is permeating the masses of the people, the logical and inevitable consequence of the injustices and iniquities with which our social and industrial system is saturated. Force can never suppress Anarchy. The history of other countries proves this. In Russia, where Anarchy has been dealt with more savagely than in any other country in the world, perhaps, it is more widespread today than it ever was before, so far as the number of its adherents is concerned.

"If the governing classes of this and all other nations really desire to suppress Anarchy, they have only to remove the conditions which breed it, and the thing is done. But since it is only on the existence and activity of these very conditions that their continued tenure of rule is possible, we may look in vain for a voluntary relinquishment of them. What then? Like Henry George, 'I only fear that the dam will hold till the flood arises to fury.'

"In conclusion, lest I be misunderstood, I wish to say that I am neither an Anarchist nor a sympathizer thereof, but I have written these few words from the standpoint of a student of these and kindred questions."

It is plainly not necessary that a man be an Anarchist to see that the ruling classes are now—as always—"between the devil and the deep sea."

If, as Mr. Prindle says, the governing classes really desire to suppress Anarchy—by which of course he means revolutionary violence—"they have only to remove the conditions that breed it, and the thing is done." But these governing classes, as shown by Mr. Prindle, know full well that their own position as rulers depends upon the continuance of the evils—the poverty, the inequalities, the vices and crimes, of our present society. If there were no poverty, no injustice, no vice and crime there would be no need of rulers.

From this showing it is clearly seen that the continuance of present societary evils are necessary to the existence of rulership over man by man, and yet no ruler is safe from assassination while the evils exist.

The position then of the Archist is something like this:

"You can and you can't;
You will and you won't;
You'll be damned if you do;
You'll be damned if you don't."

M. HARMAN.

American Press-Writers' Association.

The New Year finds the Association growing in membership and importance as never before; only yesterday an application for membership came from Honolulu, from a member of the Territorial Legislature. The event however of most interest was a meeting, or conference of the Boston members, the first I believe of its kind in the history of the Association. Bro. J. T. Small came up from Provincetown, and was chosen chairman while the writer acted as secretary. This was my first opportunity to see and converse with a real live Anarchist, and as I sat beside this sterling specimen of good old New England manhood, Senator Hoar's Island colony came to mind, and I thought if a few thousand such men and women as Bro. Small's personality typifies, could be transported to such an Island we would soon have a new race or branch of the human family.

On motion of Bro. Hutcheson it was voted to appoint a committee of three to investigate the recent hold-up of "Discontent" at the Tacoma post office, and draft suitable resolutions to express our views on the matter. The new "Truth and Common Sense Club" and its promoters were also considered by the conference and a volunteer committee named for further work in that connection. Dr. Pfeiffer kindly donated the use of "Our Home Rights" headquarters as a place of meeting for the local members at any time. Some twenty-five Press Writers will edit departments on their special lines in the enlarged January number of "Our Home Rights" and a half tone cut of each writer will embellish the heading of their department which will make O. H. R. the Press-Writers' Magazine.

NEW MEMBERS.

199 c. Wickersham, Enoch, Greenville, Ohio.
200 b. Herald, F. H., 215 Stimson Block, Los Angeles, Calif.
201 b. Rattray, Rev. Benjamin Franklin, Room 6, 247 Washington St. Boston, Mass.
202 b. Beeson, James, Hytop, Ala.
203 b. Brigham, M. A., 218 Tremont St., Boston, Mass.
204 a. Emmeluth, John, 227-229 King St., Honolulu, H. I.
205 f. Reed, L. G., New York, N. Y. donation $2.

CORRECTION.

119 c. O'Brien, F. F., 3 Maywood St., Roxbury, Mass.
158 f. Varteyl, Gerrad, 274 W. 25th. St. New York, N. Y. donation $1.
95 f. Livesey, Elias, 22 E. Lexington St. Baltimore, Md. donation $6.
181 c. Langston, Laura J., Paonia, Delta Co., Colorado.
193 c. Bordman, S. I. 14 Main St., Charlestown, Mass.

A. C. ARMSTRONG, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester, Mass.

VARIOUS VOICES.

Ed. Secrest, Randolph, Kansas:—I notice by my tab that my subscription has expired. Find within $1 for Lucifer's renewal, with my hearty compliments of the season to the editor and family. Lucifer has done its duty bravely this last year. Its fearless utterances during the hot and sulphurous period following the murder of President McKinley, has endeared it to all truth loving, truth seeking souls.

F. S. Harman, Lawton, O. T.:—My object in writing this is to inform Lucifer's friends that claims here in the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache country are selling cheap, some of them at least. The prices are from $100 to $2,500 per quarter section; good claims can be bought for about $500. We think that during the next sixty days will be the time to buy cheap.

I will gladly answer any inquiries that Lucifer's friends wish to make regarding this country.

A. W. Yeater, 510 Oxford Bldg., Chicago:—Enclosed find $1 for subscription to Lucifer for one year. I like to encourage all outspoken periodicals when I can, even though I do not agree with all those who write for same.

I have a good many letters in the Chicago dailies, some of them touching on the "sex problem," though most of my articles on that subject are too "radical" for publication in daily papers, and even those that are published are made to appear very "tame" before they get away from the editor's blue pencil.

The "mock modesty" of the sanctimonious hypocrites must be attacked from all quarters, and the subject of sex relations treated scientifically. If we are genuine "truth seekers" we will never take offense when people oppose our theories, but only show by facts and logic that our theories are right or admit our errors. Too many people accept certain statements as absolutely true, reason from them as premises, build philosophies with said premises as foundations, form organizations, write books or publish papers, and become dependent for their livings on maintaining the truth of their assertions. They then cease to seek truth, and merely seek arguments that will enable them to uphold their claims—and become hide-bound orthodox people, instead of liberals.

To the mind that is always open, looking for new facts and making the philosophy conform to same, new theories are always interesting as material to be torn to pieces and studied scientifically, but to the person who is trying to uphold preconceived opinions to which he is committed, every new theory is looked upon as an enemy to be destroyed, the more truthful it is the more dangerous it is considered to be, hence I am glad to see you are still liberal and keep your columns open to all sides. May you never become "orthodox" on a single proposition.

Wanted.

"Common Sense Theology," by D. Howland Hamilton.
"The Truth About Love."
State condition and price. Cash paid or other books given in exchange, by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

DO YOU EVER THINK

Of the fate of the Prodigal Daughter? The Prodigal Son is forgiven and received with rejoicing—why should different treatment be accorded to his sister? For a vivid, true picture of the conditions in homes and factories which produce thousands of so-called fallen women every year, read "The Prodigal Daughter; or, The Price of Virtue," by Rachel Campbell.

SPECIAL OFFER.

This valuable work sent free on receipt of twenty-five cents for a thirteen week's trial subscription to Lucifer, the Light-Bearer. M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton Street, Chicago, Ill.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 10c.
Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

A Dictionary of Dreams. Dr. R. Greer. 125 pages. 10c.
A Short View of Great Questions. Orlando J. Smith. Cloth 15c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.
Eureka. How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs. 5c.
Everybody Made Happy. C. Orchardson. 4c.
Free Trade. E. H. Heywood. 12c.
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.
Geology and the Bible. W. W. Collins. 2c.
Government Analyzed. Col. J. R. Kelso. 40c.
Health Germs. Alice B. Stockham. 12c.
Hindu Wedding-Bells. Alice B. Stockham. 12c.
How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.
In Defense of Emma Goldman. Voltairine de Cleyre. 3c.
Jehovah Interviewed; or, Orthodoxy from Headquarters. 3c.
Law and Gospel. G. W. Foote. 3c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall. 2c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Boozer. 10c.
Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 3c.
Pre-Natal Culture. Newton. 15c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 320 pages. 15c.
Religion in the Republic. Mrs. M. A. Freeman. 3c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of Industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Social Ethics. E. H. Heywood. 12c.
The Declaration of Independence. Robert G. Ingersoll's great Centennial Oration. 3c.
The Dogs and the Fleas. By One of the Dogs. 275 pages. 10c.
The Folly of Prayer. G. W. Foote. 3c.
The Future Commonwealth, or What Samuel Balcom Saw In Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 115 pages. 10c.
The God Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
The Pocasset Tragedy. William Denton. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore. 3c.
The World's Parliament of Religions. Daniel K. Tenney. 5c.
Truth Seeker Annual for 1893. Illustrated. 10c. Postage 5c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty. 85 pages. 10c.
Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls. 5c.
Up to Date. Coin's Financial School Continued. 210 pages. 15c.
Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
ANARCHIST MORALITY. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth. $1.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 436 pages. 50c.
CHURCH PROPERTY. Should It Be Exempt from Taxation? Reasons why it should not. An argument for equality of taxation and a statement of facts, giving, from the census of 1890, the value, by denomination, of Church Property in the United States and in the several States and Territories, and in all cities having 25,000 or more inhabitants; so arranged as to show at a glance the relative standing as to wealth of the leading denominations and denominational groups. Also much other matter of interest. A handy and ready reference. 5c.
FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 250 pages. 40c. Postage, 5c.
GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.
INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 17 Freethinkers, including Brunn, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Volney, and Voltaire. 25c.
KOSHADNIL. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.
LEAVES OF GRASS. Including Sands at Seventy; Good-Bye, My Fancy; Old Age Echoes, and A Backward Glance O'er Travel'd Roads. Walt Whitman. With portrait of Author. 446 pages. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 50c. Postage, 12c.
LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III. (1898). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.
MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.
MONOPOLY, or How Labor is Robbed. William Morris. Illustrated. 5c.
NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.
PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c. to 10c.
STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.
THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.
THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.
THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.
THE PYRAMID OF TYRANNY. The School; The Church; The Press; The Police; The Law; The Army. P. Dumela Nieuwenhuis. 5c.
THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1725, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of that order against the welfare of individuals and society. 15c.
THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.
THE TROUBADOURS AND COURTS OF LOVE. J. F. Rowbotham. Cloth. 250 pages. $1.50. Postage, 15c.
USEFUL WORK VERSUS USELESS TOIL. William Morris. 5c.
VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.
WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. Susan B. Wixon. 5c.
Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50.
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the lecture on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonnerville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tones of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 15c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Air, Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for all married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $1.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola) 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 25c.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DARWIN, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. 50c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN—THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, cloth and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 27 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 3-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A. and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and confuting the claims made by churchmen that the Christian church has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 15c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Clemens and David Overmyer. 20c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 5c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 519 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rose Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 192 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 5c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Marxian. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 21, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 45c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large, clear, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 479 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 30c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law: The Moloch of the Monogamic Ideal: The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyranny: Food and Sex Fallacies, a Criticism: When Men and Women Are and Where They Are Not Yardsticks: The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Hiding Behind Its Own Mistakes: Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce: Love: Its Attraction and Expression: Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts: Social Radicals and Parentage: Anthropology and Monogamy: Love and Trust Versus Fear: Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 30c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayer" on Man and Woman, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 286 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation; with original introduction; special cover; latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Orford Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsle, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $3.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Mariette), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Declared by all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 251 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediaeval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 20 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 50c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What it Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Will, from the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Telegt Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $2.25.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? C. W. W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 47 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 2, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by the great Freethinker. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 378 pages. 25c.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Price 2 Cents.

LUCIFER.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES: VOL. VI., NO. 2. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 23, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902] WHOLE NO 901

LIFE AND DEATH.

So he died for his faith. That is fine—
More than most of us do.
But say, can you add to that line
That he lived for it, too?

In his death he bore witness at last
As a martyr to truth.
Did his life do the same in the past
From the days of his youth?

It is easy to die. Men have died
For a wish or a whim—
From bravado or passion or pride.
Was it harder for him?

But to live—every day to live out
All the truth that he dreamt,
While his friends met his conduct with doubt
And the world with contempt.

Was it thus that he plodded ahead,
Never turning aside?
Then we'll talk of the life that he led.
Never mind how he died.

Ernest Crosby in "Conservator."

Dialogue Between the Machine Gun and the Mauser.

"H'm, h'm! Hot work and dusty," grumbled the Machine Gun as he blew a puff of powder grime from his black mouth. "I wish somebody would swab out my throat. That's the way with men. It's good old Destroyer when I'm doing dirty work for them, but when it's done I can take care of myself!"

"Hot work? Well, I've seen a little of it today myself," shrilled a voice by the side of the Gun, as a Mauser swelled to emulate his larger companion.

"Well, little brother," sniffed the Machine Gun, in contempt, "what have you done in the cause of civilization and humanity."

"O, not so much as yourself, great Destroyer, but quite a bit in my small way. Our captain went out to find an insurgent camp. We found them all right," and the Mauser leered. "One volley, and a charge sent them flying to the bush, the cowards! True, they had only bolos, and our command was armed with brothers of mine—and we send a ball through a man a mile away. Small good did it do them, the rebels! We surrounded the jungle, and some of us beat the tangle, driving the savages out in the open. Then there was fun. We popped them over as fast as they ran out. And the captain honored me by employing my services himself. The captain is a good hunter, but he said it was the finest sport he ever had. Like knocking over jackrabbits. Still it didn't seem just right to me to kill them just because they wanted independence. 'A thing very precious to Americans,' I heard the general say in a speech."

"You don't understand," growled the Machine Gun. "The Anglo-Saxons are the chosen people, and the other races were made to be exploited by them. Any who do not submit to be governed and taxed by the elect are desperate savages, and those who resist having the blessings of a Christian civilization thrust upon them are vicious barbarians, and must be exterminated!"

"It may be so! It may be so," piped the Mauser. "But tell me of your work in extending freedom."

"Well, my throat is pretty sore. Don't feel much like talking. My deeds speak for me. However, you seem to be a good little fellow, so I'll tell you a bit. About three hundred men left Cavite yesterday morning for the purpose of pacifying the country. I was taken out and burnished and oiled until I worked like a watch. O, I'm a great pacifier! Ha! Ha! The rebels I meet are always peaceful afterward. Then the colonel gave the order, and away we went. A score of men with ropes pulled me over mountains that are impassable for a horse. How the men cursed and growled as they toiled and sweated in dragging me along! But I repaid them well. Well, this morning, as we neared a village, a bullet hurtled out of the jungle, and down went a soldier who was walking by my side, with a hole drilled through his lungs. There, you may see a splash of his blood near my muzzle! Then the colonel swore an oath that he would teach the wretches a lesson, and he threw a cordon about the village. Then he ordered me brought up and placed so as to rake the clustered dwellings. I began to be impatient. How slow the gunner was! At last all was ready. How I leap to my work! The mad joy of destruction thrills me with wild exultation. I send out the balls in a perfect hurricane. Through the frail huts they crash, destroying all in them. Household goods, and living men, and women, too, I pierce, and they lie in a mass of wreckage together. From one hovel to another I am trained, leaving ruin in my track. The first house I swept was a little more substantial than the rest, and in it a woman crouched with an infant cradled in her arms. Crashing, tearing, rending, I sent a fury of deadly missiles through the flimsy walls, and one rent a great gaping wound in her side. She gasped once, and fell over on the earthen floor. After a while the little brown baby crawled out from beneath the prostrate woman and dabbled its tiny hands in the crimson blood that was forming a pool by the side of the dead. Then, with cooing sounds, it strove to awaken the silent mother. Ah! she was so still! The gray terror stole over the little dawning soul. Why did not the loving arms gather it to her bosom? It was so alone, so forsaken, so helpless! Then the horror became articulate, and it wailed. I had swept the other homes from existence. Then the colonel ordered: 'Give that first hut another volley or two!' The gunner pointed me about. The wail of the child hurt me. O! if I could only make the men hear that cry! But the ears of the men were deafened by the concussion from the guns' reports. For a moment I hesitated. 'The gun is jammed!' cried the colonel with a black curse.

"Then I thought that I was only a thing of iron and steel, while men had hearts of flesh and blood; and besides they were doing the work of a great Christian nation, a work supported by a great majority of the Christians of that nation, or we would not be killing in this country, little brother. Then I beat to my duty again. At the first volley I brought down a portion of the hut and sent a bullet across the little one's throat, and the weeping ceased. The 'niggers' had been taught a lesson!"

"Great work! Great work!" squeaked the Mauser, but I heard the chaplain say that America was the foremost nation in the world in carrying to the races dwelling in darkness the gospel of Christ. Do you think, Destroyer, that the deeds you and I do are according to Christ's gospel?"

"It is very evident that one of your small caliber cannot understand the duty of a Christian nation toward an inferior people," said the Machine Gun to the Mauser.—Comrade, (N. Y.)

The Truth.

BY R. B. KERR.

In No. 896 the Editor makes two statements which cannot be substantiated. He quotes a paragraph from Benjamin Tucker in which that writer says he would establish perfect freedom in the relation of the sexes. The Editor then says: "In this paragraph is briefly outlined the chief difference between Philosophic Anarchists and Socialists of all grades—with few exceptions."

In the literature of sex freedom three books have had a circulation far surpassing all others. One of these is "Woman in the Past, Present, and Future." The author, August Bebel, is the chosen leader of the German Social Democrats, the largest and most important body of Socialists in the world. Another is "The Woman Who Did." Its author, Grant Allen, was a leading English Socialist. The third, "The Elements of Social Science," was written by an anonymous doctor of medicine, who seems to have been an economist of the old school.

Next in order of celebrity comes the famous work of Karl Heinzen. I am not certain about his economics, but should be surprised if he is not a German Social-Democrat. Please correct me if I am wrong.

The only book to be compared with these in thoroughness are "The Subjection of Women," by John Stuart Mill; "Woman and Economics," by Charlotte Perkins Stetson; and "The Old and New Ideal," by Emil Ruedebusch. The two first are by Socialists, the last by an Anarchist.

Among other Socialist writers on sex freedom may be mentioned Edward Carpenter, Karl Pearson, William Morris, Belfort Bax, Bernard Shaw, G. D. Herron, and Edward Bellamy (in "Equality"); not to mention hosts of writers in foreign languages.

Now for the other side. How did the great Proudhon stand on the sex question?

The most conspicuous Socialist in the world is August Bebel, and the most conspicuous Anarchist is Peter Kropotkin. Which is the more candid on the sex question? Is it the politician, the party leader, the man who heads the largest party in the German Empire? No, for he knows that on the sex question his party is solid at his back. But the uncompromising revolutionist Kropotkin who shuns the sex question as a cat shuns water.

Who were the three men that left the Legitimation League when it declared for sex freedom? Wordsworth Donisthorpe, J. C. Spence, J. Greevz Fisher; all Voluntaryists, differing from Proudhon only in name.

At one of the meetings of the Legitimation League which I attended eleven speakers defended sex freedom, and at least eight of them were active Socialists. One man spoke on the other side. He was Henry Seymour, the chief English exponent of Proudhon's banking system.

What gave the Legitimation League its boom? The heroic conduct of Edith Lanchester, the Socialist. Who got her out of the asylum? John Burns, the Socialist.

Why has Lucifer never mentioned these things?

* * *

The other statement which cannot be substantiated is this: "Speaking for myself alone, I see very little difference between the goal of Philosophic Anarchism and that of Scientific Socialism. They both mean Liberty and Justice for all and privileges for none."

Without admitting any part of the above statement, I shall simply deal with the assertion that Philosophic Anarchism means "privileges for none."

On page 132 of "Voluntary Socialism" F. D. Tandy says:—

"The most serious objection to the occupancy and use system is that it does not provide equality of opportunity. Land being of different value, those who occupy the most valuable will be able to obtain a greater reward for their labor than those who occupy poorer land. This criticism is very just indeed."

On page 244 of "Instead of a Book," Benjamin Tucker says: "Liberty has never stood with those who profess to show on strictly economic grounds that economic rent must disappear or even decrease as a result of the application of the Anarchistic principle." The rest of the paragraph is worth reading, but too long to quote.

Neither Tucker nor Tandy pretends that Philosophic Anarchism will give equality of opportunity, or "privileges for none." Their mistake is that they under-estimate the amount of inequality. They have not lived among metalliferous mines, and do not realize how immense are the differences in grade between the different mines necessary to the world's supply, and what vast fortunes would be made by the users and occupiers of some of them if the users and occupiers of others made no more than wages. They also underestimate the difference in economic value between a corner lot on Broadway and an inside lot in a country town. They fail to realize the danger of letting individuals make vast fortunes out of economic rent. They do not see that, if each man is only to get what protection he pays for, the rich will be able to buy a very dangerous amount of protection; and that, in a dispute between Dives and Lazarus about invasion or use and occupancy, the man who can buy most protection will have rather an advantage, while even a free jury may not be immaculate.

Why People Do Not Marry.

BY WILLIAM COX.

Miss Susan B. Anthony thinks one reason for the decrease in the marriage rate is the increased intelligence of the women. Indirectly she may be right.

The Rev. Charles L. Kloss, pastor of the Webster Grove church near St. Louis thinks the reason is that the women are not allowed to propose, and says, "There is no reason why they should not have and exercise the same right of proposing as men."

As a matter of justice, the women should have the same right to propose as men. But that would be no remedy, because the men would still have the right to refuse. Moreover, as Miss Anthony intimates, the women refuse about as often as the men.

My experience and observation is, that the reason more people do not marry is owing to the bad marriage laws.

Under the present arrangement, the day a woman marries a man, she becomes his slave. If she owns any property, the man becomes the owner of both the woman and her property. She cannot use her own as she pleases nor sell it without the consent of her husband. He may outrage and abuse the woman in various ways, and so long as she is his wife the law upholds him in it. As a rule, a woman likes a little liberty for herself, although she is not willing that anybody else shall have any. Give a woman a chance to marry and still be the owner of herself and her property and she will marry.

On the other hand, a woman may marry a man today and tomorrow she may sue him for a settlement and between her and the lawyers they can divest him of everything he has and turn him out doors, and the lawyers will get about two dollars to the woman's one.

The fact is, under the present marriage laws, people who give any thought to the matt erare afraid to marry.

Give a man a chance to marry without having to take the chances of being legally robbed and he will marry.

Paine's "Defense."

Those of our readers who are admirers of Thomas Paine—and who are not?—will be glad to see the "Defense" written by Paine which is quoted in the following letter from Philip G. Peabody to the "Springfield Republican." Paine was a Deist, and as such could now be accepted in the fellowship of the orthodox churches which in his day persecuted and despised him.

L. H.

TO THE EDITOR:—To the educated people of the present day, it seems strange to read of a "defense" of Thomas Paine. In heaven's name what did Paine ever do, or say, or write, that needs any "defense"? Anyone who thinks that a "defense" of this great man is needed, is ignorant.

Not many years ago, a letter of Paine's that was new to almost every one was discovered; it has seldom been printed, and will now doubtless interest all who take an interest in the early history of this country. It shows its writer's manliness, honor, hatred of hypocrisy, and general character. The writer of the following letter needs no "defense." It is those who have maligned him, those whose religious bigotry justifies them in lying about him, who need a "defense."

It was written by Mr. Paine to John Inskeep, Mayor of Philadelphia, and has been published but once, I believe, since the time it was written in 1806.

It is as follows:

"I saw in the Aurora of January 30 a piece addressed to you and signed Isaac Hall. It contains a statement of your malevolent conduct in refusing to let him have Vine street wharf after he had bid $50 more rent for it than another person had offered, and had been unanimously approved of by the commissioners appointed by law for that purpose. Among the reasons given by you for this refusal, one was that Mr. Hall was one of Paine's disciples. If those whom you may choose to call my disciples follow my example in doing good to mankind, they will pass the confines of this world with a happy mind, while the hope of the hypocrite shall perish and delusion sink into despair.

"I do not know who Mr. Inskeep is, for I do not remember the name of Inskeep at Philadelphia in the time that tried men's souls. He must be some mushroom of modern growth that has started upon the soil which the generous services of Thomas Paine contributed to bless with freedom; neither do I know what profession of religion he is of, nor do I care, for if he is a man malevolent and unjust, it signifies not to what class or sectary he may hypocritically belong.

"As I set too much value on my time to waste it on a man of so little consequence as yourself, I will close this short address with a declaration that puts hypocrisy and malevolence at defiance. Here it is:

"My motive and object in all my political works, beginning with 'Common Sense,' the first work I ever published, have been to rescue man from tyranny and false systems and false principles of government, and enable him to be free and establish government for himself; and I have borne my share of danger in Europe and in America in every attempt I have made for this purpose. And my motive and object in all my publications on religious subjects, beginning with the first part of the 'Age of Reason,' have been to bring man to a right reason that God has given him; to impress on him the great principles of divine morality, justice, mercy, and a benevolent disposition to all men, and to all creatures; and to excite in him a spirit of trust, confidence, and consolation in his Creator, unshackled by the fable and fiction of books, by whatever invented name they may be called.

"I am happy in the continual contemplation of what I have done, and I thank God that He gave me talents for the purpose and fortitude to do it. It will make the continual consolation of my departing hours whenever they may finally arrive.

THOMAS PAINE."

The above letter was written by Mr. Paine about three years before his death in Columbia street, New York City, not New Rochelle, as is commonly supposed.

It is a strange thing that men and women, otherwise truthful, are so often ready to slander a man who does not happen to have precisely the same religion as themselves.

PHILIP G. PEABODY, Boston.

The American Press-Writers' Association

Continues to grow in spite of all opposition. The most notable activity along Lucifer's line has been in the Philadelphia "Bulletin," where A. Johnson, A. Heymoolen, C. L. James, and several others have pleaded for reason and justice in dealing with the Anarchists. In Boston "Traveler" A. A. Orcutt had an article on "Government." J. T. Small presented the case of the "Home" colonists. Frank C. Evans, in the course of an editorial in the January number of "Vampyre" on the "Free Press and the United States of America," says of "Discontent:" "The postal authorities have bravely buncoed the publication by accepting the postage rates of transmission and then refusing to allow the paper to leave the postoffice. This high-handed procedure strikes us in the light of highway robbery tinged with despicable sneak-thievery, all in the name of the law." Dorchester, (Mass.) "Beacon," January 11, under the caption "Justice to the Anarchists," prints letters from Mrs. Frederique A. de Crane and Cassius V. Cook commending one from the writer that appeared in the "Beacon" Dec. 21. From Mr. Cook's letter the following excerpt is taken: "Can government justify injustice?" "Violation of even the law of civil liberty by itself is no argument with which to convince Anarchists. If the government becomes a persecutor of these political heretics, is it not the very proof that Anarchists need to show that government is aggression? A despotic government breeds Anarchists. Gall the people with restrictions, impose despotic measures, grind down the discontent, smother the expression of indignant criticism, and you are bound to make Anarchists of your philosophers and criminals of your ignoramuses."

On anti-vaccination "Our Home Rights" for December prints an able article from Dr. R. S. Clymer on the Camden, N. J. lock-jaw cases; Dr. Immanuel Pfeiffer gives several instances of the "Many Victims" of the recent vaccination crusade in Boston; J. T. Small edits an anti-vaccination department. J. M. Greene fills seven pages of the January number of the "Animals Defender" (Boston) with anti-vaccination news items. Brother Green is the moving spirit organizing a state society to effect the repeal of the compulsory law in Massachusetts. Dr. Clymer appeared in the Rockland (Mass.) "Independent" and the "Illinois State Register" (Springfield), Jan 8, with very good articles against compulsory vaccination. The editor of the "Register" commends his effort in a half column editorial.

NEW MEMBERS.

206 af. Rowell, J. Herbert, Austin, Ill. Donation $1.
207 d. Church, W. H., 17 Pleasant St., Cambridge, Mass.

HONORABLE MENTION.

198 f. Brocter, Caris, Rapid City, S. D. Donation $1.
A. C. ARMSTRONG, 17 Leroy St., Dorchester, Mass.

O! brave Apostle, thou hast truly said—
It is trivial thing indeed to be Judged of man's judgment. Conscience must be free,
Nor blindly nor dogmatically led,
Either by living oracles or dead.
—William Lloyd Garrison.

There can be no defeat in Freedom's cause,
Save for the moment. Though its flag may fall,
Yet it will rise again, and sweep in light;
For all our hope is in its glowing folds.
—Samuel P. Putnam.

"And how are you off for police protection over here?" asked the New Yorker. "Oh, our policemen are pretty decent," replied the Philadelphian. "We don't need much protection from them."—Ex.

Lucifer, the Lightbearer

M. HARMAN, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK AT 500 FULTON STREET, CHICAGO, ILL.

Terms: One year, $1; six months, 50 cents; three months, 25 cents.

Entered at the Chicago Postoffice as Second-Class Mail Matter.

Eastern Representative, E. C. Walker, 244 W. 143d street, New York.

901.

If these figures correspond with the number printed on the wrapper of your Lucifer, your subscription expires with this number.

If a copy of Lucifer fails to reach you, please order by number or date.

Lucifer will not be sent "by return mail" unless stamps for postage are enclosed with order.

To NEW SUBSCRIBERS: Your subscription is paid to No. If you have not ordered Lucifer, a friend has subscribed for you. If you do not wish to receive it, please notify us by card or through your postmaster. If you wish to become a regular subscriber you will confer a favor by renewing before the expiration of your trial subscription.

Kingcraft, Priestcraft, Statecraft.

One of the most note-worthy movements of the times is the drift in the United States towards monarchy and aristocracy. The official appointment by the Washington government of three special ambassadors, with war-ships and suites and secretaries to attend the coronation of King Edward of England next June, is something quite unheard of in the history of this country.

In answer to criticisms upon this expensive and very un-American proceeding a city daily tells us that in so doing we as a republic do not abate one jot of our opposition to the principle of monarchy, or of our championship of the opposite principle, that the people should rule.

But it may very pertinently be asked, What would have been the fate of an administration or of a political party in this country, previous to our civil war, that would have sent such an ambassy to do honor to the coronation of any monarch, whether English, German, Russian or what not? Would that administration or that party have stood the ghost of a chance of re-election to power?

* * *

But since the triumph of nationalism, or centralization, over the principle of a federated republic in 1865, the drift towards monarchy in this country has been rapid. Our Presidents are simply elective monarchs, clothed with autocratic powers greater in many respects than are the powers exercised by many European monarchs; and the costly aristocracy with which the Washington government surrounds itself is fashioned, year by year, more and still more after the pattern set by the aristocracies of Europe.

Speaking of our American aristocracy the Chicago "Chronicle" has this to say:

> "Criticism continues to hum over the selections said to compose American aristocracy.
>
> "The criterion of wealth alone does not fit every case. Idleness appears, however, to be universally prevalent among them outside their fashionable fluttering. Morality, it is frankly conceded, is not required for admission to the coterie. A number of its most conspicuous members are celebrated chiefly for their lack of morality. Nor is intellect a qualification for recognition in the list.
>
> "It would appear, therefore, that the American aristocracy is reduced to the level of the posters once famous. Aubrey Beardsley's characteristic drawings, of which Philip Gilbert Hamerton said that the types presented indicated 'neither intellect nor morals, but were highly decorative.'"

The coming of Prince Henry, brother of the Emperor of Germany, the entertainment of himself and his large party at the expense of the American people, the taxpayers—all without asking their consent—to say nothing of the significance of the ceremonies of launching and christening an imperial yacht in American waters, something never known before—all these things show, as no mere words can show, whither our national government is drifting.

* * *

Added to these signs of the times comes another unheard of performance, namely, the honors paid to a high dignitary of the church of Rome in the White House at Washington—the kneeling to the representative of the Pope by the ambassadors of Catholic countries. While it may be said that our President is not directly responsible for such honors paid to a priest at the executive mansion, it would have been easy to say to these foreign sycophants that this is not the time or place for the giving or receiving of hierarchic homage.

* * *

But all these things are necessary, probably, in the evolution of Statecraft in the United States, which craft includes all the ARCHIES and all the CRACIES—monarchy, hierarchy, oligarchy, theocracy, plutocracy, aristocracy, democracy (more properly called LICK-SPITTLE-CRACY!) and the rest.

M. HARMAN.

The Literature of Sex Freedom.

Our constant and faithful helper, R. B. Kerr, whose home is Phœnix, B. C., has performed an important service to Lucifer's work by calling attention to prominent writers upon sex freedom—the department or field of reform that for more than two thousand years has been most neglected, most ignored, by reformers.

All of those whose names are mentioned by Friend Kerr, deserve honorable mention and their books careful perusal. Other names will doubtless occur to our readers as deserving honorable mention for their efforts in this line of work, writers and speakers who are not reckoned as either Socialists or Anarchists.

Replying briefly to our friend's first criticism, will say that when speaking of what I believe to be the "chief difference between Philosophic Anarchists and Socialists of all grades—with few exceptions" I had in mind the Anarchists and Socialists of my acquaintance, and the books and papers of American writers on Anarchism and Socialism. The Socialists of Chicago so far as I know, ignore, else antagonize, the subject of sex freedom—all except the co-workers and adherents of George D. Herron, and it was to these I had reference when saying, "with few exceptions."

We are in receipt at this office, of many Socialist journals—Social Democratic, Single Tax, Referendum, etc., not to mention those forms of State Socialism known as Bryan Democracy and Populism, and so far as I now recall not one of them "comes out into the open" in defense of sex freedom, as taught by Karl Heinzen, Benjamin Tucker, Emil Ruedebusch and others of the more distinctively Anarchist school. * * *

In giving the comparative circulation of books treating upon sex as an ethical problem, the work of August Bebel is named as first. Not being in possession of statistical data I accept this statement as true, but would remind our friend that the ground had been prepared for the reception of "Woman in the Past, Present and Future" by the man to whom a subordinate rank is given as sex-reformer—Karl Heinzen.

"For more than a quarter of a century previous to 1879," quoting Heinzen's biographer, Karl Schmemann, "'Der Pionier,' a weekly paper, was edited and published in Boston," by the author of "The Rights of Women and the Sexual Relations," which book had been first published in 1852—both the book and the weekly paper being in the German language. Speaking of this weekly paper Schmemann says, "'Der Pionier' had a world-wide reputation and circulation, wherever the German tongue reigned; in Europe and America it had its readers among the most advanced and cultured minds, and when the report of the fictitious convention [of the "Women in Frauenstadt"] first appeared therein [1869] in such a masterful style it created an unusual sensation both here and abroad."

Previous to this, in 1855, in the same paper had appeared a controversy between the editor, Heinzen,—under the alias of Luise Meyen—and the renowned German philosopher, Arnold Ruge, then an exile in England, "about the emancipation and rights of women." This controversy, like the report of the Woman's convention, "created not a little sensation in the German literary world; the wonderful logic, boldness and poetic beauty that characterize the utterances of the intrepid Luise were without comparison."

Elsewhere Schmemann says of this weekly paper—which seems well to have deserved its name, "The Pioneer"—"it is safe to say that at no time and among no nation there ever was published a paper that breathed a like independent, bold and humane spirit. Heinzen was among the first intrepid champions of the emancipation of woman, incessantly vindicating the rights of the fair sex to liberate the better half of mankind from the despotism of the "lord and master," and the drudgery of a degrading thraldom."

* * *

Here, then, we have the explanation of the wonderful circulation of Bebel's "Woman in the Past, Present etc." The ground had been ploughed and the seed sown by the intrepid pioneer, Heinzen, in his more than a quarter century of incessant labor in behalf of woman's emancipation, "at a time when it required more than ordinary courage to do so."

While wishing to detract nothing from the work of August Bebel I think that he himself would accord the greater honor to Heinzen—for making it possible for his own work to meet the appreciation that is now accorded thereto.

August Bebel is reckoned a German Socialist, but so far as I have read his book, "Woman" etc., he is a thorough going Anarchist, as witness this paragraph, on page 154:

> Human beings must be in a position to act as freely, where their strongest impulse is concerned, as in the case of any other natural instinct. The gratification of the sexual impulse [the strongest natural instinct or impulse] is as strictly the personal affair of the individual as the gratification of every other natural instinct. No one has to give an account of him or herself, and no third person has the slightest right of intervention. Intelligence, culture, and independence will direct and facilitate a right choice. Should incompatibility, disappointment and dislike ensue, morality demands the dissolution of a tie that has become unnatural and therefore immoral.

Italics are those of the book, and the same applies to the succeeding quoted paragraphs.

* * *

Friend Kerr asks to be set right if Heinzen is not a German Socialist. What he would now call himself if alive, I have no means of knowing—Heinzen died Nov. 2, 1880—but so far as I have been able to glean from his writings he was an Anarchist of the Jeffersonian type. On page 167 of C. H. Kerr's edition of "Woman and the Sexual Relations" occur these words: "'Democracy.' I supply this term with quotation marks to indicate that I borrow it. For at bottom it does not mean what in the radical sense it ought. Democracy (popular RULE) is by no means an expression for a rational or appropriate conception"—evidently meaning that he is opposed to rulership, whether by a popular majority or by an aristocracy or monarchy. Proceeding he says:

> Where there is authority there must also be servants. But a free people know neither the one nor the other. Over whom are the people to rule? Even their office-holders and agents they can only entrust and commission with their affairs. The term democracy came into use simply to denote an opposition to an authority over the people. The people are not to be ruled by others, from which it does not follow, however, that now the people themselves are to establish an authority, but that all authority must disappear. And with the conception of authority the conception of government will vanish.

If this is not Anarchism—no bosses, no rulers, but every one to be his own ruler—then I do not know how to interpret language. On the next page, however, he expresses himself thus:

> Anarchy in its bad sense is barbarism, and in its good sense an impossibility. State and Anarchy are contradictions, for a State is as little conceivable without as Anarchy with organization. But organization in the free State is nothing more than order and arrangement of business.

By these words it would seem that Heinzen considered Anarchy totally opposed to organization. In thus considering I think he makes a serious mistake. Anarchy—self-rule—is not inconsistent with voluntary co-operation, and this again is quite consistent with "order and arrangement of business." Heinzen's Free State is then simply Anarchism applied to the practical business of life.

* * *

But whatever may have been his shortcomings in other respects his Anarchism on the question of "Sexual Relations"—by far the most important of all—is pronounced and indisputable, as when he makes Julie Vom Berg, President of the Woman's Congress, to say, in answer to a critic:

> Among all the daughters of the goddess Liberty there is none, who, according to her nature, must possess the properties of her mother in a higher degree than Love. Love and free love are therefore synonymous. It ought not to be necessary to talk of free love, any more than of wet water, or hot fire. I might, however, conceive of love as not free in the sense that the feeling, the necessity, the passion that unites two beings, binds them completely, destroys their free will, turns them irresistibly away from everything else. But just because true love has this effect, exerts this power, creates this necessity, it ought no more to be hindered in its choice, by external force, than it will require external bonds to insure its permanence. A man and woman who do not love each other ought not to be united, or where they are united, they ought again to be separated; a man and woman who love each other ought not to be kept apart, and they need no external force to remain together.

* * *

As to Grant Allen—who is called "a leading English Socialist." In this case, as in that of Kropotkin, Proudhon, Donisthorpe, Henry Seymour and other names mentioned by our correspondent, I class them all by what they have said and done, rather than by what they may have called themselves, or been called by others. Grant Allen's "Woman Who Did" is a thoroughly Anarchistic work, if I know the meaning of words, as witness this statement of principle by Herminia Barton, the heroine of the book just named, page 43:

> I will not palter or parley with the unholy thing [marriage]. Even though you go to a registry office [a civil contract marriage] and get rid as far as you can of every relic of the sacerdotal and sacramental idea, yet the marriage itself is still an assertion of man's supremacy over woman. It ties her to him for life, it ignores her individuality, it compels her to promise what no human heart can be sure of performing; for you can contract to do or not to do, easily enough, but to contract to feel or not to feel—what transparent absurdity! It is full of all evils, and I decline to consider it. If I love a man at all, I must love him on terms of perfect freedom. I can't bind myself down to live with him to my shame one day longer than I love him; or to love him at all if I find him unworthy of my purest love, or unable to retain it; or if I discover some other more fit to be loved by me.

As in the case of Bebel I am strongly inclined to the opinion that the writings of Heinzen are chiefly responsible for the book, "Woman Who Did," as also for most if not all the later works on woman's rights and wrongs. A part of the credit, however, as seed-sower, is probably due to the anonymous writer of "Elements of Social Science"—a work more Anarchistic than Socialistic, which book was first published soon after Heinzen began his reformatory publications.

* * *

Lucifer has not been silent—as intimated—in regard to the Lanchester case. Besides giving an account of it in the paper we have distributed some hundreds of copies of the book, by Oswald Dawson, entitled, "The Bar Sinister and Licit Love," which book is largely devoted to a history of that celebrated case, and the connection of the Legitimation League therewith.

* * *

LIBERTY, JUSTICE, EQUALITY, VERSUS PRIVILEGE.

Replying briefly to the second criticism of our British Columbian correspondent, I would say,

First—All that any one can mean by Liberty and Justice for all and Privileges for none, is a standard of human ethics APPROXIMATING to such ideal; not that such ideal is possible of realization now, or that it will be possible in the near future. If all legalized privileges, monopolies, discriminations, robberies, were abolished today there would still remain, and for centuries to come would remain, enough of inequality to cause strife, want, despair and misery beyond the power of tongue to describe. Human evolution, ethical progress, moves slowly, even though artificial fetters be removed.

Second—While Friend Kerr seems to lean much upon authority—in other words, to set much value upon the opinions of the authors of books treating of Anarchism, Socialism, Sex Freedom, etc., I have no use for any of them as AUTHORITY. That the OPINIONS of some writers are worthy of careful attention, I readily grant, but that any one author is wise enough, logical enough, to be considered authority on any line of progressive thought I certainly do not admit.

With this thought in mind I would say that with land monopoly abolished; also monopoly of the issue of money; also monopoly of trade (tariffs), patent monopolies etc., with these abolished the evils of economic rent would be reduced to a minimum as compared to what they now are. Under freedom of access to unoccupied land, and with transportation at cost, also with free exchange of all commodities, the title to a corner lot on Broadway, New York, or on State Street, Chicago, would not be the mine of wealth it now is. And much the same reasoning would apply to the case of the discoverer of valuable ores, oil etc., in the bowels of the earth.

* * *

I wish to say, just here however, that while opposed to all government of man by man, the arguments, the philosophy, of the Single Taxers appeal to me with much force—not as a universal panacea, but "as a ROAD, not a GOAL," as George D. Herron said of Socialism.

The literature of Single Tax I regard as well worthy of candid and earnest study by all seeking a way out of the economic and political wilderness in which the people of this country, and of all other lands calling themselves civilized and enlightened, are now painfully and—as it would seem—hopelessly wandering.

* * *

As a fitting close to this too long article I venture to repeat, that as some of us see it, the greatest impediment now in the way of securing Equality of Opportunity for all—politically, industrially, economically etc., is the denial of equal opportunity to be BORN well. Denial—by Church, State and Grundy moralists—of the right to come into life with a heritage of self-respect, self-reliance, self-ownership; denial of heritage to a feeling that we belong on the earth; a feeling that the WORLD NEEDS us quite as much as we need the world; a feeling, an innate conviction, that it is our right to be a law unto ourselves, and to live our own lives in our own way so long as we do not trespass upon the right of others to do the same.

This heritage, this right of inheritance, is denied to us by the artificial laws, customs and theologic superstitions relating to SEX—to motherhood and fatherhood; that is, to marriage, to the conjugal relations, their rights, responsibilities or duties.

This is why I said at the outset of this article that R. B. Kerr had performed an important service to Lucifer's work by calling attention to prominent writers upon sex freedom. That there is now a Literature of Sex Freedom, and that this literature is gradually winning its way to popular recognition—forging its way to the front, so to speak, is perhaps the most hopeful of all the signs of the times.

For until the worth of sex, the importance of sex, the dignity of the mission of sex, is properly understood, appreciated, honored and freed from the shackles of superstition, obloquy and ignorance, it is safe to say that all progress in other lines of human endeavor will prove unsatisfactory, disappointing and nugatory so far as real human advancement, real and lasting human happiness are concerned.

M. HARMAN.

Two Letters.

From the Treasurer of the Young Men's Christian Association, Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., we have received the following letter:

MY DEAR MR. HARMAN:—Will you kindly send me a few sample copies of your weekly Lucifer; also any information that you can, either personal views or views of others bearing on the negative side of the following question: Resolved that the promulgation of Anarchistic principles in the United States should be made a criminal offense. A prompt answer will greatly oblige, Yours, etc., P. R. COMER.

The reply sent is as follows:

P. R. COMER, Dear Sir: In response to your request, we are sending you several copies of Lucifer in which you will find matter pertaining to the question of Anarchism.

There are many reasons why the promulgation of Anarchistic principles should not be made a criminal offense, but the most important reason, from the Governmentalist viewpoint is that no such legislation can be framed which will be effective. For if the advocacy of self government and self-control be made a felony, a great number of good men in all parties must be classed as criminals. Thousands of persons thought Bryan an advocate of Anarchistic sentiments. Who is to decide? And if only the weak and poor and comparatively helpless are condemned, will the law and its administrators be respected the more for such condemnation? Such legislation did not stamp out Christianity; it has not suppressed Nihilism in Russia nor revolutionary Anarchism in Italy and Spain. "The blood of the martyr is the seed of the Church," always, and that whether the persecuted martyr and his church be right or wrong. The worst use we can make of an opponent is to abuse him. If I believed that good could come through violence, through a revolution, I would welcome all oppressive laws, all persecution. But I do not believe that people can see clearly with their eyes blinded by the blood of their loved ones; nor think clearly with their minds full of thoughts of revenge. Despair is the mother of violence.

These thoughts, hastily written, are given merely by way of suggestion. I would like to say much more, but can't take time to write long letters. Yours sincerely, LILLIAN HARMAN.

Better a thousand fold abuse of Free Speech than denial of Free Speech; the abuse dies in a day, but the denial slays the life of the people and entombs the hope of the race.—Charles Bradlaugh.

VICE: ITS FRIENDS AND ITS FOES

BY EDWIN C. WALKER.

CONTENTS:—Brotherhood of Man; The Recognition of Facts; Folly of "For Men Only." Definition of Vice; Horrors of Prostitution; Abnormal Sexuality; Errors of Fathers, Mothers and Teachers; Persecution Does Not Reform; Prostitution and the Crusaders; The "Spoiling of the Heathen;" What are the Effects of Raids and Crusades? The Economic Side of the Problem; Party Politics in Vice Crusading; In What Does Prostitution Consist? Some Causes of Prostitution; Two Kinds of Prostitution Compared; The Opponents of Divorce; "Purifying" the Tenements; Action for Advanced Women.

WITH APPENDIX:—The Wanderings of a Spirit; Our Fair Civilization; The Folly and Cruelty of It All. Price 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

A "BARGAIN COUNTER" LOT OF LITERATURE AT HALF-PRICE OR LESS.

The following is a partial list of books and pamphlets which have accumulated on our shelves, time worn and dusty. In order to get them out of our way we have marked the price down. Never more than half price, and in many instances less than a quarter of publisher's prices.

Some of these works are out of print, and perhaps you may here find just the pamphlet you have been fruitlessly looking for. Some are clean, but the covers of most are shelf-worn; the inside leaves, however, clean and complete.

In ordering, please state if you wish your money returned in case we are out of the book ordered, or if you will take something else in its place.

A Dictionary of Dreams. Dr. H Greer. 125 pages. 10c.
A Short View of Great Questions. Orlando J. Smith. Cloth 15c.
Catechism on the Science of a Universal Religion. Gabriel Z. Wacht. 10c.
Essays on Deaths and Funerals. A collection of facts and ideas, selected and original, referring to deaths and funerals. Joseph Henry. 10c.
Eureka, How to prevent colds, hay fever, etc., without drugs. 5c.
Everybody Made Happy. C Orchardson. 4c.
Free Trade. E. H. Heywood. 12c
From Pandemonium to Elysium. James Thierry. 10c.
Geology and the Bible. W. W. Collins. 2c.
Goverment Analyzed. Col. J. R. Keleo. 60c.
Health Germs. Alice B. Stockham. 12c.
Hindu Wedding-Bells. Alice B. Stockham. 15c
How the Devil—Satan—Beat the Salvation Army. 5c.
In Defence of Emma Goldman. Voltairine de Cleyre. 3c.
Jehovah Interviewed; or, Orthodoxy from Headquarters. 3c.
Law and Gospel. G. W. Foote. 3c.
Liberty, Political, Religious, Social and Sexual. A. F. Tindall, 2c.
Old Melodies Spiritualized. H. W. Booner. 10c.
Practical Co-operation. E. C. Walker. 3c.
Pre-Natal Culture. Newton. 15c.
Protection or Free Trade? Henry George. 320 pages. 15c.
Religion in the Republic. Mrs. M. A. Freeman. 5c.
Reminiscences of an Octogenarian in the fields of industrial and social reform. J. K. Ingalls. With portrait of author. 25c.
Social Ethics. E. H Heywood. 12c.
The Declaration of Independence. Robert G Ingersoll's great Centennial Oration. 3c.
The Dogs and the Fleas. By One of the Dogs. 225 pages. 10c.
The Folly of Prayer. G. W. Foote. 3c.
The Future Commonwealth, or What Samuel Baloam Saw In Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 115 pages. 10c.
The Gold Proposed for Our National Constitution. William Denton. 5c.
The Poonseet Tragedy. William Denton. 5c.
The Sabbath. M. Farrington. 5c.
The Shadow of the Sword. G. W. Foote. 5c.
The Socialism of "Merrie England." William Gilmore.
The World's Parliament of Religions. Daniel K. Tenney. 5c.
Truth Seeker Annual for 1890. Illustrated. 10c. Postage 5c.
Union and Federation Arguments for Religious Liberty, 85 pages, 10c.
Universal Religion. J. K. Ingalls, 5c.
Up to Date. Coin's Financial School Continued. 210 pages. 15c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

ADDITIONS TO OUR BOOK LIST.

ANARCHISM: Its Philosophy and Ideal. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
ANARCHIST MORALITY. Peter Kropotkin. 5c.
BALZAC'S SERAPHITA: The Mystery of Sex. Mary Hanford Ford. Cloth. $1.
CHICAGO CONFERENCE OF TRUSTS. Speeches, debates, etc.; 81 portraits of delegates, including Benj. R. Tucker, Laurence Gronlund, William Jennings Bryan, Samuel Gompers, Louis F. Post, and George Schilling. 256 pages. 10c.
FIELDS, FACTORIES, AND WORKSHOPS; or, Industry Combined with Agriculture and Brain Work with Manual Work. Peter Kropotkin. 360 pages. 60c. Postage, 5c.
GIORDANO BRUNO. His Life, Teachings, and Martyrdom. Burned for heresy in Rome, Feb. 17, 1600. 5c.
INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS. "Idle Tales of Dying Horrors." G. W. Foote. Brief biographical sketches of 37 Freethinkers, including Bruno, Buckle, Byron, Comte, Darwin, George Eliot, Gibbon, Goethe, Hugo, Harriet Martineau, Mill, Paine, Madame Roland, George Sand, Shelley, Voltaire, etc. 25c.
KORAIDINE. A story for young and old. Extra levant cloth. $1.
LUCIFER. Third Series, Vol. III, (1889). Cloth, $1.25. Postage, 25c.
MARRIAGE IN FREE SOCIETY. Edward Carpenter. A dainty little gift book. 25c.
MONOPOLY, or How Labor Is Robbed. William Morris. Illustrated. 5c.
NORA, A DOLL'S HOUSE, and GHOSTS. Ibsen. Cloth. 75c.
PERSONAL EXPERIENCES of Two American Anti-Vivisectionists in Various Countries. Philip G. Peabody. With an Appendix by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Reduced from 25c to 15c.
STUDIES IN SOCIOLOGY. In four parts: I., The Law of Happiness; II., The Law of Individual Control; III., The Law of Exchange; IV., The Law of Environment. Albert Chavannes. 25c.
THE BLUE LAWS OF CONNECTICUT. Taken from the Code of 1650 and the public records of the Colony of Connecticut previous to 1665. With an account of the persecution of Witches and Quakers in New England, and some extracts from the Blue Laws of Virginia. Copiously illustrated. 25c.
THE DEMANDS OF LIBERALISM. Principles and platform of organized Freethought. 10c.
THE FUTURE OF SECULARISM. When will the Cause of Justice triumph? 5c.
THE PYRAMID OF TYRANNY. The School; The Church; The Press; The Police; The Law; The Army. F. Domela Nieuwenhuis. 5c.
THE SECRET INSTRUCTIONS OF THE JESUITS. A reprint from an edition published in 1723, quoted by the highest authorities as authentic. The work is redolent of Jesuit craft and is a plain index to the underhand working of the order against the welfare of individuals and society. 25c.
THE STATE: ITS HISTORIC ROLE. Prince Peter Kropotkin. 10c.
THE TROUBADOURS AND COURTS OF LOVE. J. F. Rowbotham. Cloth. 250 pages. $1.50. Postage, 10c.
USEFUL WORK VERSUS USELESS TOIL. William Morris. 5c.
VACCINATION A GIGANTIC CRIME. Samuel Darling. 15c.
WOMAN: Four Centuries of Progress. Susan H. Wixon. 5c.

Address M. HARMAN, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

Wanted.

"Common Sense Theology," by D. Howland Hamilton.
"The Truth About Love."
State condition and price. Cash paid or other books given in exchange, by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

Wanted: A woman partner. Pleasant business. Give age and occupation. Address Dr. Georjean Miller, Latham, Ark.

RADICAL LITERATURE.

For Sale by M. Harman, 500 Fulton St., Chicago.

A CHAMBERMAID'S DIARY. By Octave Mirbeau. Translated from the French by Benj. R. Tucker. 400 pages. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.50
ADVANCEMENT OF SCIENCE. Prof. John Tyndall's famous Inaugural Address before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, with the articles on Prayer which so stirred the religious world. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.
AGE OF REASON (The). Presentation edition. Part I reprinted from the first English edition. Part II corrected by M. D. Conway's edition. With Paine's own account of his arrest in Paris. Photogravure portrait from the Romney painting exhibited in London. Containing also portrait from the Jarvis painting; from the Peale painting, known as the Bonneville portrait, representing Paine as a member of the French Assembly, and a half-tone of the Peale painting. Large half-tone of the house presented to Paine, in which he lived in New Rochelle, and of the monument and surroundings, Yorktown, Pa., scenes; also eight half-tone views of buildings, etc., associated with Paine's life in Paris, and other illustrations. With Preface, Chronological Table, Notes, Index, etc. Printed on antique wove paper, large octavo, wide margins, gilt edge. Special cover design in colors. The finest and most accurate of all editions. Boxed. Postpaid, $2.
AGE OF REASON. Thomas Paine. Cloth, with steel plate portrait, 75c; paper 25c.
A PHYSICIAN IN THE HOUSE. A New Family Medical Work, by Dr. J. H. Greer. This book is up-to-date in every particular. It will save you hundreds of dollars in doctors' bills. It tells you how to cure yourself by simple and harmless home remedies. It recommends no poisonous or dangerous drugs. It teaches how to save health and life by safe methods. It teaches prevention—that it is better to know how to live and avoid disease than to take any medicine as a cure. It is not an advertisement and has no medicine to sell. It has hundreds of excellent recipes for the cure of the various diseases. It has 16 colored plates showing different parts of the human body. The chapter on Painless Midwifery is worth its weight in gold to women. The "Care of Children" is something every mother ought to read. It teaches the value of Sunshine, and Water as medicines. It contains valuable information for the married. This book cannot fail to please you. If you are looking for health by the safest and easiest means, do not delay getting it. It has eight hundred pages, is neatly bound in cloth, with gold letters, and will be sent by mail or express, prepaid to any address, for $2.75.
A PLEA FOR THE NEW WOMAN. May L. Collins. With large new half-tone portrait. 10c.
A TALE OF THE STRASSBURG GEESE. R. B. Kerr. Together with The Strike of the Strassburg Geese (C. W. Coolridge), A Traveler's Tale (R. B. Kerr), The Cat's Story (Emile Zola). 5c.
AUTONOMY, SELF-LAW. A fragmentary dissertation on the right to non-invasive self-hood. 5c.
A WEEK ON THE CONCORD AND MERRIMAC RIVERS. Henry D. Thoreau. 20c.
BIBLE TEMPERANCE. E. C. Walker. Proving that Liquor Drinking is Commended, Defended and Enjoined by the Bible, and giving close reference to the chapters and verses. 10c.
BORNING BETTER BABIES—Through regulating reproduction by controlling conception. E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D. 25c.
CAUSES OF HARD TIMES, and the Money Question. Albert Chavannes. 5c.
CHILDREN OF THE ITALIAN POOR. Paola Lombroso. 5c.
CITYLESS AND COUNTRYLESS WORLD. Henry Olerich. The author of this epoch-making book tells in a very charming way the story of the evolution of human society on the planet Mars, and in so doing outlines a practicable way out of the slaveries now endured by earth's inhabitants. Handsomely bound in red silk, with gold lettering on back and sides; 447 pages. Price, $1.

DARWINS, THE. (A novel.) Elmina D. Slenker. $1c.

DAWN OF CIVILIZATION, The; or, England in the Nineteenth Century. J. C. Spence. 176 pages. 25c.

DAWN-THOUGHT ON THE RECONCILIATION. By J. Wm. Lloyd. An inspired treatise that, with insight and solution, touches all the questions of life, love, soul and society. A prose-poem, simple enough for a child to enjoy, deep enough to make a philosopher think. The largest creed, the most generous theory, the gladdest gospel. A book of life. A religion of growth and the overlook—freedom and optimism. Read it. Printed in old style antique type, rubricated with portrait of the author. In three editions, de luxe, plain and paper bound. Prices, $1.25, $1.00 and 50c.

DIANA. A psycho-physiological essay on the sexual relations; for married men and women. 25c.

DIGGING FOR BED-ROCK. Camp-meeting talks and sketches by Moses Harman. 5c.

DIVORCE. A lecture by E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D., and extracts from noted authors. 25c.

DR. FOOTE'S SOCIAL SCIENCE SERIES OF DIME PAMPHLETS—Wedlock; Scientific Marriage; Heredity; A B C of Temperaments; Powell and his Critics; Physiological Marriage; Physical Improvement of Humanity; Causes of Disease, Insanity, and Premature Death; A Step Backward. Any of the above books sent by mail on receipt of price.

DYNAMIC THEORY OF LIFE AND MIND. An attempt to show that all organic beings are both constructed and operated by the dynamic agencies of their respective environments. By James B. Alexander. Over 400 illustrations, 87 chapters, 1,067 pages and a 2-column index of 11 pages. Cloth, $2.75.

EAST TENNESSEE SKETCHES. A and Cecile Chavannes. 25c.

ECONOMICS OF ANARCHY. A Study of the Industrial Type. Dyer D. Lum. 15c.

EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT. John P. Altgeld, ex-Governor of Illinois. 5c.

EVOLUTION AND REVOLUTION. Elisee Reclus. 5c.

FALSE CLAIMS OF THE CHURCH. John E. Remsburg. Analyzing and exploding the claims made by churchmen that the Christian religion has promoted morality, learning, temperance, science, freedom, and showing how she has opposed progress. Paper, 10c.

FREE LOVE; or, A Philosophical Demonstration of the Non-Exclusive Nature of Connubial Love. Austin Kent. Reduced to 15c.

FREE PRESS. Arguments in support of demurrer to the indictment of M. Harman, E. C. Walker and Geo. Harman, under the Comstock law. G. C. Siemens and David Overmyer. 10c.

GOD AND THE STATE. Bakounine. 25c.

GOVERNMENT ANALYZED. A remarkable work by a remarkable man, Col. John R. Kelso, the history of whose life reads more like romance than reality. This book is the last of a series—Deity Analyzed, Bible Analyzed, Universe Analyzed. By the author's death this work was left unfinished, but was completed by his wife, Etta Dunbar Kelso. 319 pages; cloth. Price reduced from $1.50 to $1.

HELEN HARLOW'S VOW. Lois Waisbrooker. 25c.

HILDA'S HOME. Rosa Graul. "An o'er true tale" of woman's wrongs and of one woman's struggles and final triumphs in her attempt to secure justice for herself and for her sisters. 426 pages. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

HUMAN RIGHTS. J. Madison Hook. 5c.

IMPORTANCE OF HONEST MONEY. A simple, scientific, invariable standard of price. James Adleman. 320 pages. Paper, 50c.

IN BRIGHTER CLIMES; or, Life in Socioland. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

IN HELL AND THE WAY OUT. A plan of Social Democracy outlined. Henry E. Allen. 10c.

INSTITUTIONAL MARRIAGE. From the viewpoint of an exiled Mormon. M. Harman. 5c.

JOHN'S WAY. A domestic radical story. Elmina D. Slenker. 25c.

KAREZZA. Ethics of Marriage. A bold, brave book, teaching ideal marriage, rights of the unborn child, a designed and controlled maternity. Sample pages free. $1.

LIBERTY IN LITERATURE. Testimonial to Walt Whitman. "Let us put wreaths on the brows of the living." An address delivered in Philadelphia, Oct. 31, 1890, with portrait of Whitman. Containing also Col. Ingersoll's address at the funeral of Walt Whitman, Mar. 30, 1892. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

LIBERTY. Political, Religious, Social, and Moral. A. F. Tindall. 5c.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS. Elmina D. Slenker. Boards, 60c.

LIZZIE MELTON. A story of a self-reliant girl. By Albert Chavannes. With portrait of author. 25c.

MAGNETATION, and Its Relation to Health and Character. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

MARRIAGE. An address by Dr. Juliet H. Severance. 5c.

MARRIAGE AND MORALITY. Lillian Harman. 5c.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN. Winwood Reade. This is a very interestingly pictured synopsis of universal history, showing what the race has undergone—its martyrdom—in its rise to its present plane. It shows how war and religion have been oppressive factors in man's struggle for liberty; and the last chapter, of some 150 pages, describes his intellectual struggle from the animal period of the earth to the present, adding an outline of what the author conceives would be a religion of reason and love. Winwood Reade's reputation as a writer of fine English, of deep study and careful reasoning, needs no word of praise. Cloth, $1.

MEN, WOMEN AND CHANCE. William Platt. Containing two tales: The Ascent to the Heights, and Blind Men and Seeing. Well printed on heavy paper and artistically bound in cloth. Gilt top, rough edges. 75c.

MEN, WOMEN, AND GODS. Helen H. Gardener. With preface by Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Contents: Introduction by Col. Ingersoll. Men, Women, and Gods. Vicarious Atonement. Historical Facts and Theological Fictions. Appendix. Address to the Clergy and Others. Letter to Cleveland Congress of Freethinkers. The only authorized and correct edition. Large 12mo, heavy-toned paper. Portrait. This volume is by far the best writing this famous author ever did. It is very fine. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.

MISSING LINK IN MODERN SPIRITUALISM, THE. A Leah (Fox) Underhill. With portraits of the Fox Sisters and others. 478 pages. Cloth. Reduced to $1.

MORIBUND SOCIETY AND ANARCHY. Jean Grave. Cloth, 60c; paper, 25c.

MOTHERHOOD IN FREEDOM. M. Harman. 5c.

MUTUAL BANKING. A simple plan to abolish interest on money. William B. Greene. 10c.

OUR WORSHIP OF PRIMITIVE SOCIAL GUESSES. E. C. Walker. Contents: Love and Law; The Moloch of the Monogamic Meal; The Continuity of Race-Life, and Tyrannic Food and Sex Palliatives a Criticism; When Men and Women Are and When They Are Not Variations; The New Woman: What is she? What will she be? The State Shifting Behind Its Own Mistakes; Bishop Potter's Opinion of Divorce; Love: Its Attraction and Expression: Is She an Honest Girl? Lloyd, Platt, and the Pitiful Facts; Social Radicals and Parentage; Anthropology and Monogamy; Love and Trust Versus Fear; Reflections upon Reading William Platt's "Women, Love, and Life." 15c.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND SEXUAL WRONGS. Oswald Dawson. 25c.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY. Prof. A. L. Rawson. Together with The Incoherence of Transition (E. C. Walker), Motherhood in Freedom (Moses Harman), The Greatest Sin (an allegory, R. B. Kerr), and Jealousy, the Foe of Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

RELIGION AND RATIONALISM. The relation of each to human liberty. The religionist, fancying that he has the whole truth, is logically opposed to investigation, and he appeals to physical force to arrest the discovery of new truths. What Rationalism is, and how many believe themselves Freethinkers who are only unbelieving or disgruntled religionists. The necessity for separate organizations and a division of labor among reformers. The Secular Union. Important facts and arguments in a compact form. E. C. Walker. 5c.

RIGHTS OF WOMEN AND THE SEXUAL RELATIONS. Karl Heinzen. A new edition, together with the startling letters of "Louise Mayer" on Men and Women, and a report of the Convention of German Women at Frauenstadt. A book of 256 pages, handsomely printed on good paper. It is more than twice the size of the original edition of "Rights of Women" alone and yet is sold at a lower price. Heinzen's great book is destined to become a classic and is sure to open the eyes of those who think women have their rights already. Its price is so low that every reader of this advertisement can afford to buy it, and no better book can be found to interest those who heretofore have given little or no thought to the necessity for the emancipation of women from ownership by men. Cloth, $1.

RIGHTS OF MAN. Thomas Paine. Answer to Burke's attack upon the French revolution. A political treatise of great general value, as advocating liberty and democracy. Contains the fundamental principles of true republicanism. Cloth, 50c; paper, 25c.

RUBAIYAT (Quatrains) OF OMAR KHAYYAM. Edward FitzGerald's interpretation, with original introduction, special cover, latest version. Paper, 10c.

RULED BY THE TOMB. A discussion of free thought and free love. Alfred Northcote. 10c.

SCIENCE IN STORY; or, Sammy Tubbs, the Boy Doctor, and Sponsie, the Troublesome Monkey. For young folks. Dr. E. B. Foote. Five volumes in "red line," presentation edition. $5. Five volumes, plainer binding, $2.50; all in one volume, $2.

SEXUAL PHYSIOLOGY FOR THE YOUNG. Being the fifth volume of "Science in Story." 250 pages; cloth bound; illustrated. 50c.

SONGS OF THE UNBLIND CUPID. J. Wm. Lloyd. Edition de luxe. Verses printed from Kelmscott type upon deckle edged hand made paper of cerulean tint. Initial letters, ornaments and borders are in red; initial letter and sketch upon the opening page are hand painted in water colors. Covers brown, with choice of silver or gold lettering. Very handsome gift book. 25c.

TALKS ON NATURE. Important information for both sexes. Dr. J. H. Greer. 192 pages. Reduced from 50 to 25c.

THE ABOLITION OF MARRIAGE. John Beverly Robinson. Together with Isabel's Intention (Marietta), Reminiscences of Berlin Heights (A. Warren), and The Sexes and Love in Freedom (Oscar Rotter). 25c.

THE BAR SINISTER AND LICIT LOVE, including the first biennial proceedings of the Legitimation League, and a full account of the Lanchester case, with full-page half-tone pictures of Edith Lanchester, and Lillian Harman. Handsomely bound in green and gold covers. 207 pages. 25c.

THE BRITISH BARBARIANS. Grant Allen, the greatest of the Hill-Top pioneers. Dedicated "to all who have heart enough, brain enough, and soul enough to understand it." Handsomely bound in cloth. 281 pages. $1.

THE WOMAN WHO DID. Grant Allen. A powerful story of a refined, educated and high-spirited woman who dared to defy the tyranny of church and state and ignore the institution of marriage. Handsomely bound in cloth. $1.

THE NEW HEDONISM. Grant Allen. The opening paragraph says: "The old ascetism said: 'Be virtuous and you will be happy.' The new hedonism says: 'Be happy and you will be virtuous.'" In another place the writer says: "In proportion as men have freed themselves from mediæval superstitions have they begun to perceive that the unclean and impure things are celibacy and asceticism; that the pure and beautiful and ennobling thing is the fit and worthy exercise of the reproductive function." Paper covers; 32 large pages; twelve copies, 50c. Single copy, 5c.

THE CHICAGO MARTYRS. The famous speeches of the eight condemned anarchists in Judge Gary's Court, and Altgeld's reasons for pardoning Fielden, Neebe and Schwab. 25c.

THE COMING WOMAN. Lillie D. White. 5c.

THE EVOLUTION OF MODESTY. Jonathan Mayo Crane. A consideration of the origin of clothes and the reasons why people wear clothing. Here are a few questions it answers: What is modesty? What is the cause of it? What is the use of it? What is the cause of the feeling of shame? Is nudity immodest? What is the cause of the notion that it is shameful to expose some parts of the body? Why do not all peoples agree as to what parts of the body should be concealed? 5c.

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE; or, The Threefold Power of Sex. Lois Waisbrooker. 50c.

THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER; or, The Price of Virtue. Rachel Campbell. Together with Legal Wifehood (Lucinda B. Chandler), Life's Gifts (Olive Schreiner), and Marriage—What It Was and Is; Will the Coming Woman Marry? 25c.

THE SANCTITY OF MARRIAGE. As viewed from a moral and sanitary standpoint. A solemn protest against the present demoralizing management of that institution, its effects upon offspring and its influence upon education. By Dr. Robert A. Greer. A valuable "opening wedge" in missionary work. Price reduced from 25c to 10c.

THE REVIVAL OF PURITANISM. E. C. Walker. 10c.

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDREN. R. B. Kerr. Together with What Are Women Here For? (E. B. Foote, Jr., M. D.), The New Martyrdom (Lillian Harman), and The Wife. From the French of Guy de Maupassant. 25c.

THE UNWOMANLY WOMAN. Lizzie M. Holmes. Together with That Great Fraud, Yclept Society (Moses Hull), Virgin Soil (George Egerton), and Normal Sexual Action (Ernest Winne). 25c.

THE WORM TURNS. Revolutionary Poems. Voltairine de Cleyre. 10c.

THOMAS JEFFERSON. His Political, Social and Religious Philosophy. Gen. M. M. Trumbull. 5c.

THOMAS PAINE. The Good and Evil of His Life and Writings. George Lippard. 10c.

TOKOLOGY. A book for every woman. By Alice B. Stockham, M. D. Illustrated. Tokology teaches possible painless pregnancy and parturition, giving full, plain directions for the care of a woman before and after confinement. The ailments of pregnancy can be prevented as well as the pains and dangers of childbirth avoided and women need not go down to death giving birth to children. English, German or Swedish. $1.25.

WHAT IS PROPERTY? An Inquiry into the Principle of Right and of Government. P. J. Proudhon. Translated by B. R. Tucker. 500 pages. Cloth. (Slightly shelf-worn.) Reduced to $1.

TRAVELS IN FAITH. By Capt. Robert C. Adams. His mental experience from superstition to rationalism. Cloth, 75c; paper, 25c.

VINDICATION OF THOMAS PAINE. Col. R. G. Ingersoll. Dealing with all the slanders brought against the name and fame of Paine. A little pamphlet which every admirer of Thomas Paine should have by him for reference. Paper, 15c.

VITAL FORCE. Magnetic Exchange and Magnetation. Albert Chavannes. 25c.

WHY THE UNDERTONE? An open letter to Judge Gary. Sarah E. Ames. 10c.

WHEN IS FREEDOM FREE OR EQUALITY EQUAL in the Social Evil or in Marriage? Orr W. Lee. 10c.

WHEN LOVE IS LIBERTY AND NATURE LAW. John Badcock, Jr. 10c.

WOMAN, CHURCH, AND STATE. Matilda Joslyn Gage. This is Mrs. Gage's last and crowning work. Every woman ought to read it. Every liberal woman and man will want it. A burning protest against the tremendous wrong done woman by the church, which controlled the state. It ought to be widely read for the good it will do. Cloth, $1.50; paper, 75c.

WHAT THE YOUNG NEED TO KNOW: a Primer of Sexual Rationalism. Edwin C. Walker. "Let us cease to be ashamed of what makes us men, of what makes us women, of what gives us the kisses of lovers and the encircling arms of babes." Paper covers; 43 large pages. 10c.

WHAT IS RELIGION? Ingersoll's last public address, delivered at the meeting of the Free Religious Association in Boston on June 5, 1899. To which is appended the poem, "Declaration of the Free," the last verse written by Shelley. 5c.

WOMAN IN THE PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE. Woman was the first human being that tasted bondage. Woman was a slave before the slave existed. The basis of all oppression is economic dependence on the oppressor. This has been the condition of woman in the past and is so still. She is now a slave of the slave. This work is August Bebel's masterpiece. 8vo, 179 pages. 25c.

Address M. Harman, 500 Fulton street, Chicago, Ill.

THE LIGHT-BEARER.

THIRD SERIES, VOL. VI., No. 3. CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, JAN. 30, E. M. 302. [C. E. 1902.] WHOLE No. 902

COME OUT IN THE OPEN.

Come out in the open! Stand forth in the light!
Look facts in the face!
To hug one's illusions, take refuge in flight,
Crouch low in the shadow and cover the sight,
Are little men's ways.

Come out in the open! Stand forth in the light!
And fear not to look!
What seemed so mysterious during the night
Will shed all its terrors when plain to the sight,
Like print in a book.

Come out in the open! Stand forth in the light!
Dispute not with facts!
Exchange faith for knowledge and fancy for sight.
Make this thy religion, "What seems to me right Shall order my acts."

Come out in the open! Stand forth in the light!
View all undismayed!
Dread palsies the soul; superstition is blight;
But knowledge guides mortals to live life aright,
And die unafraid.

—Miles Menander Dawson.

What Is Anarchism?

Anarchism is the doctrine that government should be abolished. Everybody agrees to this, and, as everybody thinks he knows what government is, everybody thinks he knows what Anarchism is. Yet very few people can define government in such away that they would not take back their definitions after being asked a few questions.

Anarchism is a theory of political science, and is opposed to government in the political sense. Government, in the political sense, is a human power which assumes and exercises a general control over the actions of all persons within certain recognized limits of territory or of race, enforcing this control by violence whenever necessary. The "government" of a club, a church, or any other voluntary organization is not a political government, because it does not attempt to compel the obedience of all persons within any limit, but simply directs the actions of such as are willing to be directed; hence it is not opposed to Anarchistic principles.

What Anarchists regard as the essential and objectionable principle of government is the use of force to prevent a man from doing as he pleases. They (like most other people) would like to see a millennial period in which no force should be used against any man. But they (like most other people) recognize that that cannot be had at present—that some people will be violent, and others must decide whether to meet violence with violence. If a bully tries to duck me in the pond,—an act essentially governmental, though lacking the public organization of government as generally recognized,—and I violently resist him and thwart his will, is my action parallel to his?

Some Anarchists, such as Tolstoi, think it is, and would renounce the use of violence even for defence. But the great majority of Anarchists discriminate between government or crime (two names for the same thing) and defence. To use or threaten violence against any one who had been peaceable is government,—that is, crime; but violence against a criminal, to repress his criminal use of violence, is a different thing. Anarchists commonly regard gross fraud as equivalent to violence in justifying violent reprisal.

Of course the business-like way of using violence, or its threat, to repress violence is by social organization, with the ordinary machinery of police, courts, and jails. Many Anarchists approve of this machinery, desiring only that it be confined to defensive service; and it is obvious that in an Anarchistic society those who wanted such service could not be prevented from combining and maintaining a police establishment, since any use of force to prevent them must, from its users' standpoint, be tyrannically governmental.

Thus the triumph of Anarchism would not prevent the continuance of police and jails, and such continuance is to be expected. But this would not be government, since it would not be able to collect any tax except by threatening to withdraw its services from non-payers, nor to enforce any law against those who let others alone. It could not even prevent the establishment of a rival police service in the same place. But government is not government unless it monopolizes its business within its boundaries.

The question arises whether violence against property is in the same category with violence against persons. Here is the chief split among those who call themselves Anarchists, one party holding that property in the material products of labor is a corollary of personal liberty and should be defended as such, while the other holds that all property is an absurd institution, whose defence is an outrage on personal liberty. Logically, each party holds that the others are not true Anarchists. This is written by a defender of property.

Is law-breaking Anarchistic? There are two kinds of law-breakers,—Anarchists and tyrants. An Anarchist is one who is unwilling to be subject to the will of others, and is willing to allow others the same liberty. A tyrant is one who breaks laws himself at will, but wants others kept in subjection; for instance, Napoleon, Rockefeller, or any striking workman who tries to maintain his strike by violence against "scabs." Tyrants should not be called Anarchists, even if the New York "World" does talk about "Anarchy directed by a usurping despot."

The public is interested in the relation of Anarchism to violence. While it is clear, from the above discussion, that violence against peaceable people is contrary to the whole doctrine of Anarchism, and that, when such is practised by a professed Anarchist, it shows that he does not know what Anarchism is, it is also clear that there is nothing contrary to Anarchistic principle in the use of violence against those who themselves are using governmental force to repress liberty. But neither is such violence commanded by Anarchistic principle, for no Anarchist holds himself bound to meet force by force, unless he finds some use in it. The defenders of property hold that, where there is any tolerable amount of free speech, it is brutish, useless, and altogether condemnable for a small party to attack the established authority with bloodshed. The Anarchist-Communists grade all the way from this position to the advocacy of the most reckless violence.

The Anarchistic policy of the present is to diffuse our doctrines, live our own lives and do our own business without regard to the decrees of government as far as possible, and encourage others to do the same. The policy of the future must be determined by the circumstances of the future.—Stephen T. Byington.

The First Revolt.

"Oh, how I love Elena!" cried Darya Vasilievna.

"She is impossible," returned Boris Alexandrovitch.

"Ah, I do not think so! I could do as she did," and Darya looked across at Boris wistfully. "I wish I could know her."

"Well, you are not going to know her, or to do as she did; and that is a comfort. Dushenka, toss old Turgenieff aside and give me a kiss. You look so pretty in your new red gown. When we are married——"

"Ah, yes when we are married," sighed Darya, gazing through the window, her eyes resting on the far-away horizon.

Darya was eighteen, and her father, rich Vasilt Bakunin, had betrothed her on her last birthday to Boris Alexandrovitch Mezhkoff. Neighbors congratulated Bakunin on this match, for the young man was well-to-do, his own master, good looking, and popular. The girl had readily accepted him, and her trousseau was already half completed. She felt herself in luck to find a desirable husband so early. On her nineteenth birthday she would be married, and go away from the rambling old country-house where she had been born, to reign in the beautiful cottage that Boris was building on his estate eighteen versts away. Then would the field be clear for Tania, the younger sister, and how Darya would advise the child when her turn came, and how she would help with the wedding clothes!

Darya Vasilievna was small and plump, and her eighteen summers had been passed in happiness—all except the sad time when her mother sickened and died. Darya had wished to die herself then. To follow in that mother's footsteps grew to be her dearest wish, and she asked no happier fortune than to be the same industrious housekeeper and cheerful wife. Darya looked forward to married life with placid fatalism, and Boris Alexandrovitch was the open door through which she was to attain the fulfilment of her dreams of domesticity.

Once in every seven days Boris rode over in his smart droshky to see his betrothed. Together they laid plans for the future, talking a great deal about the new cottage, or walking hand in hand around the farm, where Darya pointed out the fruits of her own labor, and boasted gleefully of her achievements.

And the lover tenderly smoothed the braids that crowned the head of his little Dolinka, and swore that he was the most fortunate man in all that district.

Why should not the girl be perfectly happy? It frightened her to hear herself asking this question one day, for it meant that certain forebodings, restlessly twisting and turning down in the deepest recesses of her heart, had suddenly taken shape, definite, though as yet very tiny.

There were certain subjects of deep interest to Darya that she had found she could not talk about to Boris Alexandrovitch. One concerned the muzhiks that tilled her father's land, those lazy, good-natured fellows, whose improvidence tore her heart. And she loved and cared for two babui, sisters, who had grown too old to work, carrying soups and cakes to them during the winters, and what is more, giving them her own bright sympathy. And then, too, she loved the little children. But al peasants were alike to Boris Alexandrovitch, and they were al "animals."

"My beloved Dolinka," he would cry impatiently, when the girl threw herself into plans for their comfort, "let these animals go their own way. You will have quite enough to attend to when you have me."

Darya was perplexed and grieved. But Boris was very kind and did not permit these little clashes to disturb his serenity.

"I shall want one of our rooms fitted up as a study," she had said one day.

Boris stared at her.

"Yes, really," said Darya, with a catch in her breath as she realized that she must beg for it. "Because——because, Boris Alexandrovitch, I desire to be wise."

"Ho, ho," roared he, "what have you to do with books! Just keep your little noddle for my accounts."

Two tears started into Darya's eyes, in spite of an effort to laugh the matter off. Boris Alexandrovitch did not see them, for he was caressing her soft brown hands.

That evening she was startled to see the face that looked out of her mirror.

"What! Can it be that I am unhappy? Bah! I will be happy!"

But the eyes of Darya Vasilievna were no longer the clear, laughing eyes that had sparkled at Boris Alexandrovitch when Vasili Bakunin put her hand into her lover's.

Yet she went singing about the house as she had always done, and not even Tania guessed that anything had gone wrong.

Now this particular day of Boris' visit fell in a week that was cold and wet. So the walk a-field must be foregone. Darya had dressed herself with especial care, smiling to herself as she donned the red frock that she and Boris had bought, with much gaiety, at the great fair in the summer. Running into the warm, cozy sitting-room, she dropped into one of the window-seats with a sigh of satisfaction, and opened the book she held in her hand. It was "On the Eve," and she had read it through during intervals of leisure snatched through the week. Now she was turning back to the scenes that had most deeply roused her; her cheeks flushed, her breast heaving. So it was that Boris found her, and kissing the damp curls clinging to her forehead, he vowed she was the prettiest and the dearest girl he ever saw.

"Listen to this, Boris Alexandrovitch," cried she. "Sit down at once, and just listen! I have so wanted to read this book to you.—Now, isn't that grand?" as she finished a scene of three pages.

"Partly,—yes," said her betrothed. He really did not know what to say. He was not used to things people wrote. "But those people, that—that Elena—they are ridiculous. Now see here, Darya Bakunina, I think you are in bad company there."

"But I love Elena," cried Darya.

It was the same old story, and this time the girl actually sighed. She felt an iron band tightening around her heart.

"Dushenka, little bird," said Boris, "leave that old scribblebody. The story has upset you. Indeed, I shall have no books in my house, when we are married. Your head must be kept clear for my cooking, for my servants. Come, Dolinka, sing me one of your dear little songs."

His words rasped painfully. Darya was stung beyond control. She turned toward Boris Alexandrovitch, rising slowly from the window-seat, her eyes glittering, her cheeks now ashen white.

"Your house? Your servants? Ah, and your children, I suppose!"

Never before had Darya looked tall, threatening. The abrupt change struck Boris aghast.

"What are you talking about?" he stammered.

But the girl could speak no more.

It was frightful. Doubts of the future entered his soul. Anger at Darya filled his heart.

"See what a fool you are getting to be," he said, in a low, harsh tone. "I do not wish for a spoiled woman. Get your crazy notions out of your head—the Lord only knows what led you to them—or you may lose me!"

Darya turned to go, sobbing. Her soft round body quivered with pent-up emotion. He saw only the tears that hung on her lashes. He could be generous now. He caught at her hand, and kissed the tips of her rosy fingers. But Darya passed on, sobbing.

"What was the matter?" asked old Vasili, who sat in the opposite corner.

Boris Alexandrovitch, barely answering, "Nothing," strode angrily out of the room.—Helen Tufts, in "Free Society."

Limitations to Freedom in Love.

A good friend in Ohio writes us a letter of criticism and inquiry. He is willing his letter should appear in print, but declines to publish his name, because—as he has no personal prestige—he thinks it would do no good. He suggests that I use his initials only. His letter in part is as follows:

